Rogers Starts Peace Tour

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — U.S. State Secretary William P. Rogers launches his Middle East trip today buoyed by what he believes to be widespread approval of his effort to promote peace between Israel and the Arabs.

Rogers flies to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia's summer capital, this afternoon for a day of talks with King Faisal and other Saudi Arabian leaders. He leaves for Jordan Sunday and then goes to Lebanon, Egypt and Israel.

Without exception, U.S. officials said, the foreign leaders with whom Rogers has talked since leaving Washington Monday have responded favorably to his ideas—including trying to narrow the gap between Egyptian and Israeli terms for reopening the Suez canal.

Rogers does not rate this as official foreign support for his venture, and he believes others share his assessment that no breakthrough on knotty issues will come soon.

Foreign Secretary Sir Alec-Douglas-Home of Britain joined Friday in Rogers's view that a Suez reopening deal would be a step forward in untangling the general impasse over a full-fledged peace settlement.

"A limited advance of this sort could be worthwhile in this situation which has become so dangerously deadlocked," he said.

U.S. officials reported that Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin called at the state department in Washington and raised no point against Rogers's trip. They said Moscow has been taking an open attitude about reactivating the Suez passageway, closed since the 1967 war.

Farm Union Protests Disparities in Prices

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Bay of Quinte district farmers today focused attention on the disparity in farm prices — the high cost of production as compared with low sales prices.

They did it by giving away milk, eggs and vegetables at three locations — two in Belleville and one in Picton.

The project was sponsored by the National Farmers' Union and was supported by Hastings and Prince Edward county farm union members.

To emphasize the small spread between costs of production and prices received for produce sold, the farmers donated gifts of farm produce to urban consumers. One ton of milk, approximately 240 dozen eggs and quantities of vegetables were handed out to willing "customers."

Farm families manned the outlets, distributed pamphlets, carried placards and chatted with the consumers.

Farm union locals from Hastings County, and from Amelasburg were in Belleville. Local 333 members were in Picton taking part in the same farm protest movement.

Brezhnev Pledges Support for Arabs

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Leonid Brezhnev, Communist party chief, pledged today continuing Soviet support for the Arabs and the people of Indochina in his May Day speech in Red Square.

"We proclaim anew from Red Square that our party and people will continue to support the just cause of heroic peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, the peoples of the Arab countries and all fighters against aggression and suppression, for the freedom of the people," he said.

Troops Await Peace March

WASHINGTON (AP) — With hundreds of military policemen standing ready just across the Potomac, anti-war demonstrators are drumming up support for militant activities they hope will disrupt the United States government.

The defence department announced early today that as a precaution it transferred "a few hundred personnel of the 519th Military Police Battalion from Fort Meade, Md., to Fort Myer, Va."

That puts the troops within two miles of the four main Potomac River bridges over which thousands of federal employees commute from suburban Virginia into the District of Columbia every working day.

The demonstrators—in their most ambitious campaign in the capital since the Vietnam war began—have made those bridges and other key traffic intersections in the Washington area targets for disruption Monday and Tuesday.

By tying up traffic at those 21 points, the protesters contend, they can bring the federal city to a halt.

But the federal city is ready, officials say.

Deputy Attorney-General Richard Kleindienst called threats to shut down the government "just a lot of hot air." He said 7,300 police and National Guard troops will be on hand to prevent traffic snups. The Pentagon added six helicopters to the force, some choppers to ferry high officials to work, others big enough to move cars from the highways.

The demonstrators launched a series of rock concerts to boost crowds for the Monday and Tuesday snups.

Many of the youthful campers streamed into the city overnight to join an estimated 1,300 who had camped just west of the Tidal Basin below the Lincoln Memorial.

Senators Ask Secret Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A diplomatic report said to criticize United States silence on the alleged massacre of Bengalis in East Pakistan is the object of a new tug of war between the state department and a Senate committee.

The foreign relations committee has been unsuccessful in efforts to obtain from the state department that document and others written by U.S. officials in the war-torn country. The committee failed Friday in convince a state department spokesman to deliver the report orally.

The next move was made by Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem. Ark.), the committee chairman.

Fulbright said the committee has learned much more about what is happening in East Pakistan from letters—such as the one he released from Jon E. Rhode of Barrington, R.I.—than from the state department.

The letter, which was sent Fulbright by Rhode's mother, describes several instances of mass killings of civilians by Pakistan army troops and adds: "It is clear that the law of the jungle prevails in East Pakistan where the mass killing of unarmed civilians, the systematic elimination of the intelligentsia and the annihilation of the Hindu population is in progress."

Giveaway Features Farm Protest

Consecon area farmer Larnal Wannamaker pours milk for city customers in giveaway project today drawing public attention to low farm prices. Milk, eggs and vegetables were given away at three locations — two in Belleville and one at Picton. Placards indicated "farmer" price for produce as compared with retail figure and emphasized the importance of the farmer to continued urban prosperity.

Roadblock to Safety?

PC Says Cheap Autos Offered to Legislators

OTTAWA (CP) — A former Conservative MP said Friday the drive for improved auto safety has been weakened by what he described as a widespread practice in which some Canadian law-makers have been able to buy slightly-used cars at "ridiculously low prices."

Howard Grafftey, Conservative party spokesman on consumer protection, told a news conference that such deals between elected officials and representatives of the Big Three auto makers are among many roadblocks to the consumer movement.

He said that as an MP in 1953 such a deal was "clearly suggested" to him by Ron W. Todgham, president of Chrysler (Canada) Ltd. What he construed as a thinly-veiled offer, he said, was made over dinner at Ottawa's exclusive Rideau Club in July, 1953, "just when I was breaking in on the safety debate."

Following the first reports of Mr. Grafftey's comments, Mr. Todgham replied from Windsor, Ont. that the company never offered to sell a car to him.

Mr. Todgham said used company cars are sold at a discount to dealers and are then offered to the public without discrimination "against legislators or even ex-legislators."

A spokesman for Ford Motor Co. of Canada said his company does not sell cars at special prices to any elected officials in Canada and added there is no auto industry lobby opposing safety legislation.

At his news conference, however, Mr. Grafftey said that while conducting a policy probe on consumer protection the last year, he came across at least a couple of instances in which Canadian legislators had accepted such deals.

He refused to name anyone involved in the deals but insisted the practice is sufficiently widespread at all levels of government "to give the auto industry enough clout to stop effective legislation on safety and quality."

The cheap cars, he said, are one device employed by lobbyists for the auto industry to influence government. Lobbying is an essential part of the system, he agreed, but those who represent industry and other special interests should be required to register as such with an appropriate public official.

Queen's Health Greatly Improved

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's health is greatly improved, Buckingham Palace announced Friday while a spokesman added there never has been any doubts the Queen's tour of British Columbia will take place as scheduled.

After the 45-year-old monarch had been examined by a doctor at Windsor Castle, the palace said her cough is much better and that her sinus infection has almost cleared up.

This was the first official word that the Queen was suffering from a sinus infection. Previous statements said she was suffering from a prolonged cold and nasty cough.

The spokesman said she will remain at Windor during the weekend. She will be joined by Prince Philip and Princess Anne and all three will depart from Windsor Monday morning for the 10-day 4,500-mile tour of British Columbia.

The Royal Family will fly from Heathrow direct to Vancouver aboard an Air Canada jet.

Canada May Send Pakistan Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — C. J. Small, Canadian high commissioner to Pakistan, has been asked to report to the government on the possibility of moving large aid shipments into East Pakistan if requested by the Pakistani government, Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday.

Mr. Trudeau was answering a Commons question by Andre Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood), who wanted to know whether relief had been discussed with the International Red Cross.

Mr. Trudeau said Mr. Small is in East Pakistan, and has been examining the need for food and other relief supplies.

East Pakistan has been torn by civil war for more than a month, as its Bengali people have tried to break with West Pakistan, from which it is separated by India.

Hospital Board Ponders Mental Health Dilemma

The board of governors of Belleville General Hospital is considering a recommendation from psychiatrist Dr. E. B. Conn that the mental health clinic be phased out.

The reason is lack of staff and the prospect of better services eventually through the hospital's in-patient and day service departments.

The recommendation was accepted some time ago, but concern expressed since led to its being discussed again at Friday's monthly meeting of the board.

Dr. Conn told the board that necessary extra staff could not be attracted to the hospital with only a mental health clinic service. Most patients now have insurance and can engage the doctor of their choice without having to go through a clinic. And most important, psychiatrists prefer to practise privately.

Dr. Conn said he is dedicated to developing psychiatric services in the hospital, together with psychological services and social services. By introducing day care the number of patients can be tripled he said.

"Some people will be unhappy for a while if the mental health clinic is phased out," said the psychiatrist. "But we will eventually create services that will attract additional staff and groups that fan out to areas where care is needed."

Among these areas is the family and children's services, he indicated. Nine cases have been referred from the services to the clinic in the last six months he added.

Another psychologist is needed at the hospital and more psychologists and social workers, but the salaries paid by Ontario Hospital Services Commission are not competitive with those paid by family and children's services and the board of education.

The hospital board set up a committee to meet with representatives of United Community Services and Family and Children's Services to discuss the fate of the mental health clinic.

Dog Chases Deer Into Car's Path

PICTON (Staff) — A Picton cab driver escaped injury Thursday when his taxi struck and killed a deer as it fled from a dog on the Cherry Valley Road.

The deer darted from the east side of County Road 10 near Markland's Hill into the path of a car driven by Cleave Russell, Mary Street, Picton.

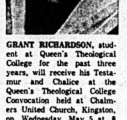
The Department of Lands and Forests, Napanee, was contacted and conservation officers removed the deer carcass.

The public danger of animals running at large was stressed at this month's meeting of county council by Thomas Hughes, game manager of the Ontario Humane Society, Toronto. Mr. Hughes outlined an animal control plan for Prince Edward and warned against road accidents that can be caused by dogs permitted to roam the streets.



Council agreed to future examination of Mr. Hughes' proposal.

Fire Destroys Automobile

MADOC — A car owned by Miss Elsie Barnard of Ivanhoe was completely destroyed by fire on early Wednesday morning.

Miss Barnard, who is employed at the Belleville General Hospital, called the Madoc Fire department when the front end of the car suddenly burst into flames as she stopped at a garage to determine the cause of a strong odor of gasoline inside the car when she started driving to work. Before she had a chance to get to a telephone however, the flames had spread down the motor, the front tires were burned off and the dash, matting and front seat were rapidly being disintegrated.

Upon the arrival of the firemen a few minutes later, it was damaged beyond repair. The cause of the fire is still undetermined although it is suspected that there was a leaking fuel pump which sprayed gasoline over the motor.

Separate School Brief Prepared

"Why not completion of the Catholic Public School System?" is the question which will be put before Catholic ratepayers of Hastings and Prince Edward counties in a series of regional meetings during the next two months.

The meetings will be sponsored by the committee for equality in education established in March by the local unit of the Ontario Catholic English Teachers' Association with contributions by the province wide campaign.

Since then the committee of seven teachers — Mrs. Vincent Muldoon, Mrs. Frank Enright, Miss Marilyn Shannon, Sister Jeanne Collignon, Pat Scollard, Ray Bourgoin and Sister Anna Moran — through five preparatory seminars have completed plans to inform and organize all who support the cause of completion of Catholic public school education from kindergarten to Grade 13.

In support of the cause, the Ontario Catholic Students' Federation has pledged to devote its energies to fighting for the issue in the next provincial election.

The local committee has incorporated into its membership a group of eight students and two adult laymen.

Within the next two weeks the committee will have transferred its research findings on the background of Catholic education and the present state and treatment of separate schools of Ontario

Biking Changes Women

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pat Funnell knows her product thoroughly, says feminine and self more motorcycles than most men.

Not content to run the office of husband Phillip's cycle shop, she has a working knowledge of 23 different models of bikes.

In the first month of this year she sold 25 of the company's machines. The company considered it some kind of record.

"I know just about as much about the machines as any man does," she says. "But of course, my husband is the expert."

Mrs. Funnell first came into the shop to keep the books. But her husband was busy practising for competition so she moved out to the front of the store.

She has ridden motorcycles herself for two years and takes part in small trials. She says motorcycling is really a man's sport but if women can ride bikes and stay feminine, they should go ahead.

"I think biking changes a lot of women," she says. "They go from nice and sweet to mannish."

A former hairdresser and police breeder, she still has two of her retired champion poodles as constant companions.

"I bring them down to the shop every day—they're part of the staff. And when I'm riding I put them in saddle bags."

She also wears makeup and washes certain her hair is clean before she goes riding. She picks her clothes to show she is a woman, and one of her helmets is decorated with rose decals.

"You don't see many men with flowers on their helmets," she says.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY

During the past week a person couldn't help but notice that an increased number of university undergraduates had returned to our community. Presumably, they have returned to their homes seeking summer jobs. By the end of the coming week all of our post secondary students, who haven't been able to obtain a summer work elsewhere, will have returned to seek work.

It is an opportune time, therefore to advise these young people that a considerable amount of thought and effort has been made on their behalf by a number of responsible persons, including the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre, towards assisting them to obtain work.

The Belleville Canada Manpower Centre will again, as in the past two years, operate a separate centre for students. It will be staffed by students who will work on behalf of students. Through the co-operation of the City of Belleville and its recreation department, office space has been made available for this centre at 270 Pinnacle Street, Belleville. The telephone number is 962-8681, extension 46. This centre for students will open at 1:00 p.m., Monday, May 3, thereafter it will be open daily, Monday to Friday inclusive, from 8:30 in the morning until 5 o'clock each afternoon.

All students interested in student summer jobs are invited to utilize the services available as one of the means of obtaining summer work.

Anyone having a labor requirement of a casual or temporary nature for a student is invited to either visit the student centre at 270 Pinnacle Street, Belleville or telephone 962-8681 extension 46.

Festival Opens Next Monday

The Stirling Festival of Sacred Praise will be held May 3 to 6 in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling.

Local Chamber Supports Uniform Store Hours

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce next week in Toronto will support a resolution from the Ottawa Board of Trade for the Ontario government to enact legislation calling for uniform store hours across the province.

The Ottawa resolution will be before the annual meeting of the Ontario chamber of commerce to be held Monday and Tuesday at the Inn On The Park.

Hugh Murray, director of the Ontario chamber, and Ald. J. B. Corke, past-president of the local chamber, will be Belleville representatives at the meeting.

Chamber president Frank Murray said the Belleville Downtown Association, in a recent survey of its members, was strongly in favor of uniform store hours across the province.

The downtown association sent out 200 questionnaires, with 64 of the 82 returned being in favor of uniform hours.

Mr. Murray said the Chamber of Commerce endorsed the downtown association feeling.

The local chamber president said the province of Quebec has passed legislation for uniform store hours in that province.

J. C. Houston, manager of the Belleville chamber, said the feeling of the local organization was that uniform store hours across the province were needed if the small merchants were to survive.

Vacation in Homes for Aged Is Endorsed by Thomas Wells

Ontario's homes for the aged may soon become vacation centres for senior citizens living in the community with friends and relatives.

Social and family services minister Thomas L. Wells has expressed the hope homes for the aged will institute the vacation care program. Under the program, elderly citizens may be admitted to homes for a period of one week to one month, benefiting from all the regular programs offered at the homes.

Said Mr. Wells: "Vacation care can benefit both the elderly and their families. In introducing the elderly person to a home for the aged, he becomes better acquainted with the programs and services in a home; he can find friends of his own age and he is well looked after. Vacation care makes it possible for a family who is taking care of an older person to have a holiday on which they could not take an older relative."

No immediate plans are under way here to introduce the vacation care program at Hastings Manor, but administrators are receptive to the idea.

County clerk - administrator Carl Bateman said this morning "we welcome the opportunity, provided we have the accommodation".

Officials at the Manor said they had received only two requests for vacation care in 20 years of operation.

The same people who are admissible to a home for the aged are eligible for admission to the vacation care program. Residents or their families are expected to pay the regular daily rate of the home wherever possible. In cases where the resident or family does not have financial resources, no applicant will be excluded from the program for this reason.

The Niagara Region undertook a pilot project in vacation care in 1970 in four homes. Nineteen elderly men and women took advantage of the program, with 11 staying for two weeks and eight for one month.

"The test program worked so effectively," said Mr. Wells, "that we are now encouraging all provincially supported homes for the aged to institute similar plans. The Niagara Regional homes staff has indicated that the program did not cause any undue administrative difficulties. There are always some empty beds temporarily available in the homes due to the hospitalization of residents and therefore this service could be possible even in a high occupancy region."

No Charges Laid Yet For Studded Tires

The provincial edict banning the use of studded tires on city streets and Ontario highways after midnight Friday had not resulted in any charges in the Belleville area by midmorning today according to city and provincial police.

So far there has been no need to take action," stated a provincial police spokesman at Belleville headquarters.

It was the same at the city police department but officers at both said they had orders to be strict against offenders.

Although officers hadn't found it necessary to lay any charges up to mid-morning today, police said there were still a few motorists driving their studded tires as late as Friday afternoon.

The Ontario government decided on the ban on studded tires when tests showed that they are chewing up the highways and rapidly erasing traffic lines painted on the streets.

They can be taken to a garage to have the studs removed — or the motorist can do the job himself in about an hour with the aid of a screwdriver and a pair of pliers.

Sewage Disposal Plant To Become Beauty Spot

The Belleville Parks Board and the Ontario Water Resources Commission are getting their heads together to dress up the waterfront area around the sewage treatment plant.

Involved are three specific areas about the plant — the front entrance area on St. Paul Street, the property immidiately to the west of the plant, already in use for recreational purposes, and adjoining property to the east.

Parks superintendent Lloyd Sper told the parks board last night that if the sewage plant is not to be extended toward the bay, there would be no objection to continuing the bayshore drive across OWRC property where rock fill is now being placed at the bay shore.

Proposed development, including immediate parking and road requirements, were shown in sketch plans displayed at the meeting.

Short-hop Air Service Studied by Province

Quintair Ltd. of Belleville hasn't been approached by the provincial department of transport which has assigned hypothetical air routes to small, private airlines based in Ontario asking if they could make a go of operating these routes where no service now exists.

Charles MacNaughton, minister of highways and transport, told the legislature Thursday that when the replies of the private airlines were analyzed the province plans a research demonstration in September.

The transportation official said later that the study would assess the influence air services would have on regional development and on the possible movement of industry away from central manufacturing areas.

If the study showed small airlines or amalgamations of airlines could make money on the routes, the carriers might want to start the service, Mr. MacNaughton said.

The minister said Air Canada would pull out of regional air carrier service by Sept. 1 as it was switching to find Ontario - based regional carriers to replace the flights.

Air Canada's Dash-7 flights now operate with Toronto as the hub to Windsor, London, Thunder Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, Sudbury and Timmins.

Parks Board Adds Assets

The Belleville parks board of management last year had capital assets of $465,000 and since that time additional land purchases have boosted the total to over the half-million dollar mark.

The parks board annual audit showed the board last year had land worth $242,000; buildings worth $121,000; equipment with a value of $67,000 with $34,000 worth of work in progress.

Also during the past few months, the parks board has acquired additional parkland on the west side of Moira River south of Highway 401 which it will develop as a park and recreation area.

The audit of last year's operations showed the parks board had expenditures of $228,000 including $112,000 in wages and ended the year with a surplus of $14,322.

Goldie Honored

TRENTON (Staff) — Two directors of the John Howard Society, Capt. J. C. Bertrand and W. E. Goldie, represented the Trenton area at the society's annual meeting in Toronto Wednesday.

During the proceedings, in which Solicitor General Jean Pierre Goyer was guest speaker, a life membership in the organization was presented to James Goldie of Peterborough as recognition for many years of humanitarian service in this region. Mr. Goldie is the father of Mrs. Barry Kowalchuk of Brighton.

Robert Howell, executive member of Quintair, which has applied to the federal air transport commission for a licence to operate a charter air service out of Belleville, says his firm hasn't been contacted by the Ontario department.

The local firm, headed by Len Steele as president, has authority from the air transport commission, to go ahead.

"We expect to be operational in the near future," said Mr. Howell.

To commence the proposed charter service, Quintair Ltd. has purchased a five-place, twin-engine Beech Baron, which will be flown by professional pilots with long experience in the air.

Initially, only charter service will be offered.

But if regular airline service, say to Toronto or Montreal, is warranted, the local firm would be prepared to meet the demand.

"If the potential is there we would be the first to realize it," Mr. Howell said.

Public Was Warned

Some time ago we answered criticism by Senator Keith Davey that the Press had done "nothing beforehand to prepare Canadians for events of the magnitude of the FLQ." We quoted from past editorials which made clear reference to subversive activity in Quebec.

We are going to quote one more. It appeared in the issue of June 19, 1968 and noted "that Quebec, "with all its potential for change," as well as Canada and the western world at large, "remain a target for Marxist infiltration and even revolution."

The editorial continued: "The chances . . . of such change being brought about by revolution must not be discounted," and went on to refer to the bombs in installations some years previous and to reports of secret training camps for separatists in the Laurentians. We said that the Canadian public was totally unaware of the dangers and noted that it was not even an issue in the federal election then under way. There had been some sniping, we added, at Prime Minister Trudeau because of his past association — long since renounced — with left - wing elements in Canada but the overall Communist threat was never mentioned.

Then came this strangely prophetic observation: "Yet if the public knew what the RCMP and the Government itself know, other election issues would pale by comparison."

The editorial went on: "A remarkable document issued by the Canadian Council of Evangelical Protestant Churches throws considerable light on this matter. It says that the Canadian Communist Party and the Communist Party of Quebec intend to overthrow established order in this country by revolution.

"The result," say the council, "would be a brutal totalitarian dictatorship . . . shortened after that in Russia where an estimated 32,000,000 people have been murdered to bring about and maintain the regime there.

"A manifesto issued last December (the editorial adds) by the Quebec Communist Party calls for the establishment of a socialist state . . . Side by side with this it urges infiltration of Quebec farmers' unions, student groups and intellectuals, particularly university professors, engineers, doctors and writers. Even the Catholic Church is singled out and Time Magazine in its issue of March 10, 1967, noted that infiltration was under way even then."

A special effort, according to the church leaflet, would be made to make communications media (including press and television) more effective channels of Communist - line propaganda.

We see this working out today.

The leaflet quoted a conversation between Dr. D. Schwarz, an international - known lecturer on communism, and Nathan Levy, a former members of the American communist party who told him that eradication of the caitalist system was a prime objective, and with it liquidation of "about one - third" of the Canadian and U.S. populations. This, they said, would not be accomplished immediately "by bullet or bayonet." No, some will go by "the slower pathway of overwork and starvation. A new socialist state needs workers to build the new environment. Since there are not enough of these among the survivors, certain of the 'diseased' will be put to work until they die."

There then is a sampling of the kind of warnings issued long before the outbreak of the FLQ menace. That movement is now being contained, although first it meant the grief and suffering of last October, for the Cross and Laporte families. The overall Communist threat, however, remains. The Government at last is fully alerted, but its investigations must not end at the FLQ. As we have made clear, revolutionary theories are being propagated more widely than may be thought.

Seasonal Chat

There were showers, as befits the season, but this time last year, the Quinte area was also enjoying sun and temperatures in the seventies. This time around, however, aside from one or two mild and sunny days of late things have not been so pleasant. Still, the earth must have rain for nature to do its work, for the flowers and other bounty which are part of the wealth of this land.

The New Image

P.M. Working at Being Decent to the Opposition

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Could it be that so very soon bride Marie Josée deau has wrought such a personality change in Pierre?

Perhaps it might be that the Liberal party's image-makers — they can and often have worked magic — have been busy.

Or just possibly, maybe, it has dawned on him that it is easier work to go along with the Opposition in Parliament than to deliberately antagonize them.

Best guess, though, is that the dashing Pierre, who only two-and-a-half years ago seemed to reflect an I - could - not-care-less attitude to power, has become hooked on it.

Remember, too, that the next election is not much more, at most, than a year away — that seemingly so casual leader, who only a few months ago gave the impression of being ready the drop of a whim to call it a political day and jet off for fun-and-gamesville, now cares very deeply about his job even with all its responsibility, and the conclusion is inescapable.

He has made up his mind to stay, to hang onto power, already is campaigning for the next election, and knows that to improve his public image is to no less than take out political life insurance on surviving as Prime Minister."

From this distance, at this time, with this Opposition, it would seem he could have little to worry about.

But hard fact of the political matter is you do not get to be party leader and Prime Minister by being casual and even uncaring about it.

With Pierre Elliott Trudeau you only make it look that way.

Now things are changing.

And so is he.

He is emerging as the glass-clear, stainless steel hard pragmatist he was all along.

And he is hard at work — making it all seem so charmingly easy — being accommodating, even pleasant to the Opposition.

Fewer beck-of his-hand brush-offs.

Fewer you - stupid - oafs shrugs of resignation to what he so insultingly made clear he considered opposition thick headedness.

Fewer hammerings with leaden-heavy irony.

Now he appears to be making an effort to avoid getting Opposition backs up. And if a soft answer can be given instead of the hard reply, his responses have overtones of amiability.

Of course, the Opposition, having kept its guard up these last two years and more against his cutting sarcasm and stinging ridicule, are slow to take it for real.

And for real it may not be.

Except that Pierre Elliott Trudeau who has towered over every last MP in the House of Commons, has not been this kind of a giant because he is muscle-bound around the headbone.

You hear Liberals, smirking in their reassurance of the victory they are sure is coming next time you go to the polls, telling each o.h.er that the Prime Minister, realist that he is, well knows some of the class has gone.

It was becoming a bore more and more.

For ground and votes going astray these past 30 months or so must be recovered and recouped.

What, ground?

Whose votes?

Ground in Quebec where once-unanimous support for his tough War Measures Act reaction to terror smashed at least the lunatic fringe of the FLQ has been slowly eroded by disenchantment.

Votes of the civil libertarians who, while they are far as it is possible to get from being a majority, do make a lot of noise and command an inordinate portion of print in some publications and prime time on television, especially the CBC.

And there, votes from the unemployed, the marginal farmers, the poverty professionals, and the dedicated do-gooders whose causes range all the way from the guaranteed annual income at home to guaranteed foreign-aid living abroad.

Ground in some sections of English Canada — how many, who knows, but for sure the National Capital itself — where the Government is suspect of favoritism for French Canada.

And on ground like that, votes of unilingual Canadians — not just Anglo-Saxons or Wasps, but Germans, in fact, everyone but Francophones — who are in actual mortal fear of economic injustice as the penalty of not being facile in "the official languages," as they are called in the 250,000 job world of the federal Government.

So there is a lot of ground to be re-taken and votes re-won, and to do this the Prime Minister knows he must do things for these places and these people. He needs them for that. Opposition co-operation.

So why not be decent to the Tories and New Dems?

From Crysler's Farm to Vietnam

Discipline and the U.S. Fighting Man

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Vietnam has become a succession of horror stories, and which My Lai lately almost pales in comparison to the disclosure of narcotics use and addiction among U.S. troops and, now, the rising incidence of murder of their own junior officers in a deadly sort known as "fragging" from the fragmentation grenades used in the killings. But to suggest, as U.S. Senator Democratic Mike Mansfield has done, that Vietnam itself has produced this appalling record is the purest hogwash. . . as anyone who has had any contact with the U.S. armed forces can testify.

The U.S. fighting man — with the exception of elite units like the Green Berets and the Marines — has a world-wide reputation for being about as undisciplined a military man as ever hefted a rifle or flew an aircraft or fired a cannon. That lack of discipline can be traced onward from the Battle of Crysler's Farm, where a Canadian-British force outnumbered six or seven to one decisively defeated the Americans in pitched battle, to Vietnam itself, where Australian troops have been loath to fight alongside U.S. units, on the grounds that the Americans, by undisciplined chatter, smoking at night and general laxity consistently betrayed their positions to the enemy.

If the thought of 30,000 to 40,000 junkies returning to the U.S. is horrifying — and there are estimates that many American troops are using near-pure heroin in Vietnam, today — it is surely no more horrifying than the appalling record compiled by U.S. prisoners of war in Korea, a record which produced the rules of conduct which U.S. military authorities now preach to their forces.

A study of all Korean United Nations prisoners, the most comprehensive study ever undertaken anywhere, revealed that U.S. prisoners had suffered the heaviest losses proportionately after capture of any of the UN troops who were taken. Most of those U.S. casualties had been due not to North Korean ill-treatment of prisoners, but to the brutality of their own comrades, who died even with dysentery out of their POW huts to die in the cold, among other things, rather than help each of them, as other prisoners did for their sick and wounded.

Vagaries of Fashion

Dior Says Midi-Maxi Is Finished

Vancouver Sun

The House of Christian Dior, opening its fall-winter fashion show, says that "the midi-maxi is finished". This is quite a surrender by the Paris fashion decree who had so much to do with launching the midi and maxi as the answer to the mini skirt.

It seems to mean that not only the mini will be with us for a while, but the pant suit and the hot pants also.

What does this portend? A stock market boom? Victory for women's liberation? Or the death of fashion?

The psychologists may come up with the answer. The clothing business has to go along with the trends. One thing sure is that uncertainty prevails and the famous designers of Paris, and even of London and Rome, no longer can be sure of controlling events, or dress lengths. This, of course, was shown by the fate of the midi and maxi which, while they attained a certain popularity in Europe, were scornfully repudiated by the majority of North American women. Despite all the concurtemely poured on it by the dress experts, the midi remains in high favor and therefore in high style.

It is a reasonable speculation that the pant suit style was generated by the women's lib movement, though not directly.

It is a commonplace of fashion history that when women decry emancipation or feel it coming on, they usually adopt some article of male attire: hats, coats, waistcoats — or trousers. And there was Mrs. Bloomer.

As a matter of fact, history also records that the wearing of a "proletarian" attire by the rich and aristocratic is common during times of revolution or social unrest. Witness the French, Russian and Maoist revolutions. Today the badge is the blue denim.

We have a prophecy from Italian fashion designer Emilio Pucci that the thaw in Sino-American relations could make Los Angeles the leading world city and incidentally make shorts a permanent style for women.

The reasoning seems far-fetched even when Signor Pucci observes that Los Angeles will be the first warm-weather world "capital" since the days of ancient Babylon and Egypt. The warm weather will influence the perpetual wearing of hot pants.

Well, it's a theory — even though the wall-painting at Karnak don't feature hot pants. But suppose the theory went wrong and Shanghai, not Los Angeles showed up as the world capital Signor Pucci has in mind? Then it's less likely to be hot pants than pant suits of the variety sported by Mao Tsetung's disciples, male as well as female.

Somehow we fancy it will come out as the ladies will it, whether they're "emancipated" or not.

Wine Good For Health — Say Medics

Ottawa Journal

After a year-long study, a team of 30 American doctors has concluded that a little wine is good for health. The New York Times reports the doctors found that wine relieves social tension and aids the spirits, the heart, the appetite and digestion. They recommend it be served with hospital meals, 4½ ounces per meal.

It would no doubt be easier to swallow those wine pills. But would provincial medicare pay if billed for a bottle of the Stuff from France?

Home Oil Will Stay Canadian

Ottawa Journal

No harm if Joe Greene and the Government take some credit for keeping Home Oil Co. Ltd., a Canadian firm, Perhaps the Energy Minister's intervention did prevent a sale to a U.S. company; perhaps it did not. The main thing is that the Government will not be getting in the oil business. There was a sigh of relief some time saved from that fate than joy at the company staying under Canadian ownership.

The tedious little saga of Home Oil is the story of a Government without a policy on foreign ownership.

One of these days Revenue Minister Gray may bring in his report on the whole question. That may deprive Joe Greene of his role as Captain Canada. It may prevent other countries from acquiring businesses that clearly should stay in the private sector. We may also let Canadians and foreign companies know where they stand.

Church-State Confrontation Is Intensified in Paraguay

ASUNCION (AP) — A three-year confrontation between church and state is intensifying in Paraguay.

Recent incidents include the arrest of a Roman Catholic priest and an attack upon a bishop. Peasants have staged anti-government demonstrations in support of the church.

Msgr. Ismael Rolon, Archbishop of Asuncion, has announced the excommunication of more than 30 persons. The announcement named Sabastino Montanaro, the interior minister, and Gen. Francisco Britez. Asuncion's police chief.

"The names of the others will be listed as they are determined," it stated.

The list will include everyone who "ordered and permitted . . . executed and co-operated" in the Feb. 27 arrest of an Uruguayan priest, Rev. Uberfil Monzon, and the March 8 attack on an Uruguayan bishop, Msgr. Andres Rubio.

President Alfredo Stroessner has ruled Paraguay with an iron hand for 16 years and makes no secret of the fact that he personally decides government policies. Thus the 58-year-old president presumably sets strategy in the conflict with the church, the only major opposition to his government.

"The logical extension of the excommunication of Montanajo and Britez would be excommunication of the regime, or even breaking relations with the state," said a church spokesman.

This would be a departure from the church's traditional role of co-operation with the government. Until 1968 Stroessner and the Archbishop of Asuncion appeared frequently together in public. The government gives the church $100,000 in subsidy annually. The 600 country priests in this nation of peasant farmers are men of authority and respect in every village.

This is the second excommunication for Montanaro and Britez. The 11-member Council of Bishops acted against them in December, 1969, after police invaded a downtown church and beat nuns, priests and students demonstrating against the government.

Both Stroessner and the bishops backed away from that flareup, made compromises, and detainments unsuccessfully until late last year to negotiate their differences. Montaniaro wrote a letter to the archbishop asking forgiveness. His excommunication was lifted in time for him to participate in the wedding of his daughter.

A government announcement "repudiated" Archbishop Rolon's new excommunications. An editorial in the government newspaper Patria questioned the use of canon law on which the excommunications were based. Another declaration described them as "unconstitutional interference" with authorities' power to enforce civil laws.

Editorials, speeches and interviews picture the worldwide progressive movement in the Roman Catholic Church as anti-Christian: a theological deviation leading to violence, subversion and anarchy. Stroessner, the argument continues, is a religious Catholic who made Paraguay one of the few countries in the world without a crime problem, violence and social conflict.

"The price of peace is a strong government," Montanaro said in an interview, repeating a phrase heard frequently in government circles. "Peace is the greatest good a government can achieve. . . . We believe that we are Christians and that we haven't a problem with the church, but only with a few bishops who want to get into politics.

"We believe the church has no business in politics or in questions of security and defence of public order. . . . We are anti-Communist politicians. But I have had a priest tell me it is possible to be a leftist without being a Communist. It is not possible."

Archbishop Rolon asserted in an interview: "The government insists that we are politicians. This is not so. Until they get rid of this idea there will be no resolution to our conflict. . . .

"We are against injustices, but we are not against Stroessner. If he ends the injustices then we will applaud him.

"The government here sees the church's progressive movement as leftist all over Latin America. They see the church in this country with the same alarm as the Uruguayan government views the Tupamaro guerrillas. For this government, the church is Paraguay's Tupamaros."

That apparently was a factor in the arrest of Father Monzon, 40. He had been living and working in Paraguay only a month. The government said he was a "leftist priest" and had confessed connections with Uruguay's Tupamaros. He was held incommunicado until late March and a confession was made public in his name declaring that a Tupamaro-type movement would be unsuccessful in Paraguay.

The bishops, speaking unanimously as they always do in the conflict with the Stroessner government, denounced the arrest as a "kidnapping" and proclaimed Father Monzon innocent.

Msgr. Rubio, the auxiliary bishop of Montevideo, flew here March 11 to seek Father Monzon's release. He declared the priest had been tortured — a charge denied by the government, which promised to release him unharmed.

Professor Discovers 960 Toronto Churches

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. H. A. Gleason, a professor of linguistics at the University of Toronto, collects churches and religions the way some people collect stamps and coins.

Since he came here three years ago from Hartford, Conn., Dr. Gleason, 53, has discovered the location of almost every church in Metropolitan Toronto, how they are distributed and something about their background.

"It takes my mind off my regular work and besides it gives me great personal satisfaction," he said in an interview.

So far his total for the area stands at 960 churches, synagogues and other religious assemblies.

The groups that Dr. Gleason has turned up in his investigations include some fairly obscure ones.

Not many people have heard of the Bible Way Church of God in Christ' Jesus, the Apostolic Assembly or the Pillar and Ground of Truth sect.

The more-obscure faiths are the most difficult to research, not only because they are difficult to find because they are usually loosely organized and often temporary.

One of the conclusions he has drawn from his research is that there are fewer churches here per capita than in American cities—a fact he attributes to the smaller Negro population.

"Negroes tend to have more churches," he said.

Administrator of Hospital School Discusses Changes at Smiths Falls

Claude B. Halpin administrator of the Smiths Falls Hospital School was the guest speaker at the April meeting of the Belleville and district association for retarded children held at the school on John Street. Mr. Halpin spoke of the changes taking place at the institution and in Eastern Ontario in the care of the mentally retarded. He opened his address with the statement that the overcrowded Smiths Falls institution is going through drastic changes in organization, one of which is the migration of several hundred youth to the Prince Edward county project.

The present and total accommodation at Smiths Falls is 2,200 beds and it is the fourth largest such hospital of any type in Canada with a staff complement of 1,070. Many physical changes have taken place at the institution with an increase of about 14 per cent as well as an expenditure of $3 million for special equipment.

Mr. Halpin said the big institutional organization is beginning to disappear. Now the trend is towards smaller residential type living such as in Prince Edward County, Picton region. Up to now the Smiths Falls school has served all Eastern Ontario and covers 27 counties but now with the new decentralization program the retardates will be allocated closer to their homes.

Mr. Halpin went on to say that admittance must be done through the public health agencies across Ontario.

He also said that there is always a waiting list and at the moment stands at 150 persons. Visitors are welcome at any time, he added.

Mr. Halpin explained that a training concept for high school graduates has been tried. These students are first given a rigid testing to qualify for the mental retardation course and on graduation will start working for a salary of $5000.

The Picton residential concept will offer tremendous new areas for education and training of the mentally handicapped. Boys will not only learn the industrial arts and use power machinery but some will learn to cook and do industrial fabric and sewing jobs. The girls will also have cooking and sewing classes on a low level equal to the public schools as well as many industrialized programs. The education section will allow the residents to attain a level of grade 6 or 8 academically.

Mr. Halpin concluded by describing the excellent social and health services planned for Prince Edward Heights. Mr. Halpin was thanked by John Ross.

Earlier in the meeting it was reported by Mrs. D. Maddocks that good progress had been made in the program for the nursery handicapped child over the month, with 13 children enrolled. Alex Glover reported that the association now has 34 members on the roll.

A "show and tell" program was arranged by Mrs. Harry Thomson who was unable to attend, was responded to with many beautiful exhibits including crocheted table cloths, sweaters, dresses etc. It was a wonderful display of fancy work done during the winter months.

The meeting closed and lunch was served by Mrs. S. Ray, Mrs. Gerald Stratton and Mrs. William Lararick and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Variety Night Held in Frankford

The Frankford United Church hall was filled on Thursday evening when a variety night was held.

Mrs. Gail Mason was the commentator for the fashion show with Mrs. Lorraine Bauer and Mrs. Flora Purshaw as assistants. The models were Rev. John Weese and some members of the parish. A show-stoping ensemble was modelled by Rev. Weese.

Students of the church modelled clothes made by their mothers, grandmothers and other relatives. Some were made by the models themselves. Background music was played by Mrs. E. Burkitt.

Mrs. Joyce Warne was master of ceremonies at the concert which followed the fashion show. Mrs. E. Burkitt and Maribeth Burkitt rendered a musical selection. This was followed by an accordion duet by Jerry Cap and Brian Gearring. A skit was enacted by Janet Bauer, Douglas Warne and Bruce Hummel. A few songs from the musical Oklahoma were sung by Maribeth Rowe, accompanied by Mrs. Marie Keller.

A tableau was presented by Lori Maier, Lorraine Ellis, Brenda Bauer, Heather McColl and Francine Moran. A quintet led by Ruth Weese sang a number.

Cathy Woodcox directed a skit in which Janet Bauer, Sheila Marshal, Ursula Berger, Tracy Haire and Lois Hearne took part. This was followed by a song by the combined choirs of the primary and junior departments. The choir was led by Diane Moran.

A folk song and square dance directed by Mrs. Jean Woodcox and Mrs. Joyce Turner brought the evening to a close.

Mrs. Lorraine Bauer was the winner of the door prize. A vote of thanks was extended to Ted Warne, master of ceremonies, to Mrs. Hummel who assisted in scene changes and to Miss Zelda Halsall, Mrs. Marjorie Halsall and Mrs. Helen Blair for contributing to the success of the show.

YOUR ANTIQUES
by Jack Jamieson

Early Sheffield Plate One-fifth Cost of Sterling

One of the most misunderstood and misused descriptive terms in silver is the label "Sheffield Plate". The plate portion has nothing to do with electroplating and refers to a general early term meaning manufactured silver. Even Sheffield does not define Sheffield Plate which was made in larger quantities in Birmingham.

True Sheffield plating was becoming an important industry, so much so that the Guild of Silversmiths attempted to suppress it particularly in London. However silversmiths in Sheffield and Birmingham were allowed a Guild in 1773. By the mid 1780s they were strong enough to issue permits to manufacture Sheffield fused plate.

Very few platers registered at the Sheffield Assay Office. The first registration was in 1784 and the last was just before electroplating killed the industry.

Fifty-two platers registered from Sheffield, 80 from Birmingham and one from London. Only those who registered were allowed to mark their wares. Most pieces of Sheffield plate are unmarked, particularly those of the period before 1784. Even after this period marks are rare.

The prevalence of Sheffield fused plate today may be credited to the skills of the early platers, which have never been equalled, and the wearing qualities of the plate. And early plate was one-fifth the cost of sterling.

The teapot shown is Sheffield fused plate. The stand is electroplate. Both are antiques and neither can be distinguished from sterling. The teapot lid is lined with silver because it showed. The interior is tinned. There are no marks on it; characteristic of Sheffield fused plate. Sterling and electroplate are almost invariably marked.

The value of true Sheffield fused plate is almost that of sterling and if the copper is it can be replated inexpensively. It is not being marked. "Sheffield Reproduction" and represents an excellent investment for the future.

Two Subjects Discussed At Women's Study Guild

An evening of discussion of two diverse subjects was made the women's Study Guild April meeting a lively and interesting one with 27 present at the home of Mrs. A. E. Orr. President Mrs. Buchanan was in the chair.

Mrs. A. Wells, based the devotional thoughts on "things that matter for peace"; Tuesday's conflicts and wars were compared to those in Jesus' time with the Peace of which God spoke being the same peace needed today.

Mrs. N. Meldrum introduced the first topic by up-dating the members on a program given in 1968 on the "Middle East". There are many aspects to the Middle East crisis today and one finds it difficult to glean the true picture from the news media. With "oil" as the central issue, it has evolved into a battlefield for the world's major powers.

Information from the Arab Information Centre was circulated and it pointed out the disastrous situation not only for the Arabs but for the entire world. Some of the pamphlets bore a peace logo combining the Jewish, Christian and Islamic symbols. It was pointed out that the Arabs don't oppose Judaism but rather Zionism. With the use of clippings from current newspapers, various viewpoints were discussed. The banned book "The Unholy Land" by Dr. Forrest presents a side of the question seldom realized in the west.

Mrs. E. Fleming dealt with a discussion of domestic interest. It was based on an article by a bachelor, Edward Garrigan, "A housewife should be paid for raising a child — even if it isn't her own." Women who devote their time to raising a family are the most neglected, reviled and exploited segment of the Canadian labor force. He maintains they should be paid, as are teachers and foster parents. While, it was felt this might enable some mothers to remain in the home, it also might have the adverse effect and encourage larger families. This provoked much discussion.

U.C.W. Meetings

THOMASBURG UCW

The April meeting of the Thomasburg Unit of the United Church Women took place in the church hall on Wednesday evening April 14 with 48 women present.

The meeting was opened by the unit leader Mrs. Ruth Seekings. The worship service was under the direction of Mrs. Marion Morton assisted by Mrs. Edna Grills and Mrs. Dora Morton. She chose as the theme "The man who drove the nails".

An amusing skit entitled "An Exercise in Futility" was presented by Mrs. Mildred Preston, Mrs. Monica Maines, Mrs. Barbara Saraas, Mrs. Ilona Fraser and Mrs. Dora Morton.

Mrs. Isobel Martin showed slides on a recent trip to Europe. These interesting pictures were taken in Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, England and Scotland.

Mrs. Martin was thanked by Mrs. Mildred Preston.

Being a social evening no business was discussed.

Mrs. Maude Harrison of Plainfield, on behalf of everyone thanked Thomasburg Unit for an enjoyable evening. Mrs. Dora Morton, president of Thomasburg UCW replied.

The lunch committee convened by Mrs. Mary Jane Rollins, Mrs. Monica Maines and Mrs. Mildred Preston served lunch and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

ST. ANDREW'S UCW

MARMORA — Mrs. Arthur Caverly was in charge of the Easter program for the St. Andrew's UCW meeting held recently in the church hall.

Mrs. H. Vanstone and Mrs. G. Meiklejohn assisted in devotions. Mrs. J. Glover gave a reading entitled "Were You There?" followed by a most enjoyable address on the song of the same title, effectively presented by a group of young girls.

A duet by Mrs. R. Sanderson and Mrs. E. Wise was much enjoyed, by those present.

"Growth" was the topic of the message given by Mrs. J. E. Peters, who outlined some of the many ways in which people grow from small children to responsible Christian adults and stressed that growth can and should go on forever.

The business meeting chaired by Mrs. D. Vilneff, was held prior to the program.

MAJORCA MEMO

Often for breakfast, a kind of bun, "special to Majorca" was served. Really delicious! We learn it is a miracle of flour, lard, sugar and water, known as ensaimada. The fact is, that if attempted to make it away from the island, though the ingredients are brought from Majorca — (even the water) — and a Majorcan to knead and season it — "the miracle" doesn't come off. It just does not taste the same.

After breakfast, the visitor may take one of the various organized sightseeing tours of this 60 x 50 mile island, there being a different one scheduled for each day of the week, each lasting all day. We took three tours — each destination to a different fairyland of stalagmite and stalactite formations was next revealed to us, where a path led to a large underground lake. As lights dimmed, musicians in three illuminated boats played Chopin's music as they silently glided by. The heart vaulted as his "language of infinity" faded away in the darkness. An unforgettable moment.

A visiting well-known European pianist said while we were in Palma: "I am always pleased to come to this island which Chopin once knew," adding that had Chopin never come to Majorca, "then what music he would have written — perhaps he was destined to come here. I always think so."

All too soon we bade farewell to Palma, looking beautiful and golden beside the blue sparkling sea on a sunny morning. But the crush of passengers coming and going at the airport was incredible. Upon arriving in London, our bus found progress impossible due to the entire city coming from a Chelsea - Leeds football match, and my husband exclaimed, in fun:

"Why, anyone would think they are struggling to reach Palma's airport!"

On a Monday we went to the Puerto de Soller on the west coast which is rimmed with really high mountains, providing some of the most scenic views on this part of the Mediterranean. Though the village was only 20 miles from Palma, the mountainous road is so filled with hair-pin turns (our guide told us there were 30, which, when piled by a huge bus, is as scary as possible) that it takes the entire day. Among the villages of breathtaking beauty is Valldemosa with its imposing monastery where Chopin composed his preludes and George Sand, the French novelist stayed. The area now is beloved by artists who live in tiny scattered villages, one being Robert Graves, the famous English poet whose home we passed in Deya.

A Wednesday tour took us to the northern-most tip of the island to Puerto de Pollensa, 30 miles from Palma, on a good road through the tree-covered island's farmland and plain of which Alexandra of England once said:

This northerly tip was the delight of the early Romans, where a length of white sand beach guarded by stately poinsiddias that rose straight up from the sea beckons. Taken by boat to the neighboring pine-covered Formentor one has a glimpse of the proudly expensive Formentor Hotel — enjoyed by the late Winston Churchill.

Last was a Thursday tour — a 48-mile drive to the east coast's Porto Cristo. En route our bus made a safari through a reserve for African animals that are acclimatized here before being sent to zoos throughout the world. An elephant thrust his trunk through our open bus window; an ostrich stared straight at us through another. All animals are tame and friendly.

NEW YORK (AP) — Four co-eds sat in briefly one evening in a "male - only" section of the Yale Club lobby, then left peacefully. "We are here to make the point that we are Yale undergraduates and we should have the same right here as others," said Ekin Orfanoz, class of '71.

Successful Living

Youth Counselling Is Still in Demand

By DORIS CLARK

Youth still needs counselling most — and lacks the facilities.

One young man told me about his concern over his mother, who had moved in with a daughter and son-in-law with whom she clashed. This young man was at school at the time, and his worry over her practically paralyzed his thought processes.

His solution was to quit college, get a job and have his mother move in with him. Now he says what he needed then was someone to talk to: a counsellor to help him sort it all out. He is sorry for the schooling he missed.

Dear Doris: Even in grade nine some of the girls and boys said I would be a knock-out when I really grew up. Later I did become what my brother and a few other boys and women (married) consider a beautiful, desirable woman that any man would be proud to be seen with.

I landed into the wrong crowd and did a few things I regret. After six months of that I realized my life wasn't changing my ways.

So far I've made it. Any boys I went out with who were after sex, I told them off and slapped their faces.

Now I'm lonely. For four months I've just sat in on the weekend and watched TV. I've been friendly with guys in the cafes (whom I know) and friendly with those who whistle and wave to me. Yet I go out with no one and they (boys) just seem to want to be friendly.

I live on a farm and all my classmates are married. I don't act as though I'm pretty — I just act friendly. Am I doing — Something Wrong?

Dear Something Wrong: Either the boys know you have turned good or the good ones think you are still a tramp. It takes a while to live down a reputation for wildness.

If you only go out when your Dad goes to town, this is not enough. What do the other young people do where you are? Get into some community activity which takes you out regularly.

* * *

Confidential to Two-Timing: Your college boy friend sounds worth waiting for — yet I agree that neither of you should be sitting at home every evening. So does he.

But is it fair for you to go out with another boy so often? For one thing, you are taking up a lot of his time when you are not really interested; and for another, your first boy friend probably thinks you date just on special occasions.

Play the game straight with Number One Boy Friend.

Confidential to Not My Fault: The girl speaks first. But you two have had a disagreement. A lot depends on whether or not you want to apologize and make up.

But what have you to apologize for? Your date was clearly at fault. Any approaches ought to come from him. This doesn't mean you can't say "Hi" when you run into him at your friend's house.

* * *

Kitchen Tested Recipes

French Stick with Glazed Crust

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Would you please print in your column the recipe for hard-crusted French sticks? I find all of your recipes dependable. — Mrs. B. A. B.

ANSWER: Thank you. That is one of my major goals — dependability.

FRENCH BREAD

(2 French Sticks with glazed hard crust)

1¼ cups water, a little warmer than lukewarm
1 pkge. granular yeast
1 tbsp. sugar
1½ tsps. salt
1 tbsp. soft shortening or margarine
3¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour (about)
Corn Meal

Measure warm water into large mixing bowl. Sprinkle yeast over and stir. Add sugar, salt and shortening or margarine and let stand 5 min. Stir in enough flour (3 cups) to make a soft dough. Knead on lightly floured board (using remaining ¼ cup flour) until dough is smooth and elastic (about 8-10 min. or 200 kneads). Scrape down bowl, grease it and return dough to rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk (about 2 hrs.) or, preferably, in cold place overnight. Punch down and kneed 100 times. Let rise again until doubled (about 1½ hrs.). Turn out on floured board; divide in half. Roll each half into an oblong 8 x 10". Beginning at wide side, roll each up tightly towards you. Seal by pinching edges together. With a hand on each end, roll gently back and forth until each loaf is about 16"; taper ends. Place on greased baking sheet sprinkled with corn meal. Brush with Corn Starch Glaze (see below). Let place in temperature, or 80 deg. Fahr.) free from draft for 3 hrs. or until very light — there should be little bubbles under the skin of the dough. Brush gently again with Corn Castinonly make diagonal cuts with very sharp knife ¼" deep in dough at 2" intervals. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 10 min. Remove from oven, brush again with glaze; return to oven and bake 30 min. longer, or until done and golden brown and crusty.

CORN STARCH GLAZE:

Blend 1½ tsps. corn starch with 1½ tsps. cold water. Stir into ¾ cup boiling water and cook until clear, stirring constantly. Cool slightly before using.

Ann Landers

Elderly Mother's Call Source of Irritation

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am having trouble with my mother and I need your help. Please don't suggest that I have a talk with a school counselor. I am 35 years old. My mother is 86.

I have a good job in a department store. I leave for work at 8:40 a.m. and I'm home at 6:10 p.m. A kind neighbor stays with Mother while I'm away. The problem is that Mother telephones me several times during the day and my supervisor finds these calls very annoying. Yesterday we were awfully busy and Mother called four times. After the fourth call I had the feeling I might lose my job.

ANN LANDERS

How can I make an 86-year-old woman (who is not rational all the time) understand that she should not call me at work so much? Please help. — CHAMBERSBURG, PENNA.

DEAR C.P.: Tell your mother a new rule has been set: Employees are not to receive calls during working hours. Explain that you will call her every day during your lunch hour. Then do so. Inform your boss of the plan. Tell her if your mother calls she should be told you are busy and cannot come to the phone.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What are the responsibilities of an ex-husband and the girl who broke up a marriage? To put it bluntly — what do they owe the wife and children whose home life they tore up as a result of their fooling around?

When I agreed to give my husband a divorce so he could marry the girl, they both said I was very generous, very understanding, and very sweet about everything.

For three months, the support cheques came on time and everything was hunky dory. But things suddenly changed. I have not received a dime in the last two months and my ex-husband does not answer his phone.

I called the girl last night. She said they had had an argument and she hasn't seen him in five weeks. When I asked what she was going to do about me and and the children she said, "I have no obligation to you."

What do you say, Ann Landers? In my book, she has a moral and legal responsibility. Yes or no? — DUMPED AND BITTER.

DEAR D and B: I doubt she has any legal responsibility. As for the moral aspects of the situation, you already know what her morals are like. Don't look to the girl for anything but see a lawyer about your husband's delinquency.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Mr. and Mrs. Daughter Melinda and her husband were married for eight years and dying to be parents. Nothing happened, so they decided to adopt.

After being interview by three adoption agencies and waiting 18 months, they drove up home and went the "gray route." They paid a lawyer $2,000 to get a baby for them.

Well, Ann, they got the cutest baby in this whole world, — a little girl who looked so much like Melinda I couldn't believe my eyes. They were in seventh heaven! Three months ago, on the baby's first birthday, they received a phone call from a lawyer. The baby's natural mother wants the child back. The lawyer said she was mentally ill when she signed the release papers, etc. To make a long story short, the mother took my daughter and her husband to court and won. We are all heartsick. Is this fair? Is it decent? Is it human? What can be done? — A.L.P.

DEAR A.L.P.: It's neither fair, decent, nor human, but the court usually sides with the natural mother. For this reason I advise people to stay away from gray markets. Deal only through adoption agencies. They do not let the mother know who has her child and such tragedies as you described do not occur.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We hear a great deal about the bad manners of the elderly folks past 70? A relative recently decided to make her home with us. She is a semi-invalid, but mentally alert, sharp-eyed with a keen sense of humor.

We help her in and out of the shower. We serve her meals on a tray when she prefers not to come to the table. We drive her wherever she wishes to go. In short, we wait on her hand and foot. We do it because we want to, not so she will thank us, but it would be nice if she'd say "Thank you" — just once.

When she offers our grandchildren a cookie or a piece of candy she always snaps, "Now what do you say?" Interesting how she insists of being thanked for every little thing, but she never thanks anyone. What do you suggest we say or do? — HAD IT IN SEATTLE.

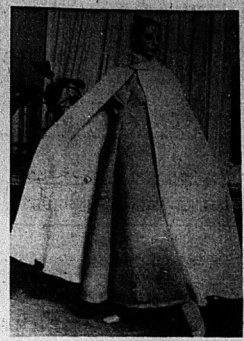
DEAR HAD: Say and do nothing. It's awfully hard to train a person past 70. Some elderly folks figure they are entitled to service and respect merely because they have lived a long time — and they are. Elderly people often develop aches and pains and it's a struggle for them to keep going. Naturally they aren't always in a jolly mood — in fact at times they are sour and crotchety.

So continue to be helpful and kind and don't expect to be thanked. Do it because you want to.

Dinner Party Held to Open Golf Season

The women's section of the Bay of Quinte Golf and Country Club officially opened its 1971 season on Wednesday April 28 with a dinner party, social hour, and announcement of a new schedule of social activities, tournaments, and trophy competitions.

A special welcome was extended to all the 80 present and new members. After the dinner served by Mr. and Mrs. Don Douglas, steward and stewardess of the club, the members held their general meeting.



Mrs. Ena Corke, president, introduced the new executive and they in turn outlined the proposed program to an enthusiastic audience.

The past president Mrs. Betty O'Brien presented the CLGA awards for 1970 — the business girls award to Mrs. Betty Ingram; runner - up, Mrs. Judy Hull; women's division, Mrs. Ena Ryan, and runners - up, Mrs. Audrene Moorman and Mrs. Helen Philip.

The following is the new executive for the coming season: president, Mrs. Ena Corke; past - president, Mrs. Betty O'Brien; first vice, Mrs. Anne Acton; second vice, Miss Elizabeth Black; secretary, Mrs. Judy Hull; treasurer, Mrs. Audrene Moorman; house, Mrs. Mildred Curtis; games, Mrs. Betty Ingram; co-captain, Mrs. Carol Wilson and business girls' rep., Mrs. Lillian Taylor.

MADOC — The spring weather brought out a crowd to the recent meeting of the Madoc Senior Citizens Club held in Trinity United Church basement in that village.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Broadworth, vice-president Mrs. Fox chaired the meeting, speaking a word of welcome to all and reading a short poem for the opening session. Roll call was answered by 34 members and there were two visitors in attendance. Secretary, Miss Raney, read the minutes of the last meeting and then read a letter from a member, Mrs. Naylor, who is presently holidaying in Florida.

Special guest, Mr. Warbrick, showed a film on Florida, with comments given by his wife, Mrs. Warbrick. This was very entertaining for the members.

A lively sing-song, conducted by Miss Adams, with Mrs. Reid at the piano, opened the next portion of the meeting. Mrs. Moorcroft, program convener, had prepared this entertainment. Guest soloist was Mrs Brunson, who sang two numbers with accordian accompaniment.

Mrs. Moorcroft conducted a song-titles contest, which was won by Mrs. Holmes. Mr. Brunson and Mrs. Moorcroft rendered a duet.

Lunch was served and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Mrs Fox thanked everyone who helped to make the meeting so enjoyable, giving special thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Warbrick and to Mrs. Brunson.

Green Re-vamps Golf Aims to Share Lead at New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Golf rookie Hubert Green has a new ambition, and he may be in position to fulfill it.

"When I first came out on the tour," the 26-year-old Green said, "I just hoped to be able to make a living the first year, maybe get into the top 60." So now I'd like to win a tournament or two."

Green vaulted into a share of the first-place lead in the $125,000 Greater New Orleans open golf tournament Friday when he cut three strokes off par with a 68.

That put him at 137 and a tie with champion, Miller Barber, who had a 67, the day's best round. Both he and Green played before a high wind blew up on the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course.

The wind helped send scores much higher.

Green and Barber held a one-stroke margin over Kermit Zarley and Jacky Cupit, tied at 138. Zarley had a 71 and Cupit, one of the first-round leaders, took a 73.

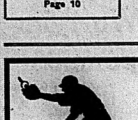
Lou Graham, tied for the first-round lead at 65, went 10 strokes higher. He still was tied for the lead until he went to the final hole, but a 5 there sent him over par to drop into a big group at 140, three strokes off the pace.

Barber, winner of one title and more than $90,000 this season, hit his irons close as he recorded six birdies. Three came on putts of five feet or less, one was a two-putt on a par five and the other two came with two holes one-over-par on on 13-15 foot putts.

Green had a pair of birdies with two holes one-over par on the front nine, then made his round with an 18-foot birdie putt on the second hole and an eagle three on the 13th, running in a 15-foot putt after a three-wood shot.

It took a score of par 144 or better to make the cut for the final rounds.

Among those making the cut were Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver with a 69 Friday for a 141 total and Ben Kern of Toronto with a 71 for 143.



Dropping out were George Knudson of Toronto with a 72 for 146 and Wil Homenuk of Winnipeg with a 75 and a 149 total.

Unorthodox Moves Pay Off

NL Strategy Takes Some Strange Twists

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baseball strategy took a couple of strange twists in National League action Friday.

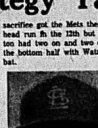
Pittsburgh Pirates beat San Diego Padres 5-3 with left-handed batting Richie Hebner delivering three hits including the game-winner, giving him six hits in the last two games, all against lefties.

New York Mets trimmed Houston Astros 4-3 in 12 innings with Ken Boswell making a dazzling game-ending catch after shading pull-hitter Bob Watson, a right-handed swinger, to hit to right field instead of left.

St. Louis Cardinals ended a four-game losing streak with a 4-2 decision over Montreal Expos as Joe Torre delivered in the winning runs with a seventh-inning triple. No pinch hitter stirred even though until that hit, Cardenal was 0-for-17.

Elsewhere in the NL Friday, Philadelphia Phillies shut out Chicago Cubs 1-0, Atlanta Braves took Los Angeles Dodgers 7-2 and San Francisco Giants whipped Cincinnati Reds 7-3.

Hebner, freed of the platoon system he played under last year, celebrated with three more hits against the Padres, including the seventh-inning single that snapped a 3-3 tie. Earlier he had singled and doubled in Pirate rallies that wiped out a 3-0 Padre lead built on Ollie Brown's home run.



"There's nothing like playing every day," said the happy Hebner.

Hebner's winning hit brought home Dave Cash, who had singled with one out in the seventh and moved up on a passed ball.

The Mets built a 3-0 lead against Houston but the Astros came back to tie on Joe Morgan's eighth inning homer.

Singles by Bud Harrelson and Boswell sandwiched around a sacrifice got the Mets the go-ahead run in the 12th but Houston had two on and two out in the bottom half with Watson at bat.

LOU BROCK
Three-Hit Night

"I knew I should play him to pull," said second baseman Boswell, "but he already had three hits, all to the right side. So I shaded him to right a bit. I kept saying to myself, 'I shouldn't be over this far.'"

But it paid off for Boswell when Watson lifted a soft liner to the right side and the Met second baseman made a one-hand catch to end the game.

Lou Brock had three hits for the Cardinals but it was Cardenal's big triple that moved St. Louis past Montreal. He connected with two out in the seventh after Brock had singled and Joe Torre walked.

Atlanta exploded for six runs in the fifth inning to whack Los Angeles. Sonny Jackson had a single and a double in the big rally as 11 Braves went to bat.

Bobby Bonds drove in three runs with a homer and a single and San Francisco cashe from behind to defeat Cincinnati. The Giants survived a pair of homers by Johnny Bench, his eighth and ninth of the season.

Chris Short fired a four-hitter and Don Money's infield single drove in the game's only run as Philadelphia blanked Chicago. Money's seventh inning single drove in Larry Bowa who also reached on an infield hit.

Kansas City Snaps Oriole Win String

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After losing ten straight to Baltimore Orioles, Kansas City Royals came up with something new—a game-winning hit.

Fred Patek broke Baltimore's win string with a run-producing single in the eighth inning Friday to give the Royals a 5-4 American League victory, their first over the Orioles since May 9, 1969.

"I knew it was in as soon as I hit it," said Patek, who tagged a slider off Tom Dukes to deliver Paul Schaal with the historic run.

Manager Bob Lemon, who wasn't around when the losing streak started, was glad to be on the scene when it ended.

"The Orioles just don't want you to win," he said. "I guess that's why they're the world champions."

Doug Griffin opened with a single and pinch-hitter Don Pavletich bounced another single. Luis Aparicio sacrificed and Kait threw wild, trying to nail Griffin at third, Griffin scored on the play and Smith's double gave Boston the lead.

Bart Johnson pitched a five-hitter and Carlos May knocked in two runs and stole home for Chicago. Rick Reichardt's solo home run tied the game at 1-1 for Chicago in the fourth and Willie Sue pushed across two more in the fifth on Lee Richard's double, a walk to Ed Stroud and May's two-run single. May roared home on the front end of a double steal in a two-run Chicago seventh.

The Yankees managed only three hits in five innings off Milwaukee starter Skip Lockwood, took advantage of six walks. Dave May's two-out homer in the ninth accounted for Milwaukee's run.

Willie Horton unloaded a three-run homer to cap a four-run first and Joe Coleman won his first game since suffering a skull fracture in spring training for Detroit.

Coleman, making his second start since coming off the disabled list less than two weeks ago, checked the Angels on four hits until the eighth inning when California broke loose for its four runs. Bill Zepp came in to shut the door on the Angels.

Pinch-hitter Tommy Davis delivered a three-run double and Vida Blue notched his sixth victory of the campaign, tops in the majors, as Oakland topped Cleveland. The Athletics, winning their 15th in 18 games, loaded the bases with two out in the seventh inning for Davis, who came through with his second game-winning hit in three days. He beat Baltimore with a single Wednesday night.

Sports On All Fronts

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—A diplomatic storm is brewing over the invitation to Rhodesia to participate in the Olympic Games in Munich in 1972. The United Nations special committee on colonialism readied a resolution urging the International Olympic Committee to "withdraw forthwith" the invitation and to suspend the National Olympic Committee of Rhodesia from membership. Rhodesia is under condemnation by the UN Security Council and the General Assembly as a rebel regime with no international status. Its white-minority government is under constant attack in the United Nations.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Boxing Commission of Tampa, Fla., was suspended from membership in the World Boxing Association Friday.

WBA President Bill Brennan announced the action, taken "as result of the so-called light heavyweight title bout held in Tampa last Saturday and approved by the Tampa commission in violation of the WBA championship rules." Brennan referred to the bout in which Bob Foster chased Ray Anderson for 15 rounds in winning a lopsided decision before a national television audience. The WBA had previously withdrawn recognition of Foster as its light heavyweight champion, claiming the rangy puncher from Washington, D.C., had not once defended his title against the WBA's top contender since winning the crown from Dick Tiger in 1968.

Favorites Seldom Pay Off In 'Run for the Roses'

LOUISVILLE (AP) — The Kentucky Derby winners's circle hasn't been much of a home to betting favorites in the last 25 years. Only six have reached it.

And with today's field of 20 it is very possible an outsider could end up with the winner's blanket of roses.

Post time for the 97th running of the 1¼-mile, $125,000-added race is 5:30 p.m., EDT. Television coverage on CBC national network is scheduled to start at 5 p.m. EDT.

The winning favorites in the 25 previous Derbies were Citation in 1948; Hill Gail, 1952; Needles, 1956; Carry Back, 1961; Kauai King, 1966, and Majestic Prince, 1969.

Citation, the greatest of Calumet Farm's seven Derby winners, paid only $2.80, equaling the lowest Derby mutuel return set in 1943 when Count Fleet won. Citation, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, was coupled in the betting with Coaltown, the second-place finisher. There was no place or show betting on the six-horse field.

Arcaro also rode Hill Gail, who paid $4.20. Needles returned $5.20, Carry Back $7, Kauai King $6.80 and Majestic Prince $4.60.

While Citation certainly was the most famous favorite to win the Derby in the last quarter century, the most famous favorite to lose during that span was Native Dancer who won every other race he started.

Native Dancer, the odds-on favorite as part of an Alfred G. Vanderbilt entry with Social Outcast, Native Dancer was roughed at the first turn by Money Broker and was eased back by jockey Eric Guerin. Native Dancer got a clear run stretch drive but failed by a head to catch Dark Star.

The Derby was the feature in today's Derby was the Calumet Farm entry of Bold and Able with Hartack aboard. Fleet Bold and Able was to start from the No. 1 post position while Hartack's Fleet went from No. 17. The entry was listed a 5-2 odds in the early line.

Next at probable 4-1 odds was Jim French's entry of J. C. Caldwell, trained by John Campo and ridden by Angel Cordero.

Bucks Sweep Bullets In Four

BALTIMORE (AP) — Oscar Robertson and Lew Alcindor combined for 57 points as Milwaukee Bucks trounced Baltimore Bullets 118-106 to complete a four-game sweep in the National Basketball Association championship playoff final Friday night.

The sweep was only the second in the 25-year history of the NBA, matching the one by Boston Celtics over Minneapolis Lakers in 1959.

Robertson scored 21 of his 30 points in the first half as the Bucks rolled up a 60-47 lead.

Alcindor also played his usual intimidating role on defence and wound up with the most valuable player award.

The crippled Bullets took a 15-10 lead at the outset before the Bucks hit 8 of 13 shots to go ahead 22-18 and remained in front the rest of the way.

Fred Carter topped Baltimore with 28 points. Kevin Loughery had 24. Wes Unseld scored nine points, but had 23 rebounds and 10 assists.

San Francisco Seals ?

OAKLAND (AP) — Charles O. Finley said Friday he would give "very, very serious consideration" to moving his National Hockey League California Golden Seals to San Francisco if the proposed Yerba Buena sports arena becomes a reality.

But Finley, who purchased the franchise last year, denied he has made any commitment to do so.

Finley said: "So long as we play in the Bay area, it doesn't make much difference where."

His comments followed a statement by Lyman Jee, president of Schlesinger-Arcon Pacific, builder of the $28-million San Francisco re-development project, Jee was quoted as saying Thursday that Finley had all but given assurance of making the move.

Calgary Wiggles Free From Financial Woes to Challenge Galt

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders wiggled out of financial difficulties, survived the death of an owner, and reluctantly agreed to participate in the Western Canada Allan Cup tournament.

The result: Another birth in the Canadian senior hockey final and a shot at Galt Horsets, the team that defeated the Stampeders four straight in the 1969 series.

All this from a Calgary team that was "going under financially" and faced retirement late in December from the Alberta Hockey League.

Troubles began last November when owner and patron Nado Gallelli died after spending $100,000 on the team during his years.

Executors of his estate said they could not inject further funds into the club after carrying much of an early-season deficit, putting the Stampeders in economic trouble.

However, last-minute fan support and a little help from Calgary Centennials of the Western Canada Hockey League provided new life and the Stampeders went on to win the AHL title.

The Stampeders, now a community-owned club under president Bill Boswell, got more than $10,000 from fans at an exhibition game with the Centennials.

The Stampeders now prepare for the Allan Cup best-of-seven series against the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A champions. All games will be played in Galt, with the first scheduled for tonight.

It will be the third Allan Cup appearance for a Calgary team in the last five years.

Calgary recorded its only victory in Allan Cup play in 1966.

Kelly said the Stampeders will have 19 regular players and two others commuting for weekend games.

Kelly, who calls his club "basically a skating team with good goaltending, says he will use four centres for most of the series. They are Brian Dickie, Ron Huston, Bob Toothill and Jim Hill.

On defence he'll have Gary Young and Bob Peers, both AHL all-stars, along with Dave Haley, Rod Collins and Rod Syverson.

Gary Bauman, former member of Minnesota North Stars in the National Hockey League, Bill McDonnell and Russ Gillow — a pickup from Drumheller Miners and the AHL's most valuable player and all-star reminder—will guard the Calgary nets.

Gillow and Syverson will be on hand for the two opening games, tonight and Sunday, then are expected to fly home and return for later games if needed.

Kelly, who coached Drumheller to the 1966 national senior title, says he again has a solid crew . . . "a winning team."

Hawks, Rangers Clash Sunday

CHICAGO (AP) — Cherishing a well-earned rest, Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers geared for the conclusion of their semi - final Stanley Cup series Sunday.

The two clubs, deadlocked at three games each, will clash Sunday afternoon to decide which team will advance to the finals for a meeting with Montreal Canadiens.

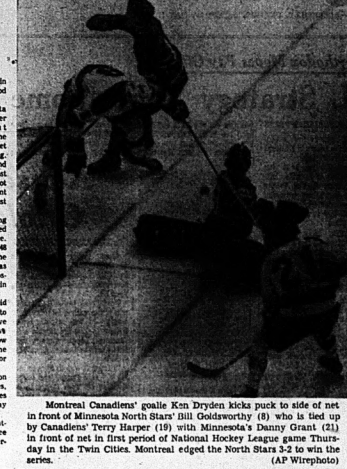
While the Rangers huffed and puffed to a 3-2 victory over the Hawks in the third period of a sudden death playoff on Pete Stemkowski's goal Thursday night, the Canadiens earned a finals berth with a 3-2 triumph over Minnesota North Stars to win the series 4-2.

The Rangers, who had to come back from a two-goal deficit Thursday night, are confident they have the momentum to beat the Hawks on Chicago ice Sunday.

Coach Emile Francis called the triumph "the greatest performance ever put on by a Ranger team I've coached" while Stemkowski, who now has scored overtime goals for two of New York's triumphs in the series flatly said: "We're going to win Sunday and we know it."

The Black Hawks confident they can win at home, made no bold predictions but were still lamenting their missed opportunities to end the series in the second overtime period Thursday night.

That was when Stan Mikita and Bill White swarmed over goalie Ed Giacomin but couldn't get the puck in the net. Mikita shot from 20 feet and Giacomin sprawling. White took the rebound and shot only to hit the net post and bounce away. Mikita shot again and the puck went through the crease, hit the post and bounded out.



By this time Rod Selling came to the rescue and fired the puck the length of the ice.

Although the Rangers had 46 shots on net to only 36 for the Hawks, coach Billy Reay was disappointed to see Tony Esposito's brilliant performance in the nets go to waste.

"They was so great", said Reay. "It's a shame it had to end this way. You couldn't have asked for two teams to give more than these two and now it comes down to just one game . . . the 13th of the season for the two of us."

During the regular season the two teams met six times, each scoring three victories and each winning one away from home.

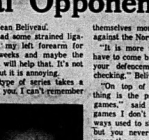
This has been the exact pattern of the playoffs with three of the games going into overtime.

Montreal Canadiens' goalie Ken Dryden kicks puck to side of net in front of Minnesota North Stars' Bill Goldsworthy (8) who is tied up by Canadiens' Terry Harper (19) with Minnesota's Danny Grant (21) in front of net in first period of National Hockey League game Thursday in the Twin Cities. Montreal edged the North Stars 3-2 to win the series. (AP Wirephoto)

Montreal Not Worrying Over Final Opponents

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens are not worried about the opponent they will have to meet in the Stanley Cup playoff final starting Tuesday. They are simply happy they do not have to play Sunday.

"We never say who we want to play and that goes back to Toe Blake's days," defenceman Jean-Claude Tremblay said in an interview. "You can't play your own opponent, so why worry about it."



The Canadiens will meet either New York Rangers or Chicago Black Hawks in the best-of-seven final series. The Hawks and the Rangers play Sunday at Chicago Stadium in the deciding game of their best-of-seven struggle.

The Rangers evened the series Thursday night in New York on an overtime goal by Peter Stemkowski, giving the Canadiens the opportunity to rest after they eliminated Minnesota North Stars the same night.

"I hope it doesn't hurt the Rangers' guys. You can certainly use some extra time to rest and I'm sure Henri Richard feels the same way," said team captain Jean Beliveau.

"I've had some strained ligaments in my left forearm for several weeks and maybe the five days will help that. It's not serious but it is annoying.

JEAN BELIVEAU

the last team that checked like Minnesota did in the playoffs.

"I've seen teams do it for a game, maybe two, but for the last five games they never let up. That is the hardest kind of hockey to play and its tiring."

Richard, 35, agreed with his 39-year-old team-mate. Not only did they both find it a chore logging the puck up the ice against Minnesota, but had to exert themselves more to backcheck against the North Stars.

"It is more tiring when you have to come back deep to help your defenceman against the checking," Beliveau said.

"On top of that the worst thing is the pressure between games," said Richard. "The games I don't mind. I am always used to skating all I can, but you never get rested because the pressure won't let you sleep. I'd rather be an underdog than a team with nothing to lose.

"Take last (Thursday) night. Even after we won the series, I couldn't get to sleep. I was in my room at 12:30 and I took a sleeping pill, but I was still awake at 4 a.m. I'll have to have a wake-up call at eight. That's not much sleep for this kind of work."

The Canadiens were scheduled to practise today and then join hockey fans from coast-to-coast in Canada and the United States in watching the telecast of the New York-Chicago game Sunday.

The game will be televised by CBC and CBS starting at 2 p.m. EDT.

Bowman Resigns 'In Club's Best Interests'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Willis (Scotty) Bowman resigned Friday as coach and general manager of St. Louis Blues, ending a four-season honeymoon in the National Hockey League.

"I am resigning in the best interests of the hockey club," the 38-year-old Bowman said at a news conference. "You can't single out one thing that brought this about, but there are some confidences I will never reveal."

The impetuous Bowman, who first assumed control of the Blues in November, 1967, during their maiden NHL season, turned coaching duties over to defenceman Al Arbour to start the 1971-71 season.

But he took back control Feb. 7 and was at the helm as the club finished second in the NHL's West Division, then lost to Minnesota North Stars four games to two in a first-round Stanley Cup playoff.

The demise of the Blues and dismissals of Cliff Fletcher as assistant general manager and Tommy Woodcock as trainer were said to be at the root of a rift between Bowman and franchise owners Sydney Salomon Jr. and Sid Salomon III.

Neither Bowman nor the Salomons would comment on points of dispute. The Salomons announcement of the resignation said merely "an amicable agreement has been reached."

Terms of the agreement between the Blues and Bowman were not revealed, although the figure was reported at about $50,000 by sources.

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Howie Beaupit, assistant trainer for St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A team, said Friday he will not press charges against a Toronto Marlboro player who allegedly hit him on the face during a playoff game.

Toronto's Steve Durbano was given a two-minute penalty for the incident which occurred in the second game of the OHA final series won by St. Catharines.

In another announcement, Black Hawk officials said they may consider playing the fifth game against Quebec Remparts in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks said Friday that forward Len Lunde, who announced his retirement last season, wants his amateur card back in order to play and coach rink in Finland.

Polle said he met in Edmonton Thursday with Lunde, who retired last season when Canucks assigned him to a minor league club.

LONDON (AP) — Shane Gould, 14-year-old Australian schoolgirl, smashed the world 100-metres freestyle record Friday night in a 14-country swimming meet at London Crystal Palace pool—a meet described as a mini-Olympics. Tombstone Erected for R. Yankee Wann

By ELMER BONTER
Staff Correspondent

AMELIASBURG — The scene is a sombre one in the rural locale of Campbell Wannamaker's barnyard on his farm on the fourth concession.

It was the place Canada's Greatest Standard Bred — R. Yankee Wann — returned at the end of the harness racing season.

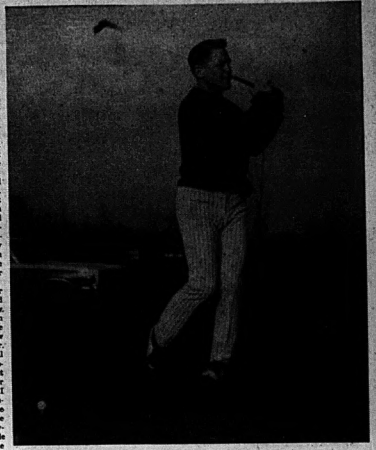
R. Yankee Wann, sick-named The Bull for its powerful performance and fleetness of hoof, died unexpectedly October 18 last fall.

The last time the big brown horse had raced was at the Belleville Fairgrounds in the Richard Ellis Special Stake a feature of the Quinte Riding and Driving Club's weekly card eight days earlier. The winnings — $600 in this instance — were turned back to the Stake race committee by owner Wannamaker.



R. Yankee Wann amassed $208,238 in lifetime earnings. Only two weeks ago the last of many honors bestowed on the great horse was presented to Mr. Wannamaker in an appropriate ceremony at Batavia Downs. It was a trophy emblematic of the Champion of western New York State harness racing tracks for 1970.

The horse's best time for the mile 1:37.1 was clocked at Vernon Downs in New York State. The driver then as always Rejean Bolly the only driver ever to draw reins on the outstanding racer.

At the Belleville General Hospital where he is recuperating from a stubborn bout of the 'flu Mr. Wannamaker explained his intention. "I wanted some form of permanent recognition for Yankee Wann and when the stone with a suggestion for engraving and installation was made available to me, I liked the idea. An iron fence will be erected around the memorial to separate it from the remainder of the barnyard."

Memorial Erected for Famed Race Horse

Fascinated by the appearance of the memorial for Canada's greatest standard bred R. Yankee Wann, Claude Bolly five-year-old son of harness race driver Rejean Bolly takes a close look at the inscription on the stone. His father made racing history with the outstanding moneymaker in the Cam Wannamaker stable and more recently won the season driving championship at Batavia Downs with a .516 average, a record never equalled in the tracks 30 years of operation.

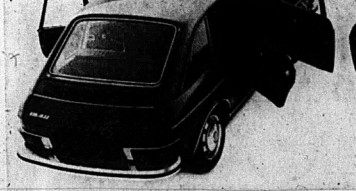
Lucy Cooper Says:
Golf's Million Dollar Winner
WET WEATHER GOLF

It's no fun playing in wet weather, but every golfer inevitably gets caught in the rain once in a while. When it happens, make the best of it.



Under these conditions, you should do your best to keep your club grips dry. See that your bag is covered.

In general, you must be bolder in wet weather. Play for a minimal roll on every shot from drive on putt; go for the pin on approaches and the cup on putts.

Play for the high shot to get maximum distance. Position the ball forward in your stance on all fast shots, and try to clip it off the turf without taking much of a divot. "Fat" shots, when the clubhead contacts turf before the ball, are absolutely fatal in wet weather.

Cougars, Trenton Still In Junior B Picture

Reports of the demise of two of the Eastern Ontario Junior B hockey entries have apparently been greatly exaggerated.

There was some speculation after the OHA meeting in Toronto last weekend that neither the Cobourg Cougars of the Trenton Golden Hawks would be operating in the six-team Junior B loop next season.

Cobourg who finished the season in fifth place has expressed an interest in dropping down to Junior C competition, but nothing definite has been decided on the matter. The Cougars managed eight wins and four ties in 30 games last year.

Trenton had failed to send a representative at all to the OHA meeting leading to the speculation that the Golden Hawks' would fold completely after a dismal season in which they captured only two of their 30 contests.

"There was nothing really significant about the fact that no one attended the OHA meeting," explained Mike Mason, one of the current club directors. "I imagine before next year that some group will come forward to run Junior hockey."

The two teams have until August 1st to reach a decision as to whether or not they will compete in the Junior B league next season.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"I KNOW I have my offering in here somewhere."

Davis Insists on Say at Party Office

TORONTO (CP) — One of the latest moves by Premier William Davis as new leader of the Ontario government has had a major effect on the stallier Alan Eagleson.

As president of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party Association for the last 2½ years, Mr. Eagleson has been a dominant figure in operation of party headquarters with little or no interference from Queen's Park.

It was his own idea, but Queens Park sources say it was considered a departure from the normal role of the association—an elected body—which is supposed to act as a liaison between riding associations and the government.

Premier Davis has changed that by beefing up his own personal staff and letting it be known that he wants a say in what's going on downtown where the headquarters staff operate.

"There is no conflict involved here," a government official says. "It's just that there are a lot of questions being asked about what headquarters are able to do, what they weren't doing, and what they should be doing."

Mr. Eagleson is vacationing in Australia, but Arthur Hartnett, executive director of headquarters, says the transition has been amicable.

"Whatever change there has been made possible . . . because Mr. Davis is so political. He's more interested in what we're doing. We welcome it."

He said Mr. Eagleson and the premier "compliment each other."

The change has been more in kind than in form, but legislature sources say there is no doubt that Mr. Davis has moved to take more control over the party's activities than was the case under former premier John Robarts.

The new impetus from Queen's Park may also be attributed to the fact that Mr. Davis is new and anxious to assert his own personality on the party, and also because there is a good chance he will call a provincial election this year, although his mandate doesn't expire until the fall of 1972.

Since the transition a major result has been that more of the feedback from the public is reaching the premier's office, got headquarters. And the premier has established a link with the business community that didn't exist before.

"This job is getting to be pretty big for party headquarters to handle alone," the government official says. "We're doing a lot more with people. Mr. Davis is getting a lot of feedback from people on things we're doing in the legislature, and that's the way he wants it."

Stewart Defends Marketing Policy

TORONTO (CP) — Agriculture Minister William Stewart of Ontario denied Friday that his farm marketing policy is helping Canada "drift toward dissolution."

Donald Macdonald (NDP—York South) suggested in the legislature that discussions with Quebec agriculture officials have come to a halt since both provinces introduced legislation prohibiting entry of farm produce without a permit.

He asked for assurance that "the interprovincial trade war" will not be encouraged.

Mr. Stewart said his department holds discussions several times a week with Quebec's deputy minister of agriculture and that it is "most amicable relationship."

"Sure if you're decent human beings, you may be amicable," Mr. Macdonald said. "Has the minister ever heard of divorce on amicable terms?"

Mr. Stewart said the Ontario legislation was designed only to protect Ontario broilers and the Quebec bill was specifically aimed at eggs and onions.

A "huge shipment" of onions has not been granted a liquor-serving licence.

Public Works Minister James Auld has said he will decide within a month whether or not liquor will be served in the lounge.

Legislature's Bar Is Dry

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's legislature building has what one MPP describes as the "most lavish cocktail lounge in the province" but no one can buy a drink in it.

The lounge, estimated by Eddie Sargent (L—Grey-Bruce) to have cost $100,000, is complete with two uniformed stewards who have no customers because the lounge had been dumped in Quebec, and wrecked the Montreal market for local producers.

"They hope to control that kind of dumping."

He said he respects the position Quebec has taken.

Canadians to Visit Washington To Discuss Pollution Dangers

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada's openly-expressed concern about the dangers of oil pollution along the West Coast will be backed up in Ottawa Monday at a time of sharp internal debate within the U.S. government about a proposal to ship Alaska oil to the mainland by pipeline and tanker.

A group of senior Canadian civil servants, joined by a representative of the British Columbia government, will hold an all-day closed-door discussion with American officials at the state department's Bureau of External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has called the "great risks and dangers" to the B.C. coast from sea-going tankers carrying Alaska oil to the power-hungry "lower 48" states.

The meeting was blandly described Friday by a state department spokesman as an "exchange of information" between technicians from the two countries "about the risks of pollution on the Pacific coast in the event that larger quantities of oil than at present begin moving there."

It is not, the spokesman stressed, a discussion of the relative merits of various proposals for shipping Alaska oil to the mainland.

Against the current proposal for an 800-mile pipeline across Alaska and a fleet of tankers to the mainland, now being considered by the U.S. government, Canadian cabinet ministers have suggested that a pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley should be studied as an alternative.

Canadian opponents of the pipeline-tanker scheme have stressed the hazards of navigation in the often stormy waters along the B.C. coast, and particularly the danger for tankers moving through Juan de Fuca Strait and Puget Sound to discharge oil cargoes at refineries being built or proposed on the Washington state coast near the Canadian border.

Atlantic-Richfield Oil Co. is constructing a 100,000-barrel-a-day refinery at Cherry Point, Wash., at a cost of $150 million almost solely in anticipation of the pipeline-tanker scheme being approved. It plans are said to call for a fleet of 120,000-ton tankers to carry the oil.

Opponents say tanker collisions are "inevitable" in the narrow straits which B.C. shares with Washington state. And they add that oil spilled in those waters would just as inevitably end up on the beaches, coastal marshes and recreation grounds of theB.C. coast.

While the Canadian delegation is likely to be unanimous in stressing the dangers to the B.C. coast from accidental spills, collisions or groundings, there is reason to believe they will find a less-than-unanimous viewpoint on the American side.

The proposal by a consortium of American oil companies has generated wide dissent both within and outside the U.S. government.

Environmentalists, backed up by scientific studies even from government agencies, say the proposal threatens vast harm to the delicate Alaska wilderness and to the seas.

Even those who appear neutral about the proposal have said the scheme presents too many unanswered questions to be approved in haste.

Supporters of the pipeline-tanker idea say it is the most logical, quickest and least costly method of getting huge reserves —10,000 million barrels of oil, or more—from the North Slope of Alaska to the mainland. They cite economic and security factors as being paramount.

The latest indication of internal dissent in the government came two weeks ago when Commerce Secretary Maurice Strong urged that the pipeline-tanker proposal be approved quickly in the national interest. But he appended to his recommendation a study by some of his own department's scientists which seemed to shoot the proposal full of holes.

Canada's delegation to the Monday meeting is to be headed by Kenneth Wardroper, director-general of the bureau of economic affairs in the external affairs department. It will include officials from the transport, energy and fisheries departments.

Although no list of American participants has been released, informants here say the delegation will be heavily weighted with senior officials from various departments and agencies concerned with navigation and the environment.

PM Planning Shuffle Due Kierans' Departure

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau plans some cabinet changes and additions in view of Eric Kierans's resignation and after passage of the government's reorganization bill, informants said Friday.

These moves do not appear imminent because the reorganization bill is still before the Commons, where it has been riding a bumpy legislative road for months.

No shifts in the big cabinet portfolios—finance, trade, defence, transport, justice and regional economic expansion—are expected.

Sources said Mr. Trudeau is determined to strengthen his cabinet representation from the Toronto area though there are already three ministers from Ontario—Defence Minister Donald Macdonald, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and Robert Stanbury, minister without portfolio.

There now are 10 ministers from Ontario and nine from Quebec in the 29-man cabinet following the resignation of Communications Minister Kierans, MP for Montreal Duvernay.

However, Mr. Trudeau does not plan to keep Quebec-Ontario representation at 10-10 by appointing a new cabinet member from Quebec, sources said.

He intends to go to the Toronto region for his newest cabinet appointment or appointments. Names mentioned are those of Barrett Danson (York North), now parliamentary secretary to Mr. Trudeau; John Roberts (York Simcoe); Alastair Gillespie (Toronto-Lakeshore); Martin O'Connell (Toronto Scarborough East); and Charles Caccia (Toronto Davenport).

Jean-Pierre Cote is expected to be formally named parliamentary general, a job he has been holding as minister without portfolio. He is also acting communications minister following Mr. Kierans's resignation Wednesday.

Mr. Trudeau will wait to make cabinet changes until after passage of the reorganization bill because he then can appoint ministers for the environment, housing and science.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis has already been designated as minister of the environment and Robert Andras, minister without portfolio, as minister of housing.

Mr. Kierans and former transport minister Paul Hellyer have both defected from the cabinet on the ground of government mismanagement of the economy.

But sources said the big difference in the two resignations was that Mr. Trudeau made a determined though unsuccessful effort to dissuade Mr. Kierans from resigning.

The resignations of two such strong men as Mr. Kierans and Mr. Hellyer would have probably shaken any other cabinet to its foundations.

The resignation of Defence Minister Douglas Harkness in 1963 helped bring down the Diefenbaker government only a few days later.

But Mr. Trudeau is considered in such a dominating position in his administration that the two resignations have caused barely a ripple despite the crucial issues involved—the economy, unemployment, foreign ownership, use of resources.

No other resignations are known, informants said.

One source close to the cabinet said Mr. Kierans's brutally frank talk in cabinet about other ministers' proposed policies had resulted in better cabinet discussion—and better cabinet policies.

Mr. Kierans, he said, will be greatly missed, by Mr. Trudeau as well as other cabinet ministers.

Canadian Capital No Cure-all

TORONTO (CP) — An official of the United Steelworkers of America has rejected the view that replacement of United States ownership by private Canadian capital will solve Canada's problems of national sovereignty.

Larry Sefton, director of the union's 136,000-member District 6 makes the point in a report prepared for the Steelworkers' national policy conference here next week.

"There is nothing inherently more moral about Canadian than about foreign capitalism," Mr. Sefton says.

Weakness in Nickel, Steel and Paper Stocks Lowers Indices

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets posted a sharp loss this week, owing largely to weaknesses among nickel, steel and paper stocks.

At Toronto, the industrial index was down 3.16 to 183.30.

It was the second consecutive losing week for markets.

Lower first-quarter earnings were reported by several Canadian pulp and paper and steel companies during April.

Nickel stocks dropped during the week following a statement last week by the chairman of International Nickel Company of Canada Ltd. that nickel was moving into a surplus position on world markets.

The Toronto exchange's papers group dropped 5.84 points or 6.6 per cent to 82.56 during the week.

Steels lost 4.44 points or 2.42 per cent to 179.31. The industrial mining group fell 4.10 points or 2.63 per cent to 151.89.

Wall Street held up well during the first four days of the week, but took a sharp plunge Friday. The Dow Jones average of key blue-chip issues was down 6.04 points on the week to 941.75.

The only bright spot on markets was gold stocks. The Toronto exchange's gold index jumped up 4.26 points to 189.33.

French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing told a meeting of European Common Market economic and finance advisers early in the week the inflationary flow of United States dollars into Europe might be stemmed by a higher gold price.

In other areas of investment, the Toronto market's base metal index dropped 1.69 points to 97.71 and western oils 3.74 to 213.78.

Volume at Toronto slipped to 12.81 million shares from 13.72 million last week.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the combined volume was 8.29 million shares, up from 6.55 million last week.

$6 Billion for Power Development

Bourassa Officially Unveils Quebec's James Bay Project

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa announced Friday night that the Quebec government will undertake to construct a mammoth $6 billion hydro-electric project to harness five rivers flowing into James Bay.

It is believed that on completion the hydro complex will be the largest in the world.

The project to dam the Nottaway, Broadback, Rastmuskan Grand and Rupert rivers will also represent the largest single financial undertaking in the province's history.

The announcement came during a Liberal party rally here and was not unexpected. Speculation had been rife in published reports for more than a week.

The premier told about 4,000 cheering supporters that the project would be "a turning point in our history," and would bring unprecedented prosperity to Quebec society.

His half-hour address was preceded by a film, projected onto three screens in the Quebec Coliseum, which outlined the James Bay project in northern Quebec.

It will produce 3,500 new jobs before the end of this year and eventually provide work for 125,000 Quebecers.

It is expected to produce 10 million kilowatts when completed, more than the Grand Coulee project in Washington State, far more than the Churchill complex in Labrador, and an amount equal to the total power now produced by Hydro-Quebec, the province's publicly-owned hydro-electric utility.

Premier Bourassa said a public corporation will be established by the government and Hydro-Quebec to administer the James Bay project.

He said there will be an "immediate start" on the complex.

The project has been under consideration since 1964 when Hydro-Quebec began feasibility studies. Trade winter roads have already been built to provide access to the five rivers.

Monday night was the expected announcement of large investments in the James Bay undertaking.

Speculation on the project announcement had been accompanied last week by predictions that Mr. Bourassa would also reveal a $2 billion prepaid sale of electricity from the complex to Consolidated Edison of New York City.

Before the Liberal rally, government sources said negotiations for various financial arrangements were continuing and whether an announcement would come Friday night depended on when they were completed.

anniversary of his election with a smile of satisfaction.

The James Bay project was "the key to our economic development and our social progress, which will in turn will give us political stability.

But even without an indication that financial arrangements had been completed, Mr. Bourassa was able to celebrate the first

The 37-year-old premier has been seeking investors for the project since he came to office in the Quebec general election

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Old Age Can Be Sad Time of Life

In some cases, youthfulness and growing old can be a sad time; in many cases so can growing old. Too often do the aged become a problem to themselves and to their children.

What shall be done about them? Like remnants in a disposal unit, shall they be put down the drain as old people's home? Useless and forgotten? Or, shall they be kept at home — whatever the irritations and inconveniences so their children can care for old and helpless parents?

Answers are not simple. They will vary with individual circumstances. However, here is the opinion of one reader:

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In a recent letter to you from Revered B. in which he guilt-laden people who have put their aged parents in nursing homes, may I say I do not agree with him. He says, "Even if Mother complains of being forsaken and not being wanted any more, this is merely old age talking."

I say in most cases it is the mother talking. Reverend B. also said, "Old people feel they are real-ly alert." Again I disagree. The alert ones, are the hurt ones.

Wake up you children of aged parents. Thousands of them are being dumped in nursing homes simply because they are old and no longer of any use to their children (even though they have all their faculties but get around slower). The main reason is that they are old.

Think back, you children. Did your parents forsake you when you lay as a babe in the cradle, and for the many years that followed? How do you want to be treated by your children when old age arrives? Mark my words well. For many of you the day will come when you are old, too. Ask yourself, do you want to be forsaken and not wanted then?

I thank God for the many thousands of children who adore their parents and never send them away. They actually put them on a pedestal. These children live with no guilty thoughts.

I can readily understand that there are many aged parents who need the help of a hospital or nursing home. But I fail to comprehend how children can send a parent away simply because he or she is old. It saddens me to think of the broken old hearts they cause, not forgetting their own heavy layers of guilt.

All I ask is that you who are about to take such steps — think well before you make your decision. Do for them now, for when they are gone it will be too late, and you will live with regrets all your life. — Mrs. G.

Note to Mr. N.: As a doctor I tell you that "fresh air is good for you and as a patient it's your job to find it. But you never will if you keep on being a human smokestack:" (End of sermon for today.)

* * *

For Mrs. K.: I do not believe that a year-old child should be spoiled because he has developed the habit of being a "breath-holder" while crying. Even if he cries until he is "blue in the face," he does not deserve punishment. Most babies get over the habit by the age of two. Rather than using punishment, try kindness and cuddling. It works much better.

* * *

For Mrs. L.: "More old drunks than old doctors"! Who said it? Is it true? No author may have been an alcoholic who was hoping he'd last a few more years. But it may be statistically true. It's an accepted fact that more unfortunates suffer from chronic alcoholism than practice medicine. What I'm trying to say is that drinking liquor will not guarantee you a longer life than the average doctor's.

* * *

"I say, live for today. The first of the month may never come."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For May 2

Your birthday today: A year of contrasts begins now. You thrive in all those areas of living that do not appeal to you as special interests but you must scramble vigorously to satisfy your own internal need for growth. Insight, mastery in matters that may not appear to the outside world as really worthy of much effort. Today's natives are usually energetic, graceful in their movements, clever with their fingers.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Show up in a bright mood to take part in your community's expression of faith. Your cheerful influence is needed. Circulate among acquaintances and catch up on all the news.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): More depends on your self-discipline in emotional matters this Sunday than you realize. Sudden stimulus or surprise do not deserve a quick reaction in kind.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Accomplish what you really want very early this morning. Things get complicated and so busy by midday that you won't have much chance to pursue your own schemes afterwards.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Now comes the responsibility of keeping a confidential matter completely secret while you try to offer constructive help.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Anything will do today provided it will just put out of phase, momentarily, your accustomed routines and personal encounters. If you can't be out of sight at least be on a different schedule to give yourself and others a little respite.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): This Sunday holds a message for you. Be mentally alert to hear it and ready to use new insight into the way your life can evolve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your community needs all the energy and encouragement you can bring to bear. There are questions at hand requiring answers, and you have a share in bringing the issues to decision-point. Find out where people are and what they are about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Finding solutions is not only a relief but an achievement to be proud of this Sunday. Stir about fast means to implement a community decision.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Humor gives you a slight edge in coping with incidents of the day, since you are not likely to be able or willing to duck any of them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Be sure you're right before you get into definite action as you'll find you can't change or modify your position once you've declared yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): For a change, rashness may befit your plans and welfare this Sunday. Attend to local customs then try that vigorous, different venture you've dreamed up.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Get yourself together; mind, body and soul, ready to evolve further and into a higher mission. Prayer shows its power to those who really believe.

For May 3

Your birthday today: Once past the relative standstill at the beginning of your year, the path is broad and profitable. Material gains, emotional satisfaction come well within reach. Today's natives have skills with equipment.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Just because something is working out all right, doesn't mean you have to boast about it. Refrain from the temptation to say too much.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Major decisions are better not made final today. Easy does it, in tactful word, gentle deed.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Bear in mind the temporary nature of current conditions. Solutions for past problems no longer work, and nothing which is definite today is apt to hold true tomorrow.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Explaining anything brings precisely the reverse of the effects you want. Live in the present moment rather than performing post mortems over the past. Money matters become complex.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Realize now that some habits longer apply, if they ever did, and that you have to change tactics to make full use of your potential.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Today's upward move may have a strong element of wishful thinking. Check facts and figures: think it through tomorrow, then make your move.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Give yourself time to reconsider important moves; offer passive resistance to those in a hurry. View the passing scene, refresh old friendships, go visiting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Take compliments in context—you've earned plenty, of course, but what brings them now? Get through the duller routines and a bit of troubleshooting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You have to put something more than just words into whatever you do; skills, long experience may make all the difference.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Much that you had thought settled, turns out not to be so clear-cut. Be calm as you explore the causes of confusion and get matters reorganized. The later the hour, the greater your efficiency.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your work and career rides through today on its momentum. Many rash words are said, none of them to be taken as permanent or realistic.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Older people, authority figures are more difficult to deal with than usual. Pay strict attention to what fails or is found lacking.

Newmarket Farmers Hand Out Free Food

NEWMARKET, Ont. (CP) — Ontario farmers continued their protest against low prices paid for farm produce Friday as Newmarket area farmers handed out free packages of eggs, potatoes, pork and vegetables.

The demonstrations, organized by the National Farmers' Union, are being held to publicize farmers' grievances. Similar demonstrations were held in Winnipeg Thursday.

Students Jailed For Computer Riot

MONTREAL (CP) — Roseveli Douglas, 28, of Dominica, was sentenced Friday to two years less one day in jail and fined $1,000 or an additional six months for wilfully obstructing the use of Sir George Williams University computer centre in 1969.

Ann Cools, 27, of Barbados, found guilty of the same charge, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $1,500. Failure to pay the fine will result in an additional six months in jail.

Brenda Dickonson-Dash, 25, of Montreal, convicted along with Douglas and Miss Cools, was fined $2,000 or six months in jail. She was given three months to pay the fine.

In passing sentence, Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay described Douglas and Miss Cools as "leaders" of the 15-day occupation which ended in a computer-smashing spree and some $1.5 million damage.

On hearing his sentence, Douglas shouted "long live black power."

"Compassion, not confrontation" should be used to fight racism, Mr. Justice Mackay said.

The trio was convicted April 22 by a Court of Queens Bench jury after deliberating for two hours.

They were arrested Feb. 11, 1969, with 92 others following the sit-in to protest what the demonstrators said was university inaction in dealing with a charge of racism against a biology professor.

The professor, Perry Anderson, was later cleared of the racism charge by an independent committee of university teachers.

Scott Has Run of Bad Luck

NERJA, Spain (CP) — Montreal-born actress Colleen Dewhurst's husband missed her recent Broadway opening because of a run of bad luck in this Mediterranean village.

The husband, of course, is actor George C. Scott, who has been on location here during the making of his new film, The Last Run. First he came down with bronchial pneumonia. Then, during an escape scene across rooftop tiles, he slammed his hand against a glass door, shattering it, and causing a six-stitch gash.

The film, about an American gangster in Europe, is being shot in this storybook setting of fishermen's houses and boats huddled around a promenade which fills the Isle King Alfonso of Spain once called "the balcony of Europe."

Scott was supposedly trying to escape from another gangster in the rooftop chase. No double was used as he jumped a parapet, ran across the roof tiles, was shot in the leg, fired his own gun and then dropped down into the street below.

After the one and only rehearsal, Scott and the gangster came back up the street, and before even the director said anything Scott looked up to the camera parapet and said: "It was too fast. I didn't shoot in time. The cameras rolled again, Scott did his stint, and crashed the glass.

Miss Dewhurst was only five years old when she left Montreal for the United States"but she's still proud of her Canadian birth. She has done one drama for the CBC in Canada, called The Cheap Bunch of Flowers.

Off the set Scott is a pleasant man, wearing steel-rimmed glasses. His fine-drawn features bear a resemblance to those of Canadian actor William Needles. He says the role he liked playing best was Skylock in a theatre production of The Merchant of Venice, in which "I tried to bring out his love for his daughter rather than for his money."

Man Jailed Seven Days For Assaulting Police

James Alfred Meens, 25, of 22 Westmount Drive, was sentenced to seven days in jail and fined $100 yesterday after he was found guilty of common assault against Constable Robert Cooper of the Belleville Police Department and guilty of escaping lawful custody.

Originally arrested for causing a disturbance at 3:25 a.m. on Front Street, Oct. 10, 1970, following a confrontation with Const. Cooper, officers testified Meens struck Const. Cooper and "began to fight violently."

Both Const. Gerald Bull and a private citizen offered assistance, but Meens escaped on foot.

Const. Cooper testified he was confronted after officers arrested a second man, James Morgan. Meens came against the wall of a bank by a crowd of young people on the scene, "hollering and shouting," the officer attempted to disperse the crowd.

A gallery of youths present in court yesterday were told by provincial court Judge T. Y. Wills: "If there is any more laughing, the person who does it will be ejected from the court." Two youths were subsequently ejected and officers were told by court officer Const. William Stephenson "if there is any more noise in the hall, put them right out of the building."

Defense attorney Louis Maraskas offered no evidence and told his client on one occasion to "shut up and sit down" when he attempted to cross examine a witness.

Counsel for the crown, Geoffrey Wynn of Napanee, asked Judge Wills to consider the defendant's record, and asked him to consider "public order and safety."

Judge Wills said "a fine is not the proper penalty for an assault on a police officer. If it is understood these assaults are punishable by a jail term, it may act as a deterrent," he said.

The charge of causing a disturbance was withdrawn.

Found guilty on a charge of assault against an Ontario Water Resources Commission inspector, Douglas Knight, owner of Harbor Marina, South Front Street, Belleville, was fined $10 and $7 court costs in provincial court yesterday.

OWRC Inspector Harry Duxsee, now at Etobicoke school teacher, testified Knight, on Aug. 16, 1970, "started pushing me around and gave me a kick".

The marina operator testified he didn't want to be interrupted by a boat inspector "a busy day when he could lose business. "I grabbed him by the seat of the pants and the back of the neck and ran him to the sidewalk".

Judge Wills said the accused should have complained to the OWRC or the provincial general if he was so inclined. "I don't think we have to be governed by Mr. Knight's interpretation of the law".

A 16-year-old Belleville youth was sentenced to a jail term of one year definite and one year indeterminate in provincial court yesterday.

The youth pleaded guilty to a charge of uttering a forged cheque in the amount of $272 to the bank of Montreal, Trenton. He pleaded guilty Thursday to 14 other charges of theft and forgery with incidents in Belleville and Trenton when he fraudulently obtained clothing, hotel accommodation and cash.

On each of the other charges, he was sentenced to a three month concurrent term.

THE WHEELS WERE MADE OF WOOD?

Yes, when roller skates were invented in the 1860's the wheels were wooden. By the 1880's, ball bearings had replaced the wood, shifting the world over love to roller skate . . . just as they did a hundred years ago!

Children do love their toys and games but they seem to outgrow them while the things still have years left to use to go. Don't store outgrown toys and equipment . . . sell them all with an Intelligencer Want Ad by dialing 962-9171 proftit.

Six MPs Will Not Accept Increased Salaries

THE PICK OF Punch

"I assure you 'image' is the least of my concerns. I require reliability, good workmanship, safety and economy. How about that Ride yesher Job ever there?"

Three-week Vacations

OTTAWA (CP) — Employees of companies operating under federal jurisdiction should get three weeks vacation after three year service, Stanley Knowles (NDP-Winnipeg North Centre) told the Commons Friday.

OTTAWA (CP) — Five MPs representing three federal parties said Friday they will not accept pay increases proposed in the government's bill to increase the salaries and expense allowances of members and senators.

Those who took the pledge during Commons debate in the bill were: Paul St. Pierre (L—Coast Chilcotin), Tom Goode (L—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta), Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) and J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley).

They joined Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey-White Rock), who made the same commitment during debate Thursday. Of the six, only Mr. Nowlan does not represent a British Columbia riding.

The legislation would increase MPs' and senators' salaries to $18,000 from $12,000. MPs' tax-free expense allowances would rise to $8,000 from $6,000 and senators' to $4,000 from $3,000. No receipts are required for expense allowances.

Three other members spoke against the bill, but gave no indication they would refuse the salary increases if they are passed. They were Leonard (PC—Crowfoot), Leonel Beaudin (Creditiste—Richelieu) and Gerald Rodrigue (Creditiste—Beauce).

Mr. Nowlan made two points which he felt that all MPs should consider in dealing with the legislation. One was that if they spoke against "it, they should be willing personally to reject its benefits even if the bill was passed.

"To me," he said, "the only thing more odious than preaching a double standard is accepting a double standard."

Even if their positions were taken for the wrong reasons, they were better than "adopting the sterility of no stand at all."

Most of the members who spoke thought a pay increase for MPs is necessary, but that the bill's provisions are too generous.

Mr. St. Pierre said he would take the increase in the tax-free allowance "and use it gladly."

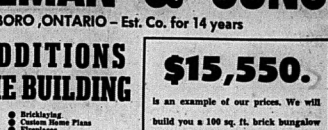
But the salary increase was not proper. It set a bad example at a time of high unemployment.

Despite this commitment, the former journalist said, he had changed his mind against voting against the bill because he didn't want to be connected with the "prosperous publicists" of the communications media who were "blackguarding" Parliament with their criticism.



Conscientious parliamentarians worked atrocious hours under considerable stress with shockingly bad facilities, he said, often watching their bank overdrafts grow.

He did not like to see such men attacked by "self-appointed guardians of public morals," many of whom had taken far greater salary increases and had security of tenure unknown in the Commons.

Mr. Knowles agreed that it is difficult for an MP to balance his budget on the present salary. But most Canadians had difficulty in balancing their budgets.

"Most Canadians, however, do not have the right to solve the problem at too little income and too much outgo by just voting themselves more income.

THE HASTINGS - PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY ROMAN CATHOLIC SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
AS AT DECEMBER 31, 1970

AUDITOR'S REPORT

TO THE SUPPORTERS OF THE HASTINGS - PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY ROMAN CATHOLIC SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD

We have examined the Revenue Fund and Capital (Building) Fund Balance Sheets of The Hastings - Prince Edward County Roman Catholic Separate School Board as at December 31, 1970 and the Statements of Revenue Fund and Capital (Building) Fund Expenditures for the year then ended. Our examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and other supporting evidence considered necessary in the circumstances.

We wish to report that, in our opinion,

(1) The $50,000 receivable from Nicholson Catholic College referred to in Note 3 to the financial statements has not been supported by proper documentation and is doubtful of collection and, therefore, should be written off against the applicable sources of revenue. The extension of credit by the Board, without expectation of repayment, is a misconception of its powers.

(2) The Board exceeded its powers by being indebted in excess of the limitations imposed by Section 199(2) of the Schools Administration Act, which restricts the limit permitted for temporary loans.

(3) Subject to the above qualifications, the report of the arbitrators referred to in Note 3 to the financial statements constitutes an award of the Separate Schools Act which required that it be complied by the 31st day of July 1970.

Subject to the above qualifications, in our opinion these financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Board as at December 31, 1970 and the results of its operations and changes in financial position for the year then ended, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles consistently applied and Ontario School Boards applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year, with the exception of the change detailed in Note 6 to the financial statements with which we concur.

LONDON (CP) — The Queen left London on schedule today for her 10-day visit to British Columbia. A palace spokesman said she seems to have "pretty well recovered" from the persistent sinus infection which forced her to rest last week.

The Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne took off from London's Heathrow Airport at 3:45 a.m. EST in a specially-fitted DC-8 of Air Canada. It is scheduled to land at Vancouver at 11:30 a.m. PDT.

The aircraft, chartered by the Canadian government for the royal entourage, has been fitted with two dressing rooms for the Queen and Prince Philip, each equipped with a couch-bed.

They return to London May 12 aboard the same aircraft.

The Queen, 45, faces a demanding schedule if appearances in connection with British Columbia's 100th birthday celebrations. They include a visit to the provincial parliament in Victoria, a dinner aboard the royal yacht Britannia and stops at a logging competition, a regatta, Indian ceremonies, a stampede and barbecue.

Rogers Views Disputed Land

It was thought likely that the secretary would get a look at the lands west of the Jordan River which Israel seized from Jordan in the 1967 war.

After a 22-hour stopover in the Jordanian capital, Rogers was flying late this afternoon to Beirut. There seemed to be a greater risk of anti-American demonstrations there than at any other stop on his trip to four Arab states and Israel.

Troops riding Land Rovers mounted with machine-guns escorted Rogers's motorcade from the airport to a royal palace in Amman. But there were no signs of protest.

Demonstrating how his regime has regained control over the capital the 36-year-old king took the wheel for a drive about town with Rogers after giving a sumptuous banquet in his honor.

Saudi Arabia's King Faisal told Rogers during a two-hour meeting at Riyadh that he hopes for a peace settlement as soon as possible, U.S. officials said. But a Saudi Arabian spokesman made plain that the king's version of a peace solution included Israeli surrender of the lands taken in the 1967 war.

The Jordanians in addition have reservations about Rogers' promoting a deal to reopen the Suez canal as a step toward an over-all peace agreement. They fear that an accord covering only the Suez could harden into permanency and freeze out Jordan's demands for return of the territories she lost.

Leading Leftist Ousted

CAIRO (CP) — Observers in Cairo today attributed the dismissal of Vice-President Aly Sabry, the Egyptian government's leading leftist, to his opposition to the federation with Libya and Syria.

Sabry was fired two days before the arrival in Cairo of U.S. State Secretary William Rogers for talks with President Anwar Sadat on the Arab-Israeli stalemate. But although Sabry is notably anti-American, Rogers' visit was not believed to be a factor in the Egyptian's dismissal.

Rumors of a rift between Sadat and Sabry had circulated in Cairo for several days. Brief announcement early today by Egypt's Middle East news agency and the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram said only that Sabry had been "relieved."

The vice-president was reported to have objected to Sadat's signing of the Egypt-Syria-Libya federation agreement last week without waiting for a collective decision by other members of the government.

Ceylon Rebels Stage Attacks

COLOMBO (AP) — Hawkish leaders of Ceylon's youth revolt were reported today to have ordered a series of attacks on security forces throughout the island in an effort to stop the widespread surrenders during the government's four-day amnesty which ends Tuesday.

An official communique said the attacks were sporadic and had been beaten off in "swift and effective action" by troops and police.

Stepped-up raids by the rebels on villages and civil administration offices also were reported in the communique, resulting in the destruction of post offices in the Northwest province and in Kegalle district, 50 miles northeast of Colombo.

The government announced that 908 insurgents surrendered in various parts of the island in the first two days of the official amnesty proclaimed by Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike.

PRIME MINISTER TRUDEAU gives affectionate pat to Skana, Vancouver Public Aquarium's killer whale, after he opened the mammal's new pool Saturday. He also gingerly explored the trained whale's teeth. (CP Photo)

Trudeau Feeds Killer Whale

VANCOUVER (CP) — Security all around and silent tensions in a forest glade, and there was the prime minister popping a herring into the mouth of 1,200 pounds of killer whale with a grin like a meat-grinder.

Skana was hungry as usual and Pierre Elliott Trudeau was providing the snacks.

Up came Skana, then up again, rising as gracefully as a Polaris missile.

The prime minister, a bit leary of all those teeth, managed a quick jowl massage for his dinner guest, and the crowd cheered.

In short, Pierre Trudeau visited Stanley Park Saturday to officially open the Vancouver public aquarium's new whale pool which Skana shares with Hyak, another killer whale, and Diana the dolphin.

The visit—private except for the opening ceremonies—lasted for nearly three hours with Margaret Trudeau accompanying her husband for most of it.

Outside, there was a strangely silent crowd covering the entire spectrum of the protest movement in Canada as well as the plain curious and the cameras-bugs.

Women's lib was there, and the unemployed. There were protesters demanding a halt to the seal hunt in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and "oppression" in Quebec. Some of the protest signs were unprintable.

Only once did the prime minister acknowledge the presence of the hecklers.

"I hear some people out there saying it is the age of aquarius," he said. "I agree with that."

Troops Keep Streets Open

WASHINGTON (CP) — Anti-Vietnam war demonstrators clashed repeatedly with police and snarled rush-hour traffic in the United States capital today, but the arrest of more than 5,000 of them frustrated protesters' efforts to paralyze the government. Flying squads of policemen wielded billy clubs and fired volley after volley of tear gas.

Squads of police, backed up by National Guard forces and federal troops, kept traffic flowing across major bridges into the capital. But numerous intersections in the city itself were blocked temporarily by the demonstrators' hit-and-run tactics.

The city is open; the traffic is flowing; the government is functioning," U.S. Attorney-General John N. Mitchell said at mid-morning. Mayor Walter Washington agreed, saying the demonstrators "did not succeed."

Demonstrators appeared to have been thwarted in two of their major objectives—blocking four Potomac River bridges and marching on the Pentagon.

But the protesters tied up traffic in the Georgetown and downtown areas by hurling debris—and in some cases themselves—onto the streets in dozens of locations. Some vehicles were overturned and others set afire.

The demonstrators were almost all young men, many of them bearded and some wearing head bands. However, there was a considerable sprinkling of young women.

Kierans Says Tax Policy Should Not Favor Use of Capital

TORONTO (CP) — Special tax privileges should be ended for businesses that emphasize capital as opposed to labor content in their enterprises, former communications minister Eric Kierans said Sunday night.

Mr. Kierans, who quit the federal cabinet last Wednesday in a dispute over economic policy, told a CBC television interviewer that national tax policy "seems to favor those fellows who use plant and equipment as distinct from those fellows who use labor."

Appearing on the program Weekend, Mr. Kierans said he has no wish to change the tax law to "discriminate in favor of labor, just to give them an even break."

Mr. Kierans, a self-made millionaire said that if he was to return to business today he would over-employ capital—that is to put a lot of money into plant and equipment and underemploy labor because of the current tax law.

"You get so many tax concessions and bonuses for putting your money into capital and equipment that you tend to use as little labor as you can," he said.

Despite the high unemployment in Canada, Mr. Kierans said he was not arguing for special tax breaks for labor-promoting businesses, although if the government is to favor something, that is what it should favor.

Rather, the government should take a neutral position.

Mr. Kierans gave special emphasis to tax policy in his first major statement following his resignation from the Trudeau cabinet.

By discriminating against labor content, taxes are reduced enormously from the corporate sector in differing amounts depending on the industry, he said.

Service industries which employ large numbers of people, something like 1,700,000, pay far more taxes than oil and gas which employ about 120,000. The latter take full advantage of accelerated depreciation and other tax devices arising from capital investment. Big firms get a better break than small firms on the same basis.

As a result, "you have this discrimination as between one industry to another and, really, the discrimination is working against those that employ large amounts of labor." Some of the privileges ought to be removed to correct the situation.

Mr. Kierans said Canada had been too quick to sell off its resources to foreign operators for processing abroad. He labelled Canadian officials "the worst bargainers in the world and the more times we go down to Washington the more we prove what easy targets we are . . ."

The proposed pipeline to carry Alaska oil across Canada to U.S. markets should not go ahead without something in return from American producers, Mr. Kierans said. One benefit Canada should receive is a petro-chemical plant in Alberta.

Mr. Kierans also said that various ministers dealing with economic policy in the federal cabinet often work at cross-purposes. There ought to be some kind of integration falling short of a super-ministry.

The main reason for the Kierans' resignation was his claim that Canadian natural resources are being siphoned off by foreign owners. Heskept returning to this point in the half-hour interview.

He said that "all I'm arguing is that the price of what this stuff is being sold at should be higher by the amount of the taxes that we are giving up in order to attract them."

At another point he said: "We're giving it away. We're giving it away."

Mr. Kierans said he had more luck influencing his fellow cabinet members than the Ottawa civil service establishment.

"It's to somehow get them to change some of their thinking and is the real problem in Ottawa," he said.

The civil service has got to rid itself of the idea "that a decision taken in Ottawa is, ipso facto, a good decision."

The same kind of decision taken by provincial governments, for example, or by "you and I" as consumers, or by business is not necessarily in the best interests of the country.

In the tax field, this means it would "be better to reduce taxes on a personal or corporate basis, and let a whole host of individuals make their own decisions."

Increased Efficiency Needed

OTTAWA (CP) — New governmen policies are needed to increase competitiveness and efficiency as well as spending power to achieve long-term growth and price stability, says Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada.

Dr. Smith said the best way to create full employment in Canada's rapidly growing labor market is to create "a very strong growth in total demand, both export and domestic demand."

At the same time, inflation must be fought by stimulating productivity and competitiveness and helping workers and businessmen to move from declining areas of the economy to expanding areas.

He was speaking on the CTV program Question Period, broadcast Sunday.

He held out little hope of an early end to either unemployment or inflation.

Both required policies with long time-lags, lasting years.

Bert Lawrence to Open Campbellford Hospital

CAMPBELLFORD (Special) — Health Minister Bert Lawrence will formally open the Campbellford Memorial Hospital May 26.

His visit will climax a two-year building program, that's posed problems of noise, dust and inconvenience for staff and patients.

At the hospital board's annual meeting April 29, chairman W. F. Scott paid tribute to the staff, from kitchen and laundry personnel to medical and nursing staff, for their patience and acceptance of having to work under trying conditions during construction.

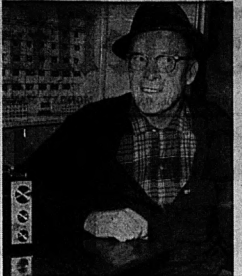
The long delay in completion of the building program was caused by some changes in plans, unexpected delays in the arrival of building materials and a strike of building employees.

A new addition has been put on the building, service centres in the original building refurbished, laboratory services enlarged and an additional operating room has been equipped. The hospital now has 30 extra beds, a large solarium furnished by the Women's Auxiliary, a chapel designated by the administration as the Quiet Room, a new entrance and a tuck shop operated by the Women's Auxiliary. A physical therapy room is being organized.

Dr. T. A. Cunningham, chief of medical staff, said that medical education at the hospital is a continuing process, with the use of new equipment, films and lectures. The staff is augmented, when necessary, by visiting surgeons.

The four intern nurses who have been in Campbellford for the past year have asked for staff positions when they graduate.

Mrs. W. F. Scott, Women's Auxiliary, president, announced that the Auxiliary has contributed $53,370 to the hospital since 1953.



Mrs. F. G. DeCarrell is director of the nursing staff and said it is expected that a group of intern nurses will be admitted to the nursing staff in the fall.

The hospital board is made up of 13 members. Five are appointed — one each from the municipalities of Campbellford, Percy and Seymour townships, one from the Women's Auxiliary and one from the medical staff.

The remaining eight are elected for two-year terms on alternate years.

The four who are remaining in office for another year are W. F. Scott, F. G. Linton, Jesse Locke and Ralph Locke.

The four recently elected for a two-year term are J. F. R. Douglas, R. Petley, P. O'Sullivan and W. McComb. G. H. board many years, was made an honorary member.

Ralph Conder Now Ashore

Reluctant Seaman Grew to Love Job

By MARGARET BAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — A sailor whose son has just re-packed with tales of adventure on the Great Lakes, Glenora ferries engineer Ralph Conder laid Friday became a landlubber.

The veteran seaman retired following 19 years of service with the Ontario Department of Highways aboard the ferries Quinte and Quinte Loyalist.

A former Belleville resident, Mr. Conder saw the sea from the deck of The Arlington, a bulk freighter owned by the Mathews steamship company. After sailing with the crew of this boat for one season the young seaman abandoned ship.

In the next few years he worked as an employee with the City of Toronto, labored with a construction crew and became a relief aboard a current carrier. His sailing career began in earnest in 1952 when he signed aboard the Northton as a fireman. This large steam freighter, owned by the Canadian Steamships Co., was later torpedoed off the east coast and went down with all hand aboard. Mr. Conder, fortunately had joined another ship a few days before the sinking of the Northton.

The engineer recalls his pay during the Northton years was about $40 a month. The sailing season was short and in the slack periods Mr. remained tied at the dock awaiting occasional late loads.

An enterprising youth, Mr. Conder was promoted from the fire hold to the deck after. He worked as, an oiler aboard the Northton for two years. Later he took the necessary time to permit him to qualify for his fourth class certificate.

Mr. Conder sailed the Upper Lakes and the St. Lawrence River on the motor ship Three Blue Cross. At this time he was a third class engineer working under a permit. When war broke out in 1939 he was promoted to second class engineer.

"The war years were troublesome times," reflects Mr. Conder as he considers his lengthy sailing career. One of the major problems faced by steamship companies in the war years was the scarcity of sailors. All officers were "frozen" on board ship and could not leave without permission. It was during this period when recruits were few that Mr. Conder first met Rudolph. He remembers him as "a German who came on ship as an oiler." This particular oiler was complete with camera and typewriter and devoted his spare time to photographing the Great Lakes and its ships. He received no mail and expressed a curious reluctance to allow a fellow sailor to mail a letter for him. His suspicious conduct prompted notification of the RCMP who "checked out" this typewriter toting oiler. All of Rudolph's credentials proved false. He was apparently a German spy but he was not, to Mr. Conder's knowledge, ever apprehended.

Mr. Conder remained a second class engineer until 1946 when he became chief engineer aboard the City of Belleville. This was a spanking new ship originally built for skimming the China Coast. For five years Mr. Conder worked aboard the package freighter sailing between Belleville and Montreal. In 1952 he accepted a job with the crew of the Glenora ferries, and moved to Picton three years later. Born in Waupos in Prince Edward County, Mr. Conder later retired in Belleville for 15 years and refers to happy years spent on Albert Street, then a railroad community.

"There's been a tremendous change", he remarks speaking of operations at the Glenora ferries. "All we had when I started was the old Quinte, a shovel and a pick axe. The traffic was light then except for weekends. We had to shovel the snow by hand every winter, there were no snow plows," he comments. Mr. Conder also remembers that when he first began his job at Glenora engineers worked with hand controls in the engine room. Today there is remote control from the wheelhouse.

Would he do it all over again? Mr. Conder admits, "I didn't want to be a sailor in the first place but I grew to love the work and today I'm very glad I was one."

The retired seaman declares his vocation provided him with invaluable experience that "you can't get in any other job." He speaks enthusiastically of visiting new ports and of meeting new crew members. It's a life in itself, since you live aboard ship with these men almost 24 hours a day. He teaches you about your fellow man," observes Mr. Conder.

Mr. Conder's most student of human nature Mr. Conder says his years at the Glenora ferries taught him that women travellers invariably are more friendly than their male counterparts. Over the hundreds of thousands of people when I worked there and the women almost always smiled and waved," he reports. The men, however, were more reserved when crossing on the ferries.

Mr. Conder notes he will always remember the beauty of sunrise and sunset at sea and the wild storms which sometimes "rocked the boat." While sailing a Great Lakes freighter Mr. Conder recalls a storm which caught his boat off Point Petre. When the crippled ship limped into Port Weller Mr. Knapton after retracing her course she had 14 cracks across her deck. He was awarded a medal for the ship and her crew.

Mr. Conder has planned a Maritime vacation to kick off his retirement days. He and his wife Lucille, hope to travel through the eastern provinces in June. To keep them in a holiday mood the Conders can enjoy music played by the transistor radio presented to Mr. Conder when he retired from the Glenora ferries' crew members of the Glenora ferries. Home from the sea, Ralph Conder has a thick book of memories of the days when small freighters plied the Great Lakes.

The Blossom Queen competition will be held at 8 p.m., May 26 at Pinecrest Memorial Hall School, Bloomfield. The age limit this year has been extended to include all single girls from 16 to 21 years of age residing in the rural Quinte area. Contestants will be narrowed to three semi-finalists in the pageant held in Bloomfield, May 26.

The Blossom Queen will be crowned at the Quinte Blossom Festival dance at Kente School, Ameliasburg, on May 28. Music will be provided by The Men of Note, Trenton. Many additional prizes will be offered to this year's contestants in the beauty pageant. This year's queen, Elizabeth Dozzee, 19 - year - old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Dozzee, Dozzee's Corners, will preside at all events.

The Quinte Apple Blossom Queen is the only apple queen in Ontario. Miss Dozzee last year was present at the opening of the Royal Winter Fair and also visited a number of Toronto schools distributing apples. She attended press receptions and appeared nationally on television as a guest on the CBC's Farmer Gilmour Show. She also represented local apple growers at district fairs.

Orchard tours will be organized on May 29 in the blossom belts of the farms of Summer Dawson, Allan Wesse and Bruce Little. Mr. Little's orchard, in the Waupoos area, will be toured on May 30 since blossoms are later in this part of Prince Edward. Other tours will be postponed until May 30 if weather conditions make them impossible on May 23.

Area square dance teams this year will swing their partners beneath the blossoms providing entertainment for visitors enjoying orchard tours. Refreshment booths will be set up in all orchards hosting the Quinte Apple Blossom Festival.

Good-sized Catch

The smallest of several pickerel Brian Cooney, 14, of 14 Ramsey Avenue, Trenton, pulled in fishing with a bucktailed jig below No. 1 dam on the Trent River over the weekend. It weighed just over three pounds.

Early Pickerel Go for Jigs

TRENTON (Special) — The pickerel and pike season officially opened here on the Trent River below No. 1 dam during the weekend with hundreds of anglers, many of them from the Toronto area, returning to the widely known fast-water fishing spot.

More welled lines than went home with catches, however, while the weather, rain and threatening skies off and on, offered little encouragement. But, the principal complaint was about high water (the spring runoff is still rolling down from the north) surging over the dam with a lot of debris mixed in with the natural feed.

Little comment was heard about mercury contamination and Doug Sutherland of Trenton said he would eat the two-pound pickerel he caught for supper. "I guess a dozen a week might hurt me, but if I was lucky enough to get one every week like this or even bigger I'd take a chance," he explained, showing off the fish he was taking home.

Another local youth who reeled in several good-sized pickerel casting off the west bank below the dam reported he'd provided the evening meal for the family without anyone mentioning a fear of being poisoned.

Catching pickerel in fast water takes patience and know-how, one veteran river fisherman pointed out. Currently the best results are obtained with a jig — a weedless hook, hidden by a bucktail and weighted down with a lead sinker — as bait and lure combined.

IN MEMORIAM

BUTTON — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister Dorothy Button who passed away May 3, 1966.

Years we saw you sinking,
We watched you fade away,
We could not help you darling,
As death took you away.
When we saw you slipping,
Remember God saw your pain.
We could not with you back daughter,
So He took you again.
To suffer that was over.

Always remembered by mother, dad and sisters and brothers.

BADGLEY — In loving memory of our dear husband and Peter, who passed away May 3, 1967.
Time may change from year to year
And days from day to day.
But memory will the same I loved,
From memory pass away.

ANAF News

Unit members were saddened to learn of the passing of an old comrade, LeRoy Woods, and extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved family. The Duke of Edinburgh held the ANAF service for him and they were joined by a half a dozen members, including vice-president Pat Hughes from Branch 193, RCL, from Campbellford as the late comrade had been a member there before moving to Belleville. Padre Bram Hannifred and Past President R. G. Burns conducted the service at the funeral chapel.

A good crowd was on hand Thursday evening to enjoy watching a great demonstration of weightlifting by the champions of the Apollo Bar Bell Club. The manager and coach gave a very interesting commentary on the prowess of the weightlifters and described the various kind of lifts as they were made. It was well enjoyed by all and each lift was greeted with hearty applause. Comrade Dick Burns thanked the Apollo club for the demonstration on behalf of Unit 201 while the entertainment chairman invited all to join for a very tasty lunch and refreshments to finish a good evening.

At the Friday evening social the unit was pleased to welcome a number of out-of-town guests who had arrived to take part in the big Open Dart Tournament. As they danced to the toe - tingling music of the Marg Flett Trio and relaxed and listened to Marg singing her happy songs, they seemed to enjoy the comfort of the gracious Tartan Lounge and be fully prepared for the strenuous efforts of Saturday. On Friday the orchestra will be Smitty and his Troubadors to supply the entertainment and swinging dance music. Get yourself a gang together and join in the merriment and dancing.

A gentle reminder that next Sunday is Mother's Day. Be sure and remember your own mothers and the mother of your children. They're pearls without price. Grannies also love to be remembered. They are the best!

Chairman of the sick committee reports that the following comrades are still in the Belleville General Hospital: A. Austin, 461; H. Dumphy, 91; R. Reid, 738; G. Cornell, 521; E. Switzenburg, 508 and L. Vance, 308. Cde. J. R. Boyle returned to his home Saturday. All have been cared for.

The exponents of the miniature harpoon gathered in the Tartan Lounge from across Southern Ontario at 10 a.m. Saturday morning. The first round started and from then on friendship ceased as, by pairs in the doubles and four-man teams strove mightily to outshoot one another.

Spectacular shots became common and when the din and dust of battle had subsided, players from Toronto and Ottawa were leading the pack. Team winners were J. Jardine, W. Ray, F. North and R. Turner of the Toronto Beaches Club. The runners up, members of an Ottawa Legion Branch, were E. Mudry, R. Allaire, B. Edmonds and E. Dale. In the doubles competition the finalists and runners-up were R. Turner and F. North of Toronto. The two semi-finalist pairs both received runner-up prizes. They were E. Mudry and B. Edmonds of Ottawa and J. Jardine and W. Green of Toronto.

The Ladies Auxiliary were kept busy making their tasty sandwiches which were appreciated during the hectic hours of play. The tournament ended about 6 p.m. and the prizes were presented to and yet another very successful tournament.

Troops

had been billed in advance as a massive show of non-violent civil disobedience, but even before dawn it turned into a series of hit-and-run clashes with riot-equipped police.

Lining up the four major bridges linking Virginia with the capital were an estimated 2,000 troops, standing almost shoulder to shoulder and holding rifles with sheathed bayonets.

During a normal rush hour, the bridges carry 76,000 cars. Traffic on the bridges was stopped at dawn, but generally it was about like any other Monday morning flow of suburban commuters heading for jobs in the city.

Hundreds of the commuters were caught in clouds of tear gas fired by police to disperse demonstrators in Georgetown and in the area near the Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials and the Washington Monument. Like the protesters, they held handkerchiefs to streaming eyes and stinging noses.

"The police and military are keeping the upper hand but they are having their hands full," said a city official.

The capital city was like an armed camp. The demonstrators were on before dawn for the promised confrontation, climax of more than two weeks of anti-war activity here aimed at supporting demands for an immediate end to the Vietnam conflict.

More attempts to tie up traffic were promised for Tuesday.

Helicopters buzzed constantly over the rooftops and jeep convoys of rifle-toting military police raced through the city, sirens screaming. Helmeted police were everywhere.

Police fought roaming street battles with militants outside the state department, and tear gas permeated the halls of the building.

Rush-hour traffic began at least an hour and a half earlier than usual. Government employees tried to beat any tie-ups by leaving themselves plenty of time to get to their jobs.

Some employees of the defence department—which was to be a main target of demonstrations today—arrived at their jobs at 4:30 a.m.

But the protesters, too, were on the job early, the first incidents were reported around 5:30 a.m.

By 6 a.m. thousands of denim-clad, long-haired demonstrators were in the streets. The main road arteries of the fashionable suburb of Georgetown—which also is the hippie centre of the capital—were thronged with young people.

Many of them had tramped the streets all night after the justice department ordered a total ban on sleeping out in all city parks.

While traffic snarled at some intersections in the downtown and Georgetown areas—the so called Mayday demonstration appeared to be failing short of its goal of a massive lieup of commuter traffic.

Jails were quickly filled to overflowing. Police then began taking busloads of prisoners to the Washington Redskins' football practise field and to D.C. Jail exercise yard.

Demonstrators shoved parked cars into the street, dumped trash cans and set them afire, spread nails and puddles of oil on the pavement, ripped up bricks from sidewalks and hurled them at passing cars. A truck filled with paper was set afire at one intersection.

Prince Edward Farmers Stage Produce Give-away

PICTON (Staff)— Members of the National Farmers Union local 333 staged a give-away of their farm produce Saturday to promote what they claimed was "person - to - person contact with city families".

Shoppers thronged at a parking area opposite a Picton supermarket to receive free potatoes, apples, eggs and unpasteurized milk. The milk was labelled "not fit for sale" and NFU poster pasted to the display set-up in the back of a half-ton truck.

Literature passed out among shoppers by NFU members declared that 1970 marked the anniversary of 20 consecutive years of low-net farm income. A leaflet stated that Canada is losing farmers now at a rate of 1,000 a month. It was added that present federal agriculture policies are being modelled on recommendations made by the federal task force on agriculture which proposes to solve the farm problem by removing two thirds of today's farmers. The NFU feels that such a step will create "another urban problem". It is their contention that for every seven farmers leaving the farm, one rural - businessman is forced out of business. "The chain reaction is right back to you," stated the NFU leaflet.

President of local 333 of the NFU Kenneth Marriott a s i d Saturday that the produce give-away was being carried out province-wide in an attempt to emphasize the organization's viewpoints to the urban dweller.

He said that 100 dozen eggs and 2,000 pounds of milk had been gathered for Saturday's gigantic free shopping spree. The produce was donated by members of local 333 of the NFU and distributed by them to shoppers.

Farmers Happy With Demonstration Reaction

Ontario Farm Union members from the Quinte district feel that Saturday's give-away program protesting the disparity of farm prices was a success.

"We were quite satisfied," said Mrs. G. - Williams, of Springbrook, former president of the Ontario Farm Union women's organization, "we talked to a lot of people and a lot of people were sympathetic to the farmers' position.

To emphasize the low prices received by farmers for their produce, farm union members from Hastings and Prince Edward counties gave away milk, eggs and vegetables at two locations in Belleville on Saturday. One was at Bad Boy's and the other on Bridge Street opposite the Belleville Plaza. A third stand was operated at Picton.

One farmer helping to man the west Belleville stand said "we may as well give it away considering the price we have to take for our produce."

While the free, milk and eggs were being given out, other farmers carried placards emphasizing the farmers' position.

And quite a few of the "customers" lingered long enough to hear a verbal account of low farm prices as compared to the high cost of production.

Assault Charged

An early Sunday morning attack on a Front Street restaurateur led to the arrest of James Morgan, 34, of Bleecker Avenue and charges laid for assault causing bodily harm.

Sendy Jung, proprietor of the Paragon Restaurant had just closed his business when four young men tried to gain admittance. Mr. Jung refused and was struck in the face by one man. Two three-inch cuts and numerous abrasions occurred when flying glasses were broken.

The man fled to a nearby taxi, but police made immediate arrests. Lesser charges were laid against the other three.

Ontario of Yesterday

Whether they were the good old days or not is debatable, but the Ontario of a century or more ago nevertheless bore a stability and character that are missing from today's frenetic and permissive age. We touched on this theme recently in a reference to a picture of an outing on Forester's Island in the Bay of Quinte near Deseronto. The picture, which appeared in The Picton Gazette, was taken in 1889.

Now those days have been brought to life again by Belleville businessmen and author Nick Mika and his wife Helma, in their remarkable publication, Ontario As Yesterday. Well-known for their detailed books on past days in Belleville, Kingston, Trenton and Toronto, this new work is easily the most ambitious of the series.

There was a sanity and integrity about the times depicted in the hand screened color plates from the Mika Studio that are in sharp contrast to the "anything goes," undisciplined era through which we are passing. They were days when work was gladly accepted as both a duty and a discipline, and necessary for development of body, mind and character. They were days also for the outdoors, and recreation in which many citizens participated.

From a random selection of the plates one obtains an image of those times: With the lumbermen of the Upper Ottawa, for one; a sugar bush, maple sugar making; the ice harvest — cutting and hauling the blocks; lacrosse on the ice; a country dance; curling bonspiel; tobogganing at Rideau Hall; the croquet lawn; harvest scene, a grist mill; private theatricals at Rideau Hall, and numerous other scenes. Of local interest is a picture of the School for the Deaf.

"Those were the days when hoop skirts and crinolines were being replaced by the provocative 'bustle,' just coming into vogue in ladies' fashions. Most towns and cities offered a great variety of entertainment at their local Opera Houses. Travelling theatre companies from the States toured the province, and from England the great Oscar Wilde himself came to lecture on 'the value of art in education and the relation of art to morals.' When Barnum's big circus show arrived in town, everyone was apt to call it a holiday and watch the colourful parade. Church socials and country dances were as popular as picnics, strawberry festivals, chivarees and annual fairs. Cruising down the lakes in a steamer with a lively band on board was a delightful pastime for young and old. Cheap excursion trips across Lake Ontario to American ports were sure to attract large crowds on weekends and holidays. Everyone participated in sports and outdoor games. Race tracks, cricket fields, and skating rinks were the centres of social life."

We could have no better reflection of those times than the foregoing. As we noted in a recent editorial it concerns an era long vanished, light years in terms of customs, morals, means of transportation and much else. Yet they still evoke a strong sense of nostalgia. Belleville was as much part of those days as any. We think of steamer trips on the bay, and did not Oscar Wilde perform here on one of his Canadian visits?

The Mikas, whose origins are in Europe, and who are familiar with the traditions of that continent, recall in this handsome new volume the more recent history of our own comparatively young nation. They have done it in a manner which bespeaks respect and admiration for their adopted country. At the same time they have made a further valuable contribution to the literature of this province and country.

Stamp Lore

Philatelists and the public generally may as well take a special interest in the contemporary 6-cent stamp, for the word is that by mid-summer it will be up to 7 cents, and by early next year 8 cents. One of the current crop marks the centennial of the birth of Lord Rutherford. And from New Zealand, where he was born, comes word that the Rutherford Lecture, held triennially by the Royal Society of that country, will be delivered in Christchurch in September by a grandson of the pioneer nuclear physicist. He is Professor P. H. Fowler, of the University of Bristol and he will speak on "Evolution of Elements — on the track of atomic particles, ancient and modern."

Honeymoon Period Over

U.S. and Communist China in Political Chess Game

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — The brief days of euphoria, when the problems of United States relations with China were being made to seem as wispy as silk, are fading quickly now that the ping-pong team is home.

The state department has clearly moved into the second phase of its diplomatic manoeuvring and there are increasing indications here that President Nixon and his foreign-policy advisers have planned well in advance for potential breakthroughs in the long deadlock between the two countries.

The clearest sign-post came in a state department briefing in which the problem of "two China"—the Communist-ruled mainland and Nationalist-ruled Formosa—was solved with particular new emphasis to be a question that the rival governments can resolve themselves, possibly by mutual agreement.

State department spokesman Charles W. Bray also said: "We must deal with the practical situation as we find it. . . . Mainland China has been established and administered by the People's Republic of China for 21 years and for those time we have been dealing with that government on matters affecting our mutual interest."

More than any other recent American statements, the views are being seen here as a carefully-thought-out step away from the virtually unconditional U.S. support in the past for the Chiang Kai-shek government and its claims to represent all of China from its fortress on Formosa.

The move seems to have been some time in preparation. Apart from the China-U.S. talks in Warsaw—about which little has been revealed—it appears that Nixon has used intermediaries, perhaps the Romanians, to signal a new American willingness to start afresh with Peking.

Although there are likely to be other enlightening disclosures and shifts of position in weeks to come, observers here believe that the most crucial test of U.S. relations with China is likely to come over Chinese representation in the United Nations.

So rapid have been developments in the China question, however, that a position which seemed nearly insoluble a short while ago now has begun to appear open to solution. The speed of the change indicates once more that careful preparation has been going on behind the scenes.

The main stumbling block always has been Peking's insistence by both Peking and Formosa that they speak for all of China and would not sit at the UN if the other party also is there.

50 Years On Campus For UBC's Walter Gage

Vancouver Sun

What the weekly UBC Reports with graceful alliteration, called "The Age of Gage" began half a century ago, when a young high school graduate signed up for courses majoring in mathematics and chemistry.

Without challenge, the most distinguished figure at UBC since he joined the faculty in 1926, Walter Gage became president of the university in 1960 during troubled times. It is significant, and more than mere luck, surely, that the campus has been free from disorder since, and that it is, at the moment, the only stable public university in the province.

NDP Resolutions On Colonialism and Racism Smack of Propaganda

Peterborough Examiner

The one good thing about the many resolutions passed at party conventions is that few of them are ever implemented. This may be simply because the party in question is never elected to form a government and therefore is never able to implement any kind of policy (though it can, as part of the opposition, influence government policy).

But, mostly these resolutions never become reality either because they are composed with total disregard to reality, or impossibility or because they have never been intended to be more than good material for propaganda pamphlets.

An ideal, like racial equality, can be turned around and used for destructive purposes. Demands for "democratic rights" have been used to subjugate entire nations and have led to world wars. Fights against "colonialism" have been directed to achieve political aims by communist dominated powers.

A classic example of this was demonstrated at the leadership convention of the New Democratic Party which passed resolutions condemning nations like South Africa, Portugal and Rhodesia for colonialism and racism.

The problem is not that these countries are condemned for their racist policies—they are the only countries condemned, giving the impression that they are the only colonials or racists.

That is not so.

This one-sided approach is obviously inspired by the ultra-leftists, whose aim is to cover up far more serious issues.

What is surprising is that the socialists of the NDP not to mention the Union Leaders totally fall for this and help spread the propaganda.

How can a union man condemn South Africa but ignore a number of other countries in non-white countries where racial discrimination is just as rampant and possibly more inhuman?

How can a Canadian union man protest the colonialism of Portugal but ignore the plight of the East Berlin workers who were machine-gunned; the fate of the Polish workers who a few months ago rioted with bare hands reportedly posted on the border; the maintenance of dictatorial regimes in Eastern Europe; the Soviet military threat, and so on?

When has the NDP protested the last time — or for the first time? — slavery in Middle Eastern, some Asian and African nations? When has the NDP suggested to stop dealing with the black dictators of Africa?

In fact, a sizeable part of the foreign aid an NDP resolution suggested we should double goes to dictatorial regimes in Africa.

The Dream—and the Reality

Richard Needham in the Globe and Mail

When I was a child going to Church of England schools we used to bawl out a hymn or quasi-hymn written by William Blake: "I will not cease from mental strife, nor shall my sword sleep in my hand, till we have built Jerusalem in England's green and pleasant land."

I thought of Blake when I read what Tommy Douglas had to say in his farewell speech to the New Democratic Party: "The supreme task of the party should be to make our dreams come true, to transform our city into the holy city, and make this, country into God's country."

His hum, I've been hearing this all my life. Vote for us, and we'll make Jerusalem. Follow me, and I'll lead you into the green pastures, the just society, the more abundant life, the brave new world, every man a king, every man a Ph.D., all tears wiped away and all eyes dry. Unfortunately, it never comes about; you give them the power, you give them the money, but always is the holy city they were going to create for you.

Jam tomorrow, as Alice lamented, but never jam today. No jam tomorrow, either. What always happens to the great and wonderful scheme to make everybody healthy and happy is that some unexpected obstacle degalls it. Or it gets lost in the bureaucratic mazes of government. Or someone comes up with a different scheme, for which the old one will have to be scrapped.

Local Children to Compete In Olympics for Retarded

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It was with great interest that I read of the plan to send some children from Belleville to the Olympics for the Retarded in Toronto this June.

The people who work in this city with these children do very well but there isn't it crowded and not ideal surroundings. Maybe the new school will be built for them as they deserve.

Speaking as a mother I can not help feeling how lucky one is to have normal children and I was thinking that with the focus on mothers this next month of every year mothers should be thankfulness by a small donation to Mrs. Stovell, 12 Pine St., we could send our contingent to Toronto without any problems. If every normal child in Belleville gave even a cent (collected at school) wouldn't that amount to something?

Military Spending Tops Educational Budgets Many Times Over

UNESCO Features

The world, in a manner of speaking, spends $100 a year to teach a child how to read and, a little later on in life, $7,800 a year to teach him how to shoot.

These figures correspond respectively to the amounts spent annually on the average school pupil and the average soldier. Expressed in cash, an article in the January issue of the Unesco Courier which is devoted to International Education Year 1970.

Comparative statistics on educational and military budgets are almost enough by themselves to indicate why the time is ripe for such a "year". The world as a whole spends $110-000 million on public education and $130.000 million, 40 per cent more, on armaments every year.

While it is the developed countries that have the most to military hardware, their education suffers the least as a result. They can still find $1,000 per capita for schooling — as compared to $5 in the developing countries and more education is needed the most.

However, as the Unesco Courier shows, Mr. Edgar Faure, director of the International Bureau of Education in Geneva, remarks in an article that school rate of drop-outs. "From the point of view of public funds, in the majority of developing countries it costs between two and three times as much to put a pupil through a basic primary school course as it would have cost had he remained in a normal pace of completing a grade a year," he writes.

Educational aid as capital is in great demand. John Chesswas of Unesco's Department of Planning and Financing of Education, provocatively asks: "Are there really too many teachers?" In a sampling of 19 developed and developing countries, it was found that there were over 100 — and one employee out of every 100 — a teacher.

He answers his question by raising another: "If more and more children are to be kept in school longer and longer — and how long formal education should last is itself a debatable question — then perhaps the time has come for a broad reassessment of current educational practices."

Epileptics Watching TV Can Take Precautions

BBC London Letter

It has been known for some time that epilepsy can be induced by flickering light, such as sunlight through railings or trees. Another cause which is becoming increasingly apparent is television. If you have a tendency to television epilepsy, it is most likely to occur when you are close to the set, adjusting the picture, or switching channels.

The BBC reports ways of reducing the risk, as recommended by two British medical research workers:

1. Watch your television at a distance of at least 2.5 m (eight feet).

2. Watch in a well - lit room, with a small, illuminated table lamp at the side of the set.

3. If it is necessary to adjust the set, try to get someone else to do it. If you have to do it yourself, put your hand over one eye.

4. If you feel that an epileptic attack is imminent do not close your eyes, but put your hand over one eye.

Revised Unemployment Insurance Act Explained at Seminar

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

The new Unemployment Insurance Act, undergoing its second reading in parliament, will provide coverage for 1¼ million workers previously excluded from receiving benefits.

Peter Connolly, executive assistant to Bryce Mackasey, federal minister of labor, told delegates to the first Quinte Area Labor Management Relations Advisory Committee seminar at Loyalist College, Saturday, that the increase to Canada's 5½ million workers included in the scheme would be implemented on July 1.

Under the old act, a wage ceiling of $7,800 per annum governed inclusion in the unemployment insurance plan, Noel Stockton, public relations officer for the UIC Ontario region, explained the $7,800 ceiling would remain, with benefits of two thirds of the weekly wages paid up to the $150 mark.

Mr. Stockton said, as an example, that a person who earned $20,000 per year would be eligible to receive unemployment benefits based on the maximum $7,800 ceiling, but these benefits would be added to his total yearly earnings. Thus, a contractor whose business involves only seven months out of the year, but earns him $20,000 would not be allowed to live off extra money from the UIC.

Mr. Connolly made specific mention of the fact that some of those to be included in the scheme with introduction of the new act in July, have referred to the proposal as disguised in that it is merely a form of taxation.

Mr. Connolly stressed that the UIC were quite honest in stating that it was a case of the employed people taking care of the needs of those who are unemployed.

"Mr. Mackasey has felt that what unemployed people are receiving was not sufficient to cover their needs," the public relations officer said at the seminar.

"He refers to the human loss of dignity to go on welfare and yet sometimes it was necessary for a person with a family to have two cheques coming along to keep his family alive; one of unemployment insurance and one of welfare.

"He also feels strongly that the conditions for entering into the benefit stream should be less exacting and so he proposed (for the new act) that instead of the worker requiring 30 working weeks in order to make him eligible for unemployment insurance, he has reduced the requirement to what is referred to as major and a minor attachment involving contribution of 30 working weeks and eight working weeks respectively," Mr. Stockton continued.

"In the case of major attachments, a sickness and maternity benefit will be included whereby people who are unemployed through sickness and married women who are unemployed through pregnancy would, under the terms of the new act, be eligible to draw unemployment insurance, whereas at the present time, both classes are strictly excluded."

The minister of labor backed up these statements in the Sunday CBC television program, The Nation's Business.

"Women in labor force today will be entitled to protection insofar as dismissal from work. They will be entitled to 17 weeks attachment to the work force and this, of course, ties in to the fact that they'll be entitled to unemployment insurance benefits for 15 weeks and these two things work very close together."

Mr. Mackasey also pointed out that "the equal pay means that there'll no longer be any discrimination at work or that women will not be expected to work for less wages for similar work."

Women teachers will continue to be eligible for unemployment insurance benefits if their husbands are transferred and their jobs subsequently terminated.

One of the delegates at the Saturday seminar questioned the overlapping of services of the UIC and Canada Manpower. She stated that Belleville residents were forced to go to Manpower for unemployment insurance information.

Mr. Stockton made plain that Manpower and the UIC are entirely divorced. "They're two different organizations altogether. The Canada Manpower Centre is not geared or informed to give information concerning unemployment insurance. By the same token the UIC is not geared to find employment for claimants.

"The district office for the Belleville locality is at Kingston and all inquiries concerning payments should be made to the Kingston office."

Mr. Stockton emphasized that "the Belleville office is the regional headquarters for Ontario and is for administration purposes only. The monitoring of all payments is done from the Belleville office."

The seminar panel, Mr. Connolly, Mr. Stockton, John J. Burke, public liaison officer for the UIC Ontario region, J. H. Craigs, Ontario Federation of Labor social services director and W. H. Wightman, industrial relations department manager with the Canadian Manufacturer's Association and John J. 'Lena' Is Tri-lingual Eskimo YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — "Call me Lena," says the first woman member of the governing council of the Northwest Territories—a tri-lingual Eskimo with brown, curly hair and a Danish accent.

Lena Pedersen, 30, appears shy and is soft-spoken until somebody raises an issue that concerns her deeply—and there are many.

Then she sounds like a veteran politician, in the best sense of the term, an advisement for someone with only a few months of "political" experience.

She was one of 18 N.W.T. residents elected to the Territorial Council last December following what some called "the lowest of the low-pressure campaigns" they had ever seen.

She declined to campaign from door to door among the 2,500 resident of the central Arctic constituency where she lives.

"There was just no point because I know the people and they know me."

There was also the problem that she might be lucky to get to half a dozen doors in a full day of campaigning. Lena, as all the people call her, is known everywhere in her part of the Arctic, and northern people appear to be the most hospitable in Canada.

"I arranged for just one meeting in each settlement and I told the people that I was running and what I believed and what I wanted."

Lena won the election with a 472-284 edge over Walter Porter, another Eskimo. A few weeks later, with little chance for promotion, she took her seat in the council chamber at Yellowknife with a condemnation of northern civil servants who, she said, have "zero impact" on most of the people.

She also told the council in her maiden speech that although unemployment goes as high as 90 per cent in some parts of her constituency, almost all of the jobs that become available from time to time, such as clerks and postmasters, go the wives of civil servants.

She was appointed a member of the council's first standing committee, on finance, and spent long evenings throughout the three-week session trying to master the one-inch-thick summary of appropriations.

The federal government controls the finances in the N.W.T., but says it is willing to listen to the council's suggestions on how the money should be spent.

Lena says shopping has given her some experience in detailed budget-making and financial operations.

"In the North we don't always do our shopping by the week. Sometimes it's by the month or even by the year."

She and her husband, Red, live in Coppermine, a community of about 700 hugging the barren grey rocks on the south shore of Coronation Gulf. Both have held a number of jobs but now own and operate tourist accommodations—five A-frame buildings arranged in a circle where the people from the airstrip enter the settlement.

Lena was born and raised in the Danish territory of Greenland. She and her husband came to Canada in 1959 and headed immediately for the North, where they felt at home.

Red's job with the northern affairs department later forced them to move to Ottawa.

Her seclusion became a boon when the Pedersens got their first television set.

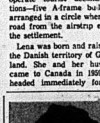
"All I did was sit in front of it, day after day," said Lena. "I watched everything—westerns, soap operas, children's shows—and I quickly learned English."

They were not sorry to return to the Arctic 10 months later.

Lena, with her new knowledge of English, found herself in demand as a government-employed translater—English to Eskimo—and as a Eskimo-language broadcaster for the CBC northern service.

She also became an adult education specialist in home making under contract to the N.W.T. government.

"The people are given houses by the government but they don't know how to live in these houses and make them homes. They don't understand how to work their appliances and how to budget their money, because it's a whole new way of life for them."



Lena abandoned this career to devote herself full time to the territorial council, to her children aged 5, 7, 9 and 10, and to helping her husband with the tourist accommodations.

Her children all speak Eskimo, English and Danish and Lena is an advocate of the open-door version of bilingualism and biculturalism in the schools.

English is generally used in schools throughout the North. Lena says Eskimos, like the Indians, are in danger of losing their language and culture because of this.

Eskimo and Danish are successfully used in Greenland's schools and there is no reason why the system can't be adopted here with Eskimo and English, she says.

She warned the council that unless it acts fast the native people will lose their roots.

Founder's Day Banquet

Mrs. Sharon Dracup, chairman of the Founder's Day banquet held by the Betta Sigma Phi sorority, and Mrs. Helen Fullerton, guest speaker, admire the head table centrepiece at the 40th anniversary celebration of the sorority. The event was held at the Four Seasons Hotel on Friday night when members were honored for 25 years of active service in the sorority.

Area Sorority Chapters Observe 40th Birthday at Annual Banquet

An enjoyable social hour preceded the annual banquet of Bta Sigma Phi which this year marked its 40th anniversary. There were 109 members from six Belleville and two Trenton chapters in attendance at the Four Seasons Hotel, on Friday evening.

Chairman of the event Mrs. Fred Dracup warmly greeted everyone and gave a special welcome to members from the Trenton chapters on this Founder's Day 1971. She also extended a warm welcome to all new pledges.

Four members of the sorority were honored for 25 years of continuous service and were presented with messages. These included: Mrs. Robert Boyce, Mrs. Jack Joslin, Mrs. John Lennox and Mrs. Bruce Miller.

Mrs. L. Roebeck, Belleville and Mrs. H. O. O'Neill of Trenton gave resumes of the Chapters' activities for the past year. Founder's Day pledge was given by Mrs. Frank Martin. A message from international was given by Mrs. John Sherry.

Since its founding in 1931, Beta Sigma Phi has grown to be an international organization which gives its members an intimate touch with many lives. Beta Sigma Phi serves as a safeguard against narrowed friendships. It was noted the history of Beta Sigma Phi is being written daily by every one of its members in much the same way a colorful tapestry may be woven by a number of different hands.

Guest speaker Mrs. Helen Fullerton, who was introduced by Mrs. John Day gave a most interesting talk on city council, which relates to a grouping of the various chapters in the sorority.

Mrs. E. Belyea expressed thanks to the speaker.

A vote for this amalgamation was taken, in which Belleville voted yes, and Trenton declined at this time.

FRANKFORD — Members of the Frankford Squares group received their mortarboards and diplomas at the graduation dance held on April 24. Following this, the square dance pledges were repeated by all 99 or more persons present.

The graduates were Abel and Rita Parsons, Nelson and Madeline Vader, Ray and Marie Coatsworth, David and Doreen Dunbar, Maurice and Helen Dafoe, Roy and Doreen Langabeer, Edward and Marie Peck, Edison and Ila Sine, Harry and Edna McMullen, Audrey Gould and Stella Stewart.

Birthday greetings were extended to Margaret Cowan and anniversary greetings to Ray and Marie Coatsworth.

Dancing was followed by a delicious potluck supper at which Mervin and Leona Dafoe and Keith and Jean Woodley presented a birthday cake to Douglas Haddell.

Abel Parsons on behalf of the class thanked Mr. and Mrs. Haddell for their time, patience and especially for the fun enjoyed by all throughout the season.

Earlier during the season, a valentine social was held and the proceeds were donated to the workshop for the retarded in Trenton, St. Patrick's day was celebrated with a potluck supper followed by dancing.

On April 24, a busload of members went to Lindsay where they were guests of the Lindsay Circle Eights club.

One Name For Nurses Suggested

TORONTO (CP) — The two titles identifying nurses should be dropped and all women in the profession known simply as nurses, the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario was told Saturday.

The suggestion was made by Elsbeth Geiger, president of the College of Nurses of Ontario, who asked association members to consider the idea but not vote on it.

At present, nurses with Grade 10 and completing a special one or two-year course are called registered nursing assistants.

Those with Grade 12 or better and completing a two- or three-year course at a school of nursing or with a number of experience in nursing are called registered nurses.

Miss Geiger said the different titles sometimes lead to confusion or conflict, but nursing is a single discipline.

There are about 22,000 assistants in Ontario and about 60,000 registered nurses.

The association approved a resolution to change its Kingston chapter that the assistant nurses be urged to remain under the direction of the College of Nurses and not move under a proposed health disciplines regulation board.

The association also approved resolutions that it urge the federal health and welfare minister, John Munro, to ban the promotion and advertisement of cigarettes, and that individual association members try to help other members stop smoking.

The association's three-day meeting ended Saturday.

Equality of the Sexes Necessary in This Case

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My husband comes home at all hours from the bar and expects me to wait on him hand and foot. He won't do anything for me and the children but is always running after his parents, who are capable of taking care of themselves.

He doesn't permit me to even join the women's auxiliary. He expects me to just stay at home all the time and work while he runs around.

— I'm Desperate

Dear Desperate: Who would not be? In these days of Women's Lib and equality of the sexes and all that jazz, your story sounds like an anachronism.

Being a drudge isn't what marriage is about at all. If you can't stand up to him for your own sake, think about those two little girls. Are they going to grow up into subservient, cowed females?

Even your husband would be happier — believe it or not — if you would act more like a person and less like a mouse.

* * *

Dear Doris: When our son graduated from the university his father and I gave him a ring with the B.Sc. crest on it. These rings cost $40.

He didn't wear this ring a week until he gave it to his girl friend to wear. We told him we felt hurt about this; that we bought the ring for him. So when this girl went to England for a visit our son asked her for the ring.

The other day I noticed he wasn't wearing the ring again. When I asked, he said it was at Blanktown, meaning his girl friend had it again. She is going to university there.

What do you think of this? We have helped this son financially ever since he started university. Have we a right to feel — Hurt?

Dear Hurt: Yes, you have the right — if you feel like indulging yourselves. But-let us look at his side of it.

Obviously his girl is more than a passing fancy. He wants to make some claim on her; give her some symbolic assurance that she is important to him. In a way, the "giving and receiving of a ring" brings them close to each other.

If their love is for real, he will one day replace this ring with a diamond and get his own back. If they break off she should most certainly return it to him; probably will without asking.

Dear Doris: Please send any information you may have that would be helpful to one who is doubtful about her own feelings toward her fiance. — Watching It Happen

Dear Watching: My first and most personal response is that if there are doubts, hold up the works. A jilting before the wedding is a good deal easier than an un-hitching later.

I'm sending you the leaflet "What is Love?"

Some of our young brides got married because everybody's doing it. The awakening comes later. Don't let it happen in your daughter's case.

TEACH IN THE NORTH — Sylvia Haslam, language specialist and primary and kindergarten supervisor with the federal department of Indian Affairs in northern Manitoba says "If you want to enjoy yourself and have a satisfying life, teach in the North." Mrs. Haslam is involved in federal and provincial planning to sponsor a new teacher-training program primarily for Indian people. (CP Photo)

Teaching in the North Gives Real Satisfaction

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — "If you are interested in teaching and want to find out what it is all about; if you want to enjoy yourself and have a satisfying life, teach in the North."

This is the advice of Sylvia Haslam, language arts specialist and primary and kindergarten supervisor with the federal department of Indian affairs in northern Manitoba.

Mrs. Haslam's eyes sparkle and her whole face lights up when she talks about her present position and her former work, teaching Indian children in Alberta.

"I enjoyed teaching Indian children. You can see results of the work being done."

Born and raised in Cape Breton Island, Mrs. Haslam taught there for a few years before heading west—"for the money."

Mrs. Haslam is one of about 12 language arts specialists in Canada—two are in Manitoba—with the department of Indian affairs. Her territory takes in Indian schools from Brandon to Churchill, Man.

During most of the year, she travels in the North for two weeks at a time, or works in the department office in Dauphin, Man. In summer she assists in training others to teach.

School is often Indian children's first concentrated encounter with the English language, Mrs. Haslam says.

"The main focus is teaching English orally as a second language, and reading. Most of the children speak only their native language in the home."

Indian girls act as teachers' aides, and Mrs. Haslam assists in teaching these girls and also organizes a kindergarten aide-training course.

Northern teaching demands initiative. Teachers ask for help among themselves and visit other classrooms to see how others work. At the same time they rely on the children and parents for environmental learning.

Mrs. Haslam considers these teachers equal to or of higher quality than those in the provincial system.

Mrs. Haslam is involved in federal and provincial planning to sponsor a new teacher-training program primarily for Indian people and for those who have not been able to have teacher training.

As a department representative, her job is to get information to the Indian people about the program and to interview people interested in it.

She also acts as liaison between the Indian people and Brandon University, where the course is to be offered.

The challenges of teaching in the North include how to survive against the elements.

The dress consists of slacks, mukluks and parkas. A snowmobile is the local taxi, but Mrs. Haslam often walks, even in 40-below-zero temperatures.

Mrs. Haslam says that in order to teach successfully you need to plan "an exciting experience" in the classroom at least three times a week.

"If you plan life so you do exciting things, these experiences will become part of life."

Ann Landers

Mother's Infidelity Disturbs Daughter

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 16-year-old girl who is a terrible spot and I don't know what to do. My mother is having an affair with a friend of my father's who is also married. This has been going on for seven months. I found out about it when I came home from school early with a bad headache. He was there.

ANN LANDERS

Mother goes out to meet this man two nights a week. She tells Dad she is going to a card club one night and to a book review club the other night.

Two weeks ago Mom asked me to drive her to her lover's office where they rendezvous. He cannot pick her up at home for obvious reasons and she doesn't want to park her car at his office because it might be recognized. I have driven her down there four times but I don't want to do it anymore. I feel dishonest and unclean.

Mom says I'm really doing it for Dad — that it is a kindness to him, because if he found out he would be terribly hurt. I'd give anything if I didn't know about it. Please tell me what to do. — MIDDLE OF A MESS.

DEAR MIDDLE: Tell your mother you can no longer be a party to whatever it is she's up to, and that she cannot count on you for transportation in the future. It is both shocking and pathetic that a mother would enlist the help of a child in such shoddy business. She sounds like a seriously disturbed woman.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When our first baby was born, my sister-in-law gave me a beautiful crib. I used that crib for three children. Two years ago the last baby outgrew the crib so I put it in the attic. Last month I decided to clean out the attic and get rid of all the junk. I read an ad in this newspaper and sold a surprising number of odds and ends — including the crib.

When my sister-in-law heard about it she was furious. She said I had no right to sell her gift, that I should have returned it to her or given it to charity. I feel awful. Please tell me if I was wrong .— BETTY'S SISTER-IN-LAW NETTIE.

DEAR NET: A gift is a gift, and you had no obligation to check with your sister-in-law when disposal time came. Please write to me in a few weeks and let me know if you are pregnant. Invariably when a woman sells the "last" baby's crib, it happens.

Marinated Mushrooms Enjoyed

By MARY MOORE

One of the featured items at the Glenhyrst Arts & Council Antique Show and Sale to be held May 5, 6, and 7 in Brantford, Ontario, is Marinated Mushrooms.

The marinated mushrooms are going to be a joy to our hostesses for they have that ever welcome factor — they can be stored in a large glass jar in the refrigerator and used from as needed. They compare in usefulness to hostesses, with the Dilled Cucumbers I gave you here two weeks ago.

A funny thing happened. I unselfishly took my whole jar of them to Pete's and Margaret's to sample and they loved them so they wanted to keep the whole jar.

1 lb. small fresh mushrooms
½ tsp. salt
2 cups boiling water
¼ cup salad or olive oil
¼ cup wine vinegar or ¼ cup red wine and ¼ cup white vinegar
2 tbsps. grated onion
1 clove garlic finely minced
Scrub but do not peel whole small mushrooms with stems on. I did this in a colander under running cold water, gently scrubbing them and moving them around as the water splashed over them. Turn into a pot, add boiling water and salt, cover and simmer eight to 10 min. Drain (Reserve the liquid to add to your soup. The flavor is delicious.)

Into a large jar measure the oil, vinegar or wine and vinegar, onion and garlic and then add drained mushrooms. Screw lid on tightly and give the whole business a good shake. Refrigerate preferably for three days or more, shaking up occasionally.

P.S. These were good after only one day's refrigeration. I know because we could not resist them.

Miles for Million Marches Are Staged by 150,000 Persons

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two teen-age Toronto girls deserve extra marks for stamina in Toronto's Miles for Millions march Saturday.

Hanna Hasiac, 17, and Susan Bradley, 18, started walking at 7 a.m. Saturday and didn't reach the final checkpoint on the 32.7-mile route until just before it closed at 1 a.m. Sunday. They raised $117.

They were among more than 150,000 persons who took part in fund-raising marches across Canada.

Major walks held in Toronto and Ottawa Saturday and in Edmonton and Vancouver Sunday started National Walk of Week, which continues next week with marches in Saint John, N.B., Victoria and New Westminster, B.C.

About 500,000 Canadians are expected to raise more than $4 million in walks across the country this summer.

Each walker tries to persuade people to pledge an amount, usually five or 10 cents, for each mile completed.

The walker's mileage is certified at checkpoints along the route and he returns to his sponsors after the march to collect their pledged donations.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp joined the marchers who set off from Parliament Hill at 9 a.m. EST in Ottawa's 40-mile walk, the longest in Canada.

Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener was grand marshal for the march, which wound through Ottawa and Hull, Que., across the Ottawa River. Mr. Michener also officiated at the Edmonton walk Sunday.

An estimated 30,000 of the 55,000 to 60,000 walkers finished the Ottawa march, raising about $400,000, compared with $365,000 last year.

Allseris Lt.-Gov. Grant MacEwan was one of about 30,000 persons who took part in the 25-mile Edmonton march under mostly clear skies Sunday.

Mr. MacEwan has taken part in every Edmonton walk since they were organized in 1967.

Vancouver walkers covered a 30-mile route Sunday, but the number of persons involved was not immediately known.

Although it fell short of its anticipated 100,000 participants, the Toronto walk was still the largest in Canada, involving about 80,000 persons and raising an estimated $1 million.

Just under 30,000 persons, some of them roller-skating or running instead of walking, completed the course.

Tradeus Visit Grandma After May Day Fuss

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister and Mrs. Trudeau dicked out of the public spotlight Sunday to cruise to the Sechelt Peninsula on a British Columbia ferry then return to Vancouver to spend the evening with friends.

The Trudeaus—relaxing before meeting the Royal Family at Vancouver International Airport today—strolled hand-in-hand along the ferry decks, interrupted only by occasional youthful autograph seekers.

They were reported visiting Mrs. Trudeau's grandmother at Roberts Creek, about 20 miles northwest of Vancouver.

Their day Saturday was different.

More than 1,000 May Day demonstrators, representing a rainbow of grievances, were on hand Saturday at Stanley Park when the prime minister officially opened a new killer-whale pool.

Many of them later marched more than a mile to the provincial court house to attend a began's banquet of chili, fruit, nut bread and rice while the Trudeaus attended a $50-a-plate Liberal fund-raising dinner across the street at Hotel Vancouver.

About 30 uniformed police officers guarded all entrances to the hotel, apparently expecting attempts by demonstrators to get inside.

But the demonstrators, representing every group from the Gay Liberation Front to the Free Canada--Free Quebec Committee, contented themselves with music, dancing and chants.

Several Canadian and B.C. flags were torn from flag poles at the court house to be replaced with Maoist and Che Guevara flags.

Mr. Trudeau made a brief reference to the protesters in his speech, saying he thought it was "really beautiful to see them doing their own thing," and expressing themselves.

Mr. Trudeau told the 1,045 diners, who netted the party an estimated $40,000, that in the last 20 years the rush of technology and the lure of material gain have led to commercial processes "which . . . may lead to disastrous consequences and which may have cumulative effects."

Although man knows that resources and the earth's capacity to support life are limited, "there are elements in our society which . . . assume that man is at his ingenious best when his skills are employed to market products in even more attractive, and often less disposable, packages."

"There is no shortage of persons who rationalize that for the benefit of shareholders or taxpayers, raw waste and sewage can be dumped with impunity into rivers or vented into the atmosphere."

Mr. Trudeau said the Liberal government will not protect efficiency at the cost of pollution, or manufacturers' freedom at the cost of hazardous or fraudulent products.

Canadians must harness technology to serve a culture rooted in tolerance, friendship, love, laughter, privacy and the beauty of the Canadian environment, he said.

He also said governments should stop stressing the gross national product and instead search for a philosophy of technology and a new set of statistics resulting in the "net social benefit."

Bourassa Will Hammer Out Details in James Bay Project

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa is to meet top Hydro-Quebec officials today to hammer out details of the $6 billion James Bay hydro project in an effort to get the plan moving as quickly as possible.

There's too much at stake for the future of this province and its population to allow even the slightest chance of any holdup because of red tape or any other possibility of delay," he said in an interview Sunday night.

"Nothing connected with this entire operation must be allowed to lie around on shelves or in desk drawers."

Meanwhile, Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, said in Quebec City Saturday that his union is going to watch the project closely to make sure it does not become "an immense patronage affair."

The Bourassa government's wanting "to give the project to private enterprise is not reassuring" as Hydro-Quebec has already shown it is capable of handling the plan, he said.

Mr. Bourassa said reaction to the project, announced at a Liberal fund-raising dinner in Quebec City Friday, has been "fantastic."

The announcement will go far to restore the climate of confidence needed to encourage new investment in Quebec, he said.

CNTU to Support Parti Quebecois

MONTREAL (CP) — Delegates to the annual convention of the central council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions voted Sunday to support the Parti Quebecois because of its constitutional stance.

However, Michel Bourdon, council vice-president, said during the debate on the resolution Sunday: "This does not mean that we won't criticize the Parti Quebecois when it takes a position contrary to the interests of the workers."

The convention also passed several motions of censure against:

—Judges who refused bail to author Pierre Vallieres and sociologist Charles Gagnon after both were charged with FLQ membership and seditious conspiracy;

—Mayor Jean Drapeau for "false" accusations against the city's opposition Front d'Action Politique party and for wishing to maintain public order legislation in force "to frighten the population and those who might form an opposition."

Saturday, the delegates to the convention passed a resolution calling for the recycling of Quebec profits into other industries to create full employment.

Spanish Carlists Protest Franco Rule

ESTELLA, Spain (Reuter) — About 12,000 Spanish Carlists wearing red berets staged an unauthorized political rally at the top of a mountain near here Sunday to demonstrate their growing opposition to the Franco government.

Government authorities had given permission only for annual religious ceremonies in memory of the 10,000 Carlists who died fighting for Gen. Francisco Franco's nationalists during the 1936-39 civil war, only to be cheated of hopes that he would favor dynastic claims.

Carlist leaders made speeches echoing the demands of an anti-government manifesto which they issued Saturday night.

They denounced the lack of political freedom in Spain, called for an amnesty for political prisoners and recognition of political parties, and the lifting of sweeping powers of arrest granted to police in December.

Car Firms Try To Mend Image

DETROIT (AP) — Under the growing pressure of consumerism, "Chrysler Corp. cares" and "Ford listens better" have become the new bywords of the auto industry.

To repair an image tarnished by public complaints about safety, pollution, product quality and service, the Big Three auto-makers have in recent months started programs to speed up the handling of consumer complaints. Their efforts have won guarded praise mixed with cynicism from one of the industry's harshest critics.

At Chrysler, whose program is supported by extensive advertising, Vice-President Byron J. Nichols has been serving since March 1 as an ombudsman for all complaints.

Ford, through its five-month-old "we listen better" campaign, has been encouraging customers to write to corporate headquarters with complaints or suggestions about their cars.

At the same time, Ford has established a new customer service division, to improve its service operation.

Operation of all the programs is similar. The car-owner's complaint is relayed to the regional service office nearest the customer. A regional representative then gets together with the customer and his dealer in an effort to solve the problem.

Research Act Now In Effect

The act was approved by the legislature in 1969, but regulations implementing it were delayed pending consultation with humane societies and other groups.

In its final form, the act prohibits animal pounds from destroying animals if there is a request from any research institution for them.

The bill now has the support of most humane societies.

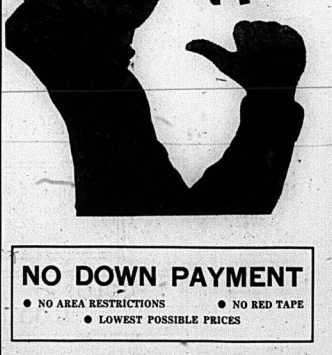
Other regulations in the bill force animal pounds to keep detailed records of all strays, including physical descriptions and details of their disposal.

Pounds have to keep animals for at least three days, during which owners may reclaim them. Pound operators are not forced to surrender animals to research institutions, but are prohibited from killing them if there is a request.

Ceiling Assailed

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Representatives of the Ontario civil service warned Mines Minister Leo Bernier Saturday that any attempt to impose a five-per-cent ceiling on wage increases could bring a walkout.

At a breakfast sponsored by the Port Arthur Conservative Association, a group of civil servants and their representatives objected to recent suggestions by Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough.

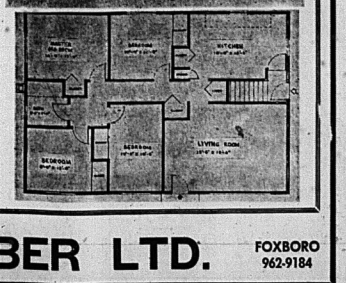


Juvenile Held After Five Die

BIRCH RIVER, Man. (CP) — RCMP are holding a juvenile in custody in connection with a Friday night house fire on the Birch River Indian reserve, 35 miles north of here, which killed five members of a family aged from 16 years to 15 months.

An RCMP spokesman said Sunday the juvenile, not a member of the family, had not been charged. Police believe the fire started when a match was thrown into spilled gasoline.

The fire reduced to smouldering ruins a 1½-storey house on the reserve, 250 miles northwest of Winnipeg. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Audy of Birch River, were away from the home at the time of the fire.



Dead are three daughters and two sons: Duncan, 10, Alderic, seven, Bonnie, three, Harriet, two, and 15-month-old Gladys.

Hull Gives Ranger Tale Classic Finish

CHICAGO (CP) — Bobby Hull ended another New York Ranger playoff chapter Sunday with one of his classic blistering shots that carried Chicago Black Hawks to a 4-3 victory into an empty New York net with 28 seconds remaining precipitated a ticker-tape ending to the series.

Pete Stemkowski, whose first two playoff goals provided Ranger victories in two of the three overtime games played by the two teams, got the equalizer before the first period ended and Rod Gilbert sent the New Yorkers ahead at 13:37 of the middle period.

But Cliff Koroll's power-play goal at 12:27 of the second period with Rangers' Vic Hadfield off for tripping was the turning point in the game in the eyes of Chicago coach Billy Reay.

The goal, after New York had been carrying the play to Chicago most of the game, gave the Hawks momentum and they played on even terms for the remaining 1¼ periods.

Hull's goal was his eighth in the playoffs, and while he admits the club is tired, he's looking toward the final against Montreal Canadiens starting here Tuesday.

"Montreal are fresher," he admitted, "but the Canadiens' layoff could prove detrimental to them.

"You've got to remember Montreal is coming off a team that is not quite the team we are," he added, referring to Montreal's tough six-game semi-final with Minnesota North Stars.

"A layover at this time of year isn't going to help them when they have to sit around and wait."

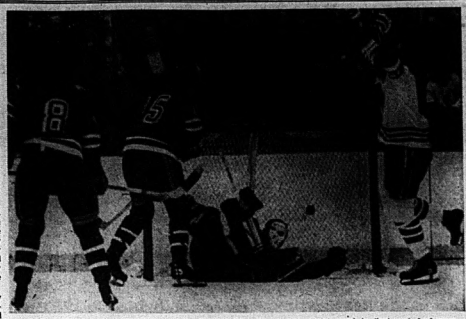
Although the tempo of the game slowed noticeably in the late stages, Chicago goalie Tony Esposito said it wasn't necessarily because the teams were tired coming off the three overtime periods played Thursday before Stemkowski settled the marathon.

"Sure we were tired after Thursday. But we're not old men . . . we recover quickly."

Giacomin admitted the Koroll and Hull goals were of an unusual nature, although he's still shaking his head on Hull's score, a fast screen shot from the face-off.

"I didn't see it," he conceded, "but I'm amazed that it could have come in so high."

There were four guys in front of me . . . and I just can't see how it came in that high without hitting one of them."



Of Koroll's, Giacomin said the Canora, Sask., native was coming in alone on a Bobby Hull rebound and he attempted to clear it.

But Koroll poked it with his stick, "it hit me, his (knee) pad and went shooting by my shoulder.

"Bobby's shot hit him (Giacomin) and bounced out," said Koroll. "I took a poke and it hit him again, hit me and then went in."

Reay was remarkably poised behind the Chicago bench despite the loss of centre Pit Martin from regular duty and the less-than-classic effort turned in by the defensive duo of Keith Magnuson and Doug Jarrett.

"I can't say enough about them," said Reay of his other defensive pairing of Bill White and Pat Stapleton. "White and Stapleton were the keys to this series.

Montreal's Big M Gets Weekend Gift

Montreal's Frank Mahovlich and Chicago's Bobby Hull were tied for the lead in the Stanley Cup scoring race Sunday as the Canadiens and the Black Hawks prepared to meet in the opening game of the Stanley Cup final series Tuesday.

Hull picked up his eighth goal and added two assists as Chicago nipped New York Rangers 4-3 Sunday to win the best-of-seven semi-final series over New York four games to three.

The NHL awarded Mahovlich an assist this weekend for contributing to a goal in the Canadiens' 3-2 win over Minnesota North Stars last Thursday.

Both Hull and Mahovlich have 19 points but Mahovlich has 10 goals.

Young Habs Eager

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens will face Chicago Black Hawks in the Stanley Cup finals for the first time in six years when their best-of-seven series opens Tuesday night in Chicago.

Montreal beat the Black Hawks four games to three in 1965 to win the Stanley Cup. The clubs met in the semi-finals in 1966, with the Canadiens winning again, this time in five games.

Montreal is eagerly awaiting the opener of the finals after missing the playoffs last season.

"This is an opportunity you can't miss," said Jean Beliveau after watching the Chicago-New York game on television Sunday. Chicago defeated Rangers 4-3 to win the best-of-seven semi-final 4-3.

"We have quite a few youngsters and they should know that you don't always get this close to a Stanley Cup.

"The Rangers have waited 21 years and they'll wait another year. There's nothing nicer. I believe, for a young player than to win the Stanley Cup. And for the oldest one it's always a pleasure.

"I know for Henri Richard and me, it would be nice to win our 10th Stanley Cup. That I would like very much."

The Canadiens needed only a tie going into the last weekend of the season last year to clinch a playoff position, but lost two games to the Black Hawks and finished fifth.

"Tony Esposito is the key— he's the guy who kept us out of the playoffs last year," Harper said. "We just couldn't score on the guy."

Goring Lead Sweeper for Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Butch Goring scored three goals, including a tie-breaker early in the final period, to lead Springfield Kings to a 5-3 American Hockey League victory Saturday over Providence Reds and a four-game sweep of the Calder Cup finals.

Goring's short-handed goal came on an unassisted breakaway and broke a 3-3 deadlock.

Providence jumped to a quick 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Joe Snura and Adam Keller. Springfield tied the score at 2-2 on first-period goals by Wayne Schultz and Goring and took the lead for the first time in the middle season on a goal by Mike McMahon.

The Reds tied the score 3-3 at 2:07 of the finale on a goal by Joe Garwatnik, but then Goring took charge.

Maybe Howie Was Too Tired To Play Longer

Anyhow, his goal about two minutes before midnight Sunday night gave Galt Hornets a 7-6 victory over Calgary Stampeders and a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven Allan Cup final.

The goal came at 6:28 of a second 10-minute period of overtime, bringing to an end a game that lasted about 3½ hours but never lacked excitement.

The Hornet won the series opener 4-2 Saturday night.

Third and fourth games in the series, for the Canadian Senior A hockey championship, will be played Tuesday and Thursday nights. All games are scheduled for Galt.

The Hornets, playing their seventh game in 10 nights, appeared to have the win tucked away in the final minute of regulation time when they led 5-4.

But Scott Watson scored for Calgary on a backhand shot from close range at 19:48 of the final period. The teams exchanged goals in the first 10-minute overtime session, which was not sudden-death.

That set the scene for Dietrich's dramatic goal, which sent most of the 2,094 fans home happy.

Calgary outshot Galt 7-5 in the second overtime period, and Galt goaltender Boat Hurley made an outstanding save on Watson just a minute before Dietrich's winner.

Bruce Reier scored three goals for Galt, running his total to 58 in 60 games this season. Dietrich also scored in the first period while other Galt goals came from Pete Panagabko and Dave Cressman.

Galt led 2-1 at the end of the first period and 3-2 at the end of the second. The Hornets outshot Calgary 45-44.

Calgary coach Roy Kelly said after Saturday's game that he was unhappy with the officiating of referee Blair Graham of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Remparts Pull Upset

Lafleur One Up on Dionne

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Two lesser lights gave Quebec Remparts a 4-2 upset win over St. Catharines Black Hawks in the opening game Sunday of the Eastern Canadian junior hockey final for the Richardson trophy.

Michel Deguise blocked 46 of 48 Black Hawk shots and Jacques Richard was a threat on every rush as he picked up two goals for the winners.

Marcel Dionne scored once and assisted on St. Catharines' other goal by Clyde Simon. Guy Lafleur collected Quebec's other two goals.

That brought Dionne's goal production in the playoffs to 29, and Lafleur, who scored 130 times during regular season play, has 24.

Both coaches had commeqts on Dionne and Lafleur, Quebec natives toted as being the top picks in the upcoming National Hockey League drafts.

"Dionne had one of his few off nights," said Hawk coach Frank Milne.

Quebec coach Maurice Filion said Lafleur was backchecking more than usual and lacked his usual drive on goal.

Both coaches praised the work of Deguise, who was added to the Remparts' roster from Sorel Black Hawks.

"Deguise was just great," said Filion.

"Deguise was outstanding," said Milne, "but don't forget that Hulme (George, the Black Hawk goalie) played well too."

The Hawks were heavily favored to take the first two games in the best-of-seven series before heading for Quebec City for the third game. The second game is tonight.

In Quebec City, 2,830 fans watched a closed-circuit telecast of the game while in Montreal, 2,500 spectators watched the telecast at the suburban Verdun Auditorium.

Nobody Ever Heard of Canonero II... Until Saturday's Derby!

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Pimlico general manager thought he was being kidded when a telephone caller said he wanted to make a Preakness nomination for a horse racing in Venezuela.

"I thought it was being kidded; I never heard of the horse," Chick Lang said Saturday night, an hour after Canonero II made himself known to the world.

A Derby crowd of 133,284—the first ever officially announced by Churchill Downs management—watched Canonero II outrace the field under Gustavo Avila and beat Jim French by 3¾ lengths.

In becoming the third mutuel-field horse to win the Derby, Canonero II paid $19.40, $8 and $4.20 and earned $145,000 from the richest Derby's gross purse of $380,000 after running the 1¼ miles in 2:03 1-5.

The other five horses in this year's mutuel field, a single betting interest, finished in the last five places while favored Unconscious was fifth.

Canonero II, a $1,200 yearling purchase at the Keeneland July Sales, raced twice in California and twice in Venezuela as a two-year-old, winning both Venezuelan starts.

In eight previous starts this year, all in Venezuela, the son of Pretendre-Disieland II won four times, once at 1¼ miles. He also had another pre-Derby race at 1¼ miles, a distance none of the other Derby starters had raced before Saturday.

The mutuel handle for the Derby was a record $2,648,120, surpassing the 1969 mark of $2,625,554, while a world record $6,380,507 was bet on the 10-race card, topping the mark of $6,371,829 on nine races on Belmont Stakes day at Belmont Park in 1966.

This year's Derby finish order, after fifth-place Unconscious, Vegas Vic, Tribal Line, Bold and Able, List, Twigt the Axe, Going Straight, Royal Leverage, Impassivity, Hello Rise, On the Money, Barbizon Streak, Knight Counter, Jr.'s Arrowhead, Fourvilla and Saigon Warrior.

In changing his status from an unknown member of the Derby field to a star attraction for the Preakness, the second jewel in racings triple crown, Canonero II sounded off in other three-year-olds.

But the Kentucky-bred, Venezuela-raced colt, owned by Edgar Caibett of Caracas, won't lack competition in the May 18 Preakness.

"I expect it," Lang said.

One of those expected to test Canonero II is Frank J. Caldwell's Jim French, the Derby runnerup.

Trainer John Campo said Jim French came out of the Derby with cuts on three legs but that the son of Graustark would be ready for the Preakness.

Red Sox Find No Place Like Home

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Red Sox left 19 runners on the bases—one short of the record for a nine-inning game set by the 1955 New York Yankees—as they scratched out a 9-8 victory over Minnesota Twins Sunday to complete a doubleheader sweep that put them atop the American League East Division.

The sweep gave Boston a one-game division lead over Baltimore Orioles, who salvaged the finale of a three-game set against their former Kansas City cousins by taming the Royals 5-3.

In other American League action, Oakland Athletics split a doubleheader with Cleveland Indians, bowing 7-3 in 10 innings after an 8-5 first-game victory. New York Yankees swept a pair from Milwaukee Brewers 2-1 and 5-4, Chicago White Sox beat Washington Senators 3-1 and California Angels subdued Detroit Tigers 4-3.

Ray Culp, who had been shelled in his previous three starts, limited Minnesota to a pair of scattered doubles as the Red Sox took the first game with an unearned run off Bert Blyleven in the third inning.

Luis Aparicio, who had doubled, scored from second when second baseman Steve Braun booted Carl Yastrzemski's two-out grounder, giving Culp his third victory against one loss.

In the nightcap, Boston spotted the Twins a 2-0 lead before Reggie Smith's fourth hit—a three-run homer in the seventh —loved a tying uncorked.

The Twins regained the lead in the top of the ninth when Harmon Killebrew rifled a run-scoring single for his fourth hit.

But a walk and George Scott's triple knotted it again in the bottom half. Minnesota reliever Ron Perranoski then filled the bases on two walks and Tommie Agee's previous at-bats this season, delivered the winning hit.

The Orioles, beaten by Kansas City Friday night and Saturday after whipping the Royals 23 consecutive times over the last two seasons, captured the getaway game behind southpaw Mike Cuellar, who helped his own cause with a two-run homer.

Cleveland's Sam McDowell, shelled from the mound in the first inning of the opener at Oakland, came back to win the nightcap in a rare relief appearance as the Indians broke loose for four runs in the 10th.

Reggie Jackson's three-run homer keyed a five-run Oakland burst that knocked out McDowell in the first game, pinning the Cleveland Drabafler with his fourth loss of the season.

McDowell came out of the bullpen—for the first time since 1969—in the seventh inning of the lightcap, gave up a tying homer by Don Mincher in the eighth and then checked the Athletics the rest of the way for his initial 1971 victory.

New York's Mel Stottlemyre throttled the Brewers on three hits in their twin bill opener and the Yanks snapped a 4-4 deadlock in the seventh inning of the second game on Danny Cater's run-scoring double.

Rick Reichardt's two-run homer in the ninth lifted the White Sox past Washington for a sweep of their four-game weekend set. Reichardt beat his former mates with a two-out walloy off Darold Knowles.

McCovey Suffering?

"I feel worse today than I've felt all year," said slugger Willie McCovey of San Francisco Giants. "My right knee was really acting up. This is the worst kind of weather for a guy with my problem."

He whacked a two-run homer in the first inning and a tie-breaking solo shot in the 13th as the Giants edged the Reds 4-3 in chilly Cincinnati.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York Mets tripped Houston Astros 6-5 in 10 innings, St. Louis Cardinals nipped Montreal Expos 1-0, Pittsburgh Pirates downed San Diego Padres 5-1, Chicago Cubs trounced Philadelphia Phillies 7-1 and Atlanta Braves beat Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1.

The San Francisco victory Sunday was the fifth in the last 20 games for the Giants and gave them a six-game lead in the West Division over Atlanta, which jumped over Los Angeles and Houston into second place.

Cepeda connected in the first after Aaron belted his 547nd career double, putting him eighth on the all-time list. Aaron then slugged his 862nd career homer in the eighth.

Reed lost his shutout on

Maury Wills' sixth-inning homer, which left the veteran shortstop only 585 behind Aaron, Gene Clines' tie-breaking single keyed a four-run burst in the seventh that lifted Pittsburgh past San Diego. The Padres have lost seven in a row and 15 of 17.

Sour Wine Costs Expos Close One

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lou Brock raced home on shortstop Bobby Wine's two-out error in the third inning Sunday, giving St. Louis Cardinals a 1-0 National League baseball victory over Montreal Expos.

Brock, who single d three times, led off the third with a hit up the middle off Carl Morton, 2-4, and advanced to third base on ground balls by Luis Melendez and Ted Simmons.

Joe Torre then hit a skimming grounder to Wine, who failed to come up with the ball as Brock dashed home.

Steve Carlton, 5-1, outdueled Morton by spacing nine hits. He worked out of a jam in the fourth after Ron Swoboda and John Bateman led off with singles and took part in a double play which nipped a Montreal threat in the seventh and ended Rusty Staub's hitting streak at 16 games.

Beard Never Doubted $25,000 Was in Bag

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — "I never really doubted that I was going to win," Frank Beard said after taking the $25,000 first prize in the New Orleans open golf tournament.

"Even when I was five strokes down, I just knew I was going to win," Beard said.

"This is the best tournament I'll always play. In the last few years I've won twice, finished second once, I think third once and maybe fourth."

Beard, 32 Saturday, fired a final-round 68 Sunday on the 7,080-yard, par-72 Lakewood Country Club course to overtake rookie Hubert Green, the third-round leader.

Beard finished with 276, and Green, who had a final 71, had 277.

Lee Elder and George Johnson tied for third at 278. Elder had a 71 and Johnson a 68. Masters champion Charles Coody followed at 280.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver closed out with a 74 for 283 and $3,417. Ben Green of Toronto also shot a 74 but for a 290 and $300.

LONDON (CP) — The English League First Division soccer championship remained wide open Saturday after first-place Leeds United beat Nottingham Forest 3-0 and Arsenal edged Stoke City 1-0.

The title now hinges on Arsenal's final game of the season Monday against Tottenham Hotspur. A win or a goalless tie would win Arsenal first place, but the goal averages are so close that a 1-1 tie for Arsenal would not be good enough.

Leeds, after Saturday's games has 64 points, one more than Arsenal.

Second Division action, champion Leicester City ended the season with a 2-1 victory over Portsmouth to leave it three points ahead of Sheffield United, which clinched the other promotion to the First Division by beating Watford 3-0.

But Hawley waited, and when the field straightened out for the run to the wire a hole opened. Hawley shot Lauries Dancer through and she accelerated to win by a length and three-quarters. Painted Pony was second and Main Pan finished third.

Wally Knapp Has Knack For Five-pins

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

The old sport axiom that "when the going gets tough, the tough get going" pointed out the key to success for Trenton bowler Wally Knapp Saturday as he became only the second bowler in 20 years to win back - to - back "Mr. Bowling" titles.

Knapp started slowly in the tournament rolling games of 206 in the opener and 213 in the second game, but bounced back with his best effort of 355 in the third match to shoot him into contention for the lead. He never faltered after that.

"I was a little tight the first couple of games, but after that I just decided to roll my normal ball and what ever happened would happen." the two - year champion explained his slow start.

His only serious challenge came in the 19th match of the 20-game competition when 1969 winner Jack Calnan came up with a spectacular 440 effort in an attempt to close the 352 pin lead that Knapp held at the time.

Calnan, who sports a city-high average of 264, wracked up 11 consecutive strikes only to pick off a head pin in the final frame. Despite his bowling accomplishments Calnan had never rolled a perfect game in league or tournament play.

"I thought that I'd lost it in the tenth frame, but I got some good breaks and they all went down. The last ball started off well, but I didn't hook it as much as I generally do and it picked the head pin clean," was how Calnan explained his narrow miss.

Even this effort wasn't enough to let him make a significant gain on Knapp, who responded to the challenge with a 332 game, his second best of the tournament. Both bowlers later pointed to that game as the key point in the competition.

Knapp finished with a 274.1 average, the seventh best score ever, but far below his record setting pace of last year when he averaged 292.4 in the ten games played. He collected a total of $100 for his effort in the tournament, which had 31 entries.

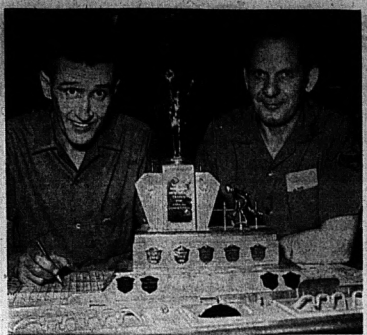
Third spot in the event went to veteran Ron Saylor, whose wins in the first two tournaments had been the only back-to-back effort until Knapp duplicated the feat this year, finished in third place. The four - time "Mr. Bowling" champion totalled 4634 for the 20 games.



Art Butler of Carrying Place, who had bowled in two leagues previous to the start of the 12 - hour marathon competition, still had enough left to finish fourth with a 4628 total. The Mr. Bowling tourney had gotten under way at midnight Friday and finished at noon Saturday at the Front St. Bowl-O-Drome.

Newcomer Craig Williams of Brighton nailed down the fifth position by rolling 4606, while Leo St. Louis was the final money winner with a 4602 effort.

Leo Labelle had the best consecutive game record in the tournament rolling scores of 336, 310 and 325 in the 12th, 13th and 14th games before cooling off to finish in tenth place.

Cobourg's Wayne Tuttle was the only other bowler besides Calnan to make a serious bid for a perfect game, blasting eight consecutive strikes at one point before he too, picked a head pin.

Organizer Bill Bateman was pleased with the outcome of the tournament. "We equalled last year's number of entries despite the fact that there was a Master Bowlers Tournament in Toronto, which took a number of possible entries away from this competition", he noted. Next year he plans to return the event to a 10 - game formula.

Classy Keglers

Cup Chances Dim for Yachtsmen

LONDON (CP) — A spokesman for the British Yachting Association doesn't think much of Canada's chances for the America's Cup.

"You would have to look in the history books to find the last Canadian winner," said Elmer Ellsworth-Jones, commodore of the Royal Thames Yachting Club, Britain's central body for the helmsmen.

"Mind you, if the Canadians produce a good boat and the right people to sail it, they've got as good a chance as anyone," added the 65-year-old enthusiast.

The big race doesn't set sail until 1973, but preparations are already under way to present a British challenger. The eliminations may take place next year.

Among the seven challengers to the New York Yachting Club—which has held the trophy for an awesome 128 years —will be a crew from Britain, as well as Canada. Australia will have two boats and France three. The winner among the challengers in the elimination round, possibly off Rhode Island where the final challenge will take place, will meet the Americans for the big event.

The America's Cup was named in 1851 when the schooner America beat the finest British boats in a race around the Isle of Wight.

Ellsworth-Jones, speaking to reporters in London, suggested that the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club is unlikely to present a serious Canadian challenge.

But the 1973 race does present a problem for Britain. Twelve-metre racers are to be used, and British yachtsmen have had little experience with this kind of craft.

A leading yard has been appointed by Royal Thames to design and build a 12-metre test craft before the end of the year.

As for crew, Britain has only two men experienced in 12-metre racing: John Oakeley, former Flying Dutchman champion, and Robin Fouger, who has sailed in 12-metre craft in France for the last 10 years.

Oakeley will be skipper and Fouger crew-master of the British challenger.

WATCH THE DIVOT

Taking a divot after impact is a necessity with every iron shot made under normal conditions. The divot indicates that the clubhead has struck the ball while still on a downward path. If this were not true, no divot would be taken.

When this happens, the ball is pinched between the ground and the clubface at impact, and backspin is imparted. True backspin, turning along the intended line, will keep a ball on line and in the air for the proper time.

For longer irons, the divot is slight (illustrated). But as you use shorter clubs the divot should be more definite.

Brantford Seniors Accepted, But Not for Another Year

TORONTO (CP) — Brantford's return to senior hockey seemed assured after a recommendation by a sub-committee of the Ontario Hockey Association that met Saturday.

The committee recommended that the Brantford entry not be able to enter the league until the 1972-73 season to ensure Brantford's Junior A team enough time to become better established.

The OHA executive, which received the recommendation on the Brantford entry, also received recommendation for the acceptance of a Windsor application into the Southern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

OHA president Clarence Tubby' Schmalz said the recommendation would have to be put off until the next meeting since the Windsor entry did not bring along an entry fee or a bond to post.

You'll Pay To Play In CAHA

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's board of directors decided at a meeting during the weekend to charge any person playing under a CAHA card $1 in an effort to lift the association out of debt.

The directors also decided to withhold a decision on awarding the Memorial Cup until the CAHA's annual meeting later this month.

CAHA president Earl Dawson said the CAHA had averaged losses of $23,000 in each of the last three years. He said 50 per cent of the money collected through the new levy would be returned to the provincial body that raised it.

The Ontario and Quebec hockey associations wanted the Memorial Cup awarded to the winners of Quebec Remparts-St. Catharines Black Hawks series. The survivor of the two teams now competing for the Richardson Trophy would have been the Eastern Canada representatives for the Memorial Cup.

The Ontario and Quebec hockey associations had refused to meet a representative from Western Canada for the Memorial Cup, the symbol of Junior A hockey supremacy in Canada, when the westerners insisted on using four over-aged players this season.

Under a reluctant compromise between the West and the CAHA, the figure will be cut next year to two over-aged players and the following year to none.

Dawson, who has served three years as president of the CAHA, said he would not accept another term as president when elections are held in Thunder Bay, Ont.

Napanee Win Shy of Title

DURHAM, Ont. (CP) — Napanee Comets split a pair of games with Durham Huskies on the weekend to hold a commanding lead in their Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate B championship.

The Huskies won 4-3 Saturday then lost 7-4 Sunday.

The Comets now lead the best-of-seven final, three games to one. Fifth game will be played at Napanee Wednesday with the sixth game, if necessary in Durham Friday.

Quinte Hockey Stars Take Trophy Bows

Award winners from the Quinte Hockey League had a time to take their final bows of the season at the league banquet and dance held Saturday night at the Club Canara.

Belvedere Hotel walked away with the lion's share of the silverware including the trophies for Most Valuable winner team and league championship.

Goalie Larry DePietro of Stinsons Construction was the league MVP with Andy Prudden of Central Taxi winning the Most Improved Player award and DCA Transfer's Don Robson the Most Gentlemanly Player.

Sandra Sinks LPGA Opponents

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Sandra Haynie became the first player to win two straight on the 1971 LPGA tour Sunday, shooting a final-round 68 for a 54-hole total of 201 and the Dallas Civitan women's open golf championship by four strokes.

Miss Haynie, in winning the championship for the first time in 11 attempts as a pro, earned $4,725, boosting her season total to $14,340.50, tops on the tour.

Janie Blalock shot 205 to take second.

THE WHEELS WERE MADE OF WOOD?

Yes, when roller skates were invented in the 1860's the wheels were wooden. By the 1880's, ball bearings had replaced the wood. Children the world over love to roller skate . . . just as they did a hundred years ago!

Children do love their toys and games but, they seem to outgrow them while the things still have years of use to go. Don't store outgrown toys and equipment . . . sell them all with an Intelligencer Want Ad by dialing 962-9171 pronto!

CAR MARKET

Whatever kind of car you're looking for — the year, the model — domestic or imported — you'll find a good buy in The Intelligencer Classified Ads.

One reason this is true is because you have more models to choose from.

Bengali Resistance Continues

Rout of Awami League Fails to End Revolt

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP)—The rout of East Pakistan's Awami League has failed to end Bengali resistance to the central government, but it has pushed Pakistan close to financial ruin and fed a raging debate in West Pakistan over an end to military rule.

Despite daily claims of a return to normal in the East, the army of Punjabis from West Pakistan has not been able to control large areas in the tea-growing Sylhet district, the jute-growing Mymensingh district, the panhandle south of Chittagong and the area along the Bay of Bengal that is devastated so often by cyclones.

Diplomats returning from the East say the army claims resistance is crumbling, but the diplomats believe the Bengali fighters are going underground.

Officials here and in Dacca, the capital of East Pakistan, are concerned about the renewal of violence between Bengalis and Urdu-speaking non-Bengalis still in the East. Some government officials claim 30,000 Urdu speakers were killed in the communal frenzy before and after the army struck in March.

More communal violence was reported Wednesday in the Mymenmedgar area of Dacca, and at least seven persons were killed.

The government clamped down on the reports of violence, fearing they would provoke retaliation against about 500,000 Bengalis living in West Pakistan.

Informed sources say Pakistan's military ruler, Gen. Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan, wants to turn over power to the civilian politicians, but he won't do it until he can transfer rule simultaneously in both East and West Pakistan.

The president has rejected the demands of Socialist politician Zulfikar Ali Bhutto for civilian rule now in West Pakistan's four provinces. Bhutto's Pakistan People's party has enough seats in the new provincial assembly to form governments in the two most populous provinces, the Punjab and Sind, and the chance to join a ruling coalition in a third, the Northwest Frontier.

Party Lines Sag on Pay Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — Party lines have sagged badly in the Commons on the issue of government-proposed increases in salaries and allowances to MPs and senators.

While most Liberals and Conservatives support the measure, members of both parties have pledged not to accept the increases if they become law.

One New Democrat at least has said he supports the bill, opposed by most of the party caucus.

Only the Creditistes solidly oppose the increases.

Debate continues today on second-reading of the bill, which would raise salaries for MPs and senators to $18,000 annually from $12,000. Tax-free allowances for MPs would go to $8,000 a year from $6,000 and for senators to $4,000 from $3,000 annually.

Six MPs have renounced the salary increase, pledging to return it to the treasury or divert it to charity.

They are: New Democrats Barry Mather (Surrey-White Rock), Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) and Grace MacInnis (Vancouver Kingsway); Liberals Tom Goode (Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) and Paul St. Pierre (East Chicoutimi) and Conservative J. Patrick Nowlan (Annapolis Valley).

Three others opposed the bill Friday, but made no commitment to turn away the raises. They were Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), Leonel Beaudoin (Creditiste—Richmond) and Romuald Rodrigue (Creditiste—Beauce).

Mr. St. Pierre represented the views of most of the MPs renouncing the increase.

He said it was improper in a time of high unemployment, and should take effect only after the next election.

That way, the MPs would not actually be voting themselves a raise.

But most of the MPs agreed with the proposed increase in the expense allowance, soon calling for an even bigger raise to cover expenses such as office space in the ridings. These would permit better service to constituents.

Most also agreed that the method of adjusting MPs' pay should be changed, perhaps by linking it to a public service category or assigning the job to an independent government commission.

Mr. Knowles said that most MPs—like most Canadians—have a hard time living within their incomes.

"Most Canadians, however, do not have the right to solve the problem of too little income and too much outgo by just voting themselves more income."

John Gilbert (Broadview), the lone New Democrat to voice support of the bill Friday, said MPs should get a fair salary compared to other occupations.

"Why is it considered morally acceptable in private industry to obtain increases but almost morally reprehensible for parliamentarians to do so?"

Waffle Member NDP Candidate

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Penner, 27-year-old chairman of the Ontario Waffle group, won the New Democratic Party nomination Sunday for the provincial riding of Dovercourt.

He received 45 votes compared to 35 for Bruce Knapp, a 52-year-old former British army officer.

Documentary A Shocker

NEW YORK (AP) — It was NBC's turn to make waves Sunday night: a shocker of a documentary about the treatment of children in some detention centers, reform schools and mental institutions across the United States.

A network team headed by Martin Carr spent seven months investigating juvenile justice, and wound up concentrating on three areas—Cook County jail and Elgin State Mental Hospital in the Chicago area; Indiana boys school and girls school, and 23 Pats, Tex.

The hour was filled with stories, told by boys and girls and their parents, of corporal punishment, beatings and long periods spent in solitary confinement.

Narrator Edwin Newman said that an estimated one million children will be arrested this year, encountering a special system of justice, special because the rules apply only to children. It involves crimes like running away from home, truancy, being out too late at night.

He stressed repeatedly that most children called juvenile delinquents have broken laws which do not exist for adults. And that many of them are held without trials, hearings or legal representation.

While the NBC team was excluded from some institutions it was investigating, in others Carr was able to interview young prisoners who told of being beaten with bats, repeatedly rapped on the arch of the foot and being locked up in barren cages for prolonged periods.

An official of a mental hospital defended as a "treatment" tying two 13-year-old boys to their beds for 77 hours and of keeping a girl, who had slapped a matron, tied to her bed for seven consecutive days.

Canadian Title On Line

It is the first bout for Noel since last May when he decisioned Al Duarte of Boston in a 10-round match at nearby Dieppe.

Salary Increase Proposed for Members of Parliament

Prime Minister Trudeau announced April 26 that legislation will be introduced this spring to authorize pay increases for members of Parliament. The increase will bring an MP's annual salary and expenses up to $26,000 from $18,000. The graphic shows the MP's salary from 1867 to 1971, with all salaries up to 1954 based on a session of Parliament. In the immediate post-war years, there were frequently two sessions of Parliament in a year and a member would receive two indemnities of $4,000 and an expense allowance of $2,000 — or $10,000 for the year's work.

Why Did Hero Die?

DETROIT (AP) — Why did Michigan's first black Medal of Honor winner die as an armed robber?

Dwight H. Johnson's father-in-law says he thinks "it was a case of life not worth a soon; the more they tossted him the more he became accustomed to it."

"They had things in their first year of marriage it took us 20 years to have," Leroy May said Saturday of his daughter, Katrina Lyo, and her husband.

Sgt. Johnson, 23, died Friday after he was shot four times by the owner of a store police say he was attempting to rob.

President Lyndon B. Johnson bestowed the country's highest award for valor on Johnson Nov. 19, 1968. The tank driver was cited for heroism in leaving his disabled vehicle, slaying several North Vietnamese and rescuing a wounded soldier from another flaming tank.

"He was in financial trouble, they bought a house and a lot of things," May said.

"On Wednesday Katrina had to go to the hospital and when Dwight walked her up to the desk he didn't have the $25 deposit," May said.

Released on bail, he army in August, 1968, Johnson was unable to find work, May said. Then the army said he would receive the Medal of Honor for his actions near Dak To June 15, 1967.

"All of a sudden he was a hero," said Clyde Wright, one of Johnson's oldest friends.

In December, 1968, he enlisted in the army for a three-year hitch and was assigned to recruitment work. He married Katrina the following month.

Last September he was sent to the army hospital at Valley Forge, Pa., for treatment of stomach ulcers. He was absent without leave when he was shot.

"They say he shot somebody, well that's what they taught him to do and that is exactly what got him the medal," May said.

Barrow Recalls His Four Touchdowns

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

In the world of professional football, most of the cheers are for the quarterbacks. Or they come for the swift halfbacks and line-busting fullbacks, and for the leaping, pass-catching ends.

Seldom are they for the foot soldiers, the men who fight their war in a five-yard no man's land.

But they came one day in 1965 for John Barrow, right defensive tackle for Hamilton Tiger-Cats. And they came under circumstances seldom seen on a Canadian Football League field.

Barrow is from Delray Beach, Fla. He graduated from the University of Florida's school of journalism, specializing in advertising.

Drafted third by Detroit Lions of the National Football League, Barrow chose Canada instead and for 14 years earned his spot on one of the toughest clubs in the CFL.

For 11 straight years, Barrow was named all-Canadian all-star. In 1962 he won the lineman-of-the-year award.

Off the field he became a businessman and today he has a 24-lane bowling alley, two holding companies and an exclusive steak house.

And the other day, at the age of 35, he moved from the Hamilton playerS bench to the executive suite of the rival Toronto Argonauts as general manager.

"Originally, I felt I'd only play four years," he recalled. "I ended up playing 14."

In all that time, he scored only four touchdowns—and of these only three show in the records.

It's that other touchdown, on a windy day in 1965, that he remembers best. It came in the Grey Cup game that year. Hamilton Tiger-Cats versus Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

It was the year of the Wind Bowl. It blew at 40 miles an hour the length of Exhibition Stadium in Toronto. Gusts hit 58 miles an hour.

In the third quarter, Winnipeg had to punt and Ed Ulmer came off the bench. The Bombers were on their 35-yard line.

Into the high wind, the ball didn't even cross the line of scrimmage. But Barrow did. He was heading for Ulmer.

The ball came down right into his arms and the startled tackle, with a 40-miles-an-hour tail wind, sprinted into the Winnipeg end zone.

The officials called the play back, scrubbed out the touchdown and gave Hamilton possession. The wind rule was in effect, but few in the stands knew what was going on.

The rule states:

"Should the ball on a kick from scrimmage travel only a short distance across the line of scrimmage and the players of the kicker's team have had no opportunity to give the receiving player the necessary yards, the referee may, immediately the ball touches a player or the ground, declare the ball dead, and the ball shall go to the receiving team, but there shall be no penalty assessed for failure to give yards."

Game officials, before the opening whistle, had explained the situation to the captains. Barrow simply had thought to inform the 22,655 fans in the stands.

On the next day, Ulmer averaged only 17 yards on eight punts into the wind. Even Hamilton's mighty Joe Zuger could average only 29 yards on his six into-the-wind kicks.

Coach Bud Grant of Winnipeg, now with Minnesota Vikings of the NFL, found his team pinned deep three times and three times he called for his backfield to run the ball into their own end zone, giving up two points each time.

As it turned out, that was the margin of victory for Hamilton, who defeated Winnipeg 22-16.

It is better to give up six points than 21," Grant said. The theory was that had Winnipeg gained a foot with the wind from deep in their half of the field, Hamilton would have had a good touchdown position.

Five years later the CFL changed the safety-touch rule. Now the defending team "can elect to have the play ruled as an ordinary incompleted pass" and take over the ball at the line of scrimmage. Or, they have the option of accepting the two points.

Engine 'Run-on' Can Be Annoying But Not Really Serious Problem

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"I like to do as many of my own car repairs as possible and would appreciate your advice on the following problems.

"My wife has a 1969 Acadian with 5,900 miles on the odometer. When the engine is hot, it frequently continues to run for a minute or two after the key is turned off. After a lot of shaking and vibration, when it does eventually stop, a blue puff of smoke comes out from under the hood.

"How do I rectify this situation?

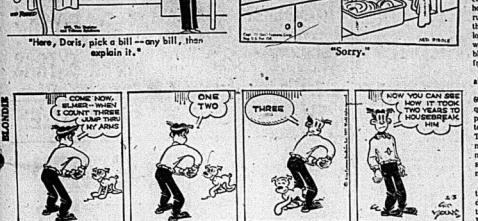
"I have a 1966 Chrysler with 60,000 miles recorded. Frequently when I step off the gas pedal the car only slows down to about 25 or 30 miles an hour To overcome this difficulty, I must place the transmission in neutral and kick the gas pedal sharply, which restores normal idle speed.

"Incidentally, shortly after taking delivery of the car, the dealer installed a modified throttle linkage assembly." — Mr. J. E. S., Toronto

An engine that continues to run roughly after the ignition is switched off is technically known as "dieseling" or "running on."

While this is a nerve-wracking problem, automotive engineers have pretty well concluded that it is not damaging to the engine. However, this does not mean that this annoying condition can be accepted as normal. It should be given prompt attention and either cured completely or reduced to a minimum.

The most common cause of run-on is excessive idle speed. During a series of tests, Champion spark plug engineers found that raising idle speed from 600 to 1,000 rpm increased the number of run-ons from two to 77. Too lean a carburetor idle mixture or maladjusted ignition timing (usually badly retarded) can also result in chronic run-on. An engine that is loaded with carbon, or the use of a fuel of insufficient octane, should not be overlooked as possible culprits.



A long, fast highway run is a good way to dispose of excessive carbon deposits, but if this cannot be arranged for some time, the use of premium fuel is often helpful.

If the car does not spend most of the time in the city on slow stop-and-go runs, and if the engine is thoroughly tuned to specifications, seldom is run-on a major problem.

Regarding the problem with your 1966 Chrysler. If kicking the gas pedal is the only way to restore normal idle speed, then obviously something must be worn or sticking in either the accelerator linkage or inside or outside the carburetor.

Starting at the gas pedal, inspect every connection or pivot point in the linkage. Make certain that rust or excessive wear are not causing a binding effect. Broken motor mounts can cause the accelerator linkage to jam intermittently. Such things as beater hoses touching the linkage can prevent it from moving freely.

On rare occasions, a defective component inside the carburetor can be the culprit. If the accelerator linkage and the external carburetor components appear to be in good order, it would be wise to consult a carburetor specialist.

Chamber of Commerce Told Business Must Be Concerned

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Chamber of Commerce was told Sunday that business must respond to the new awareness of society which is demanding that business take a more active role in society as a whole.

A report on social action presented to the opening session of the chamber's annual convention said that business in the past has worked to provide useful products at low prices, providing employment, economic growth and a fair return to shareholders for the use of their money.

"Society now is asking that we assume more socially-oriented objectives in addition. Society is asking us to eliminate discrimination, eliminate poverty, produce greater housing facilities, eliminate environmental pollution, rebuild the deteriorating cores of our cities and create greater opportunities for the disadvantaged."

Business could do this but society would have to recognize that it also might have to bear part of the cost. For instance costs for environmental improvement would be high and some of this cost would have to be passed on through increased prices.

Business will have to take the initiative in these social areas or the government would do it.

"The ultimate end of such government intrusion will be, of total socialism. We believe business has a much greater potential than government for contributing to social progress. It also has the responsibility."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

'Coffee' Breaks Are Too Frequent

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: So help me, I don't understand how she gets away with it. There's a coffee machine in our office. My friend takes at least a dozen coffee breaks a day. No wonder she's nervous. Isn't there a limit to how much coffee one can drink? — Miss L.

• • •

Comment: I can understand the reasonableness of taking a coffee break in mid-afternoon to break up the accumulated tensions of the day. But seeing coffee, doughnuts and Danish pastry being wheeled on a cart as early as 10 a.m. while visiting a book publisher in Rockefeller Center, New York, threw me off balance.

Later, I couldn't understand why I also reached for doughnuts and coffee at that early hour — just after having a breakfast of grapefruit, toast, bacon and eggs, marmalade and coffee at my hotel at 9 a.m.

Since then I have been especially sensitive to the question: are coffee breaks overdone? Are they a valid excuse to drop (or not begin) work in hand? Or, are they really necessary oases for refreshing body and spirit? Do they guarantee increased working efficacy?

My own feeling is that employers unnecessarily lose many millions of man (and woman) hours each year needlessly. Translate that into money lost, and you'd find it's large enough to ridden away at the national debt. Frankly, I can not understand why employers appear to accept this open-faced embezzlement so placidly.

• • •

But forgetting about employers, how about the employees? They get off less easily than they think. Many an overweight problem is due to several "coffee ands —" during the day.

Think of the nervousness coffee breaks engender — instead of relaxation. The caffeine stimulates the pituitary gland, which in turn stimulates the pancreas, which puts out more insulin. Result? Many chronic coffee-break addicts have a sharp fall in blood sugar. Unrecognized hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) and lack of efficiency.

I agree with you, Miss L. How about a break on coffee breaks? (Meanwhile, I hope you'll excuse me while I retire into my bomb-proof shelter. I'll need protection from coffee fanciers who'll soon be gunning for me as a target. My wife included.)

• • •

For Mr. S.: Sorry, but I'm rushing to the defence of your mother-in-law. Blaming your headaches on her since she came to visit you is handing in a verdict of guilty without a considered trial "reasonable doubt"! Perhaps the tension is due to someone at the office. Or, to yourself.

Just as there are ulcer-getters as well as ulcer-givers, there are headache-getters as well as headache - givers. Mother-in-law jokes don't always ring true in real life. Take an aspirin or two and quietly weigh your problem. She may be innocent.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My husband is 47 and goes in for weight-lifting, push-ups, water-skiing, pushups and situps. In other words, he's an exercise nut. In spite of it all he weighs at least 25 pounds too much, because he overeats. What do you think? — Mrs O.

Comment: A little golf, A little tennis. A little bowling walks. Fine. I'm in agreement with moderate exertions for those who like exercise.

But as for the other stuff, I still believe that overexertion in a man past 40 is a sort of God-given energy — and dangerous (rather than beneficial) to health.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Names Given Special Sound

Apropos a recent column of mine on pronunciation I wrote that there was no "ham" in Bethlehem, as there is in Nottingham, Birmingham, and other English place-names.

An attorney in Chicago promptly reminded me that there is no "ham" in Nottingham or Birmingham, either, in the sense that the natives call it "Notingh m" and "Birmingh'm." He is quite right, of course, though that is not the point I was making.

People who live in specific places often pronounce the name of the place in a special way. Everyone in the British Isles knows that the Scots refer to their capital city, Edinburgh, as Edin-bruh. Edinbrah. Only Americans would call it Edin-burg, and not for long.

Most Chicagoans call their city Chikawgo, and the natives can spot an Easterner by the way he calls it Chi-cah-go. Likewise, the proper Bostonian calls it Bahs-ton, not Boss-ton, as most other non-New Englanders tend to do.

We Northerners speak of going to Miamee, Florida, but the natives call it Mi-ami with a short "i" sound at the end; in the same way, we call it Missourey, but the natives use a short "i" at the end. And only people who live near Cairo, Illinois, call it Kayro; others pronounce it like its Egyptian namesake.

Speaking of namesakes, the American passion for using the names of great Europeans or world cities to designate obscure hamlets is almost stupendly demonstrated by this geographical fact: There is one place in the U.S. from which a motorist in an hour's driving time can reach Athens, Belfast, Belgrade, Bremen, China, Denmark, Dresden, Frankfort, Limerick, Lisbon, Madrid, Mexico, Naples, Norway, Oxford, Palermo, Paris, Peru, Poland or Vienna.

This spot is in the county of Sagadahoc, Maine, where all of these towns are less than 60 miles away in any direction. Sentimentality, nostalgia or simple lack of inventiveness must account for this plethora of appropriate and impertinent names for Maine villages. (And within a few miles of my own country place Denmark, a Lunenbourg, and a Brussels; a Hamburg and a Milan only a little further.)

But back to pronunciations. Visitors to New Orleans commonly call it New Or-LEANS but the inhabitants refer to their city as New ORleans. The city of St. Louis is pronounced with a final "s" by its natives, and as St. Leuss by foreign vulgarians. Newark, New Jersey, is pronounced with an "ark" at the end; but Newark, Ohio, is pronounced with an "ark" at the end. And anything, anyone, anywhere, who refers to San Francisco as Frisco, deserves to be condemned to permanent exile in Bedbug Hollow, Pa.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Hand on your dignity through out confusing, subtle changes. Go over your establishment to see what is finished, worn out, no longer serving a purpose, and arrange a better use for it elsewhere.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Clear off the hodge-podge left from yesterday. Since the next several days produce lighter arrangements, it will not do to be careless.

Powell Predicts Race Riots in Britain

LONDON (AP) — White and black people will be fighting each other in Britain by 1986, outspoken Conservative MP Enoch Powell warned Sunday.

Powell was taking part in a televised religious group discussion program when he made the remark during a heated exchange with others.

Writer and lecturer Juliet Mitchell and Rt. Rev. Edward Wickham, Anglican Bishop of Middleton, were taking part with Powell in the British Broadcasting Corp. program Equality—an Impossible Utopia?

Magee, a lecturer in philosophy, touched off the exchanges by asking Powell his views on how standards of racial equality could be developed in a country with two million colored people such as Britain.

Magee said what he thought was so damaging about Powell's previous inflamatory speeches was that they directed attention away from "our real needs." Magee added "our real needs are to develop as a multi-racial society."

Before Magee ended, Powell cut in saying: "No, not at all. We never intended to be multi-racial. We never wanded to be multi-racial. And neither do the . . ."

Miss Mitchell said: "Who are we, who, who?"

Powell, leaning forward said: "The vast majority of the people in this country."

He added, above a general argument: "If you had asked people in this country 15 or 20 years ago do you want to have five million colored people in Britain in the year 2000?" they wouldn't have believed they were even being asked the question."

Miss Mitchell, facing Powell across the table, said: "And in 15 years hence what will they ask?"

Powell replied: "In 15 years they'll be fighting." There was a pause in which no one spoke. Then Magee intervened and the program closed.

Working Journalists Vow to Improve Papers

OTTAWA, (CP) — A weekend conference of more than 320 working journalists, first of its kind in Canada, resolved to work for improvement of their product, denounced alleged suppression of news in Quebec and decided to set up a continuing organization.

Seven main resolutions and a string of proposals for future action emerged Sunday from two days of talking, much of it on the theme that working journalists and the general public should have more say in communications-media decisions.

Senator Keith Davey, whose special Senate inquiry into the mass media last year was one inspiration for the conference, concluded that "many of you here are prepared to take a giant step forward."

But he and others warned that the journalists have many difficult, down-to-earth decisions to make at future meetings.

English-language journalists are still at the stage of good intentions, said Andre Beliveau of Montreal La Presse, a member of the two-year-old Federation professionelle des journalistes du Quebec.

The federation has already decided on its goals, he said, including a determination to fight censorship, to gain a voice in media management and to support the new provincial press council that includes representatives of media owners, working journalists and the general public.

While conference participants are trying to figure out precisely what they want, Mr. Beliveau said, the Quebec federation would stand aside but cooperate in any exchange of ideas and wish their English colleagues luck.

One of the main resolutions approved by the conference calls on the journalists to promote "greater participation of journalists and public in the decision-making on which the dissemination of news is based, with the aim of increasing the quality and integrity of the news media."

The conference joined in condemning what it described as the suppression of free expression in Quebec during the emergency last October and afterwards.

Backed by a document titled Dossier Z, which catalogues testimony of 14 journalists who charge harassment, the resolution refers to "interference with the dissemination of working journalists during the October events and subsequently."

October was the month of the kidnapping of British envoy James Cross and Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, later slain, and the beginning of the enforcement of emergency laws that expired Friday night. The Front de Liberation du Quebec was outlawed.

The document details charges of arrest or harassment of several dozen named journalists and interference with the news content of various journals and broadcasting stations.

A separate resolution requests Attorney-General Allan Lawrence of Ontario to investigate and publicize circumstances of the arrest in a Toronto hotel room Oct. 16 of reporter Gilles Bourcier and photographer Roger Belanger of Montreal Matin, who were there to cover a fight and a football game.

Other resolutions called community groups should be guaranteed access to cable television channels to do their own programming and that a federal development loan fund should be set up to assist publications and broadcasting stations with demonstrated reader and audience appeal.

The conference also assigned a steering committee to prepare for another conference within a year, to draft plans for permanent organization and to initiate continuing discussion on matters of professional concern.

Barbados Won't Intervene In Computer Riot Case

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — The Barbados government will not intervene in the case of two West Indian students found guilty and sentenced in Montreal for their part in a computer smashing incident at Sir George Williams University in 1969.

Prime Minister Errol Barrow told university students, who had sought his intervention, the Barbados government had no jurisdiction. The one Barbadian convicted, 21-year-old Anne Cools, had Canadian citizenship, he noted.

Miss Cools was sentenced to six months imprisonment and fined $1,500 in a Montreal court Friday.

Another West Indian, Rosevelt Douglas of Dominica, was sentenced to two years less one day in prison and fined $5,000.

A delegation from the University of the West Indies met with Barrow at his office Friday in an attempt to gain his support.

They requested, among other things, that the Barbados government investigate the whole affair, including a review of the evidence and to undertake payment of all or part of the legal expenses involved.

Quebec MP Quits Conservative Party

OTTAWA (CP) — Roch Lasalle, member of Parliament for the Quebec riding of Joliette, announced his resignation Sunday from the Progressive Conservative party because of "hesitations" by party leader Robert Stanfield on constitutional policy.

Mr. Lasalle, in announcing he would sit in the Commons as an independent MP, said that because of disagreements with Mr. Stanfield over the role of Quebec within Confederation, it "is no longer possible to serve the party and the interests of Quebec at the same time."

In a telegram earlier in the day to Mr. Stanfield, he said: "I declare the hesitations of your party on constitutional policy."

"I must show and state today that I have no further choice but that I inform you of my irrevocable resignation from membership in the Conservative party."

Tom Sloan, a senior assistant to Mr. Stanfield, said the party leader was surprised to receive the telegram.

The 43-year-old MP's decision to stand as an independent, reduces to three the number of Conservative MPs representing Quebec in the Commons.

It also follows the resignation last Thursday of Fernand Alie as president of the Quebec wing of the PCs, who was called before the party's provincial council to explain his dispute with Mr. Stanfield over a special role for Quebec within Confederation.

The party executives announced Friday the selection of Paul Gelinas, a lawyer from Ste. Agathe, as Mr. Alie's successor.

The 74-seat province now is represented by 55 Liberals, 13 Creditistes, three Conservatives and Mr. Lasalle as an independent. Two seats, formerly held by Liberals, are vacant following the deaths late last year of J. A. Mongrain of Trois-Rivieres and Bernard Pilon of Chambly.

Nixon Declares Demonstrators Don't Scare Him

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon said Saturday that American demonstrators seeking peace abroad have no right to "break the peace at home," and he called some criticism of wire-tapping "political demagoguery."

In a news conference on domestic matters, Nixon said he has no plans to meet with any of the thousands of demonstrators who have threatened to disrupt traffic and shut down government offices in Washington this week.

"Now, with regard to the demonstrators when I say that I will not be intimidated, I am simply stating the American principle that while everybody has a right to protest peacefully, that policy in this country is not made by protests.

"Those who make policy must, of course, listen and then they must weigh all the other facts and then do what they think is right. . . .

"If this kind of illegal conduct continues . . . we are prepared to deal with it. We will arrest those who break the law. The right peacefully to demonstrate . . . for peace abroad, does not carry with it the right to break the peace at home."

Nixon was led into a discussion of wire-tapping by a question about Representative Emanuel Celler (Dem. N.Y.), who has visualized tapping as leading to a police state. Nixon asked where the man who was dean of all congressmen was in 1961, 1962 and 1963 when there were 16 times as many news stories about wire-tapping. with no police state.

"All of this hysteria—and it is hysteria, and much of it, of course, is political demagoguery to the effect that the FBI is tapping my telephone and the rest —simply doesn't serve the public purpose," Nixon said.

He said the people should be thankful for a greatly-restricted FBI.

Globe Says Turner Threatened to Quit

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says that Justice Minister John Turner threatened to resign unless the government agreed to his decision regarding the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970.

In an Ottawa story, the newspaper says that according to unconfirmed reports in some government circles, the justice minister would have resigned if the government had insisted upon introducing immediate substitution legislation for the act or on referring a draft bill to committee.

The newspaper says he became convinced that the question of permanent emergency powers legislation had to be referred to a parliamentary committee without direction from government.

Mr. Turner announced last week that the act would be allowed to expire and a special joint parliamentary committee would be formed to consider the entire issue of a new anti-terrorist law. The act expired at midnight, last Friday night.

Uniform Hours In Stores Asked

All Is Quiet In Washington

WASHINGTON (CP) — Thousands of police and troops again took up positions on the capital's streets today, to await a second round of guerrilla-style demonstrations aimed at disrupting the U.S. government on behalf of peace. Dawn came, but the demonstrators didn't.

The depleted force of anti-war militants apparently had abandoned another attempt to block commuter traffic into Washington after being routed by police and troops Monday.

The leaders of the demonstrations had set a more modest goal today of trying to disrupt the traffic flow at several busy intersections in the capital.

But as the morning rush-hour moved to its peak, almost no delays were reported and hardly any young demonstrators were visible.

Of the record 7,000 protesters arrested Monday, about 4,000 had been released by break-fast-time today.

Most were freed overnight on bail on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Troops armed with rifles again lined bridges leading into the city. Soldiers were also positioned on parkland near the White House and the state department which Monday was the scene of a series of running battles between demonstrators and riot-trained police.

But the angry demonstrators were missing today and troops and police had nothing to do except watch the smoothly-moving traffic.

The vast Mall area, a battlefield Monday, was empty. In the fashionable district of Georgetown, which had been alive with long-haired demonstrators Monday, the only people on the streets were troops and police.

Police Chief Jerry Wilson estimated that between 4,000 and 5,000 demonstrators were still free in the city.

Protest leaders claimed 10,000 demonstrators would take to the

Rogers Flying To Cairo

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. State Secretary William Rogers headed today into the climactic stage of his Middle East tour—two days in Egypt and then a visit to Israel.

After a 34-hour stopover in Beirut, Rogers was flying to Cairo this afternoon for talks with President Anwar Sadat, Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad and other leaders.

The visit to Israel Thursday night and Friday will wind up Rogers' five-country mission to the Middle East, aimed at arguing some movement in the deadlocked peace talks.

Rogers says he hopes that at least he can narrow the gap between the rival Egyptian and Israeli proposal to reopen the Suez canal.

C of C Wants Law For All

By Irving Whynot
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Chamber of Commerce today called on the provincial government for legislation to set uniform retail store hours across the province.

Speakers who favored the motion said uniform hours would put all retailers, small and large, on an equal competitive footing. Those who opposed it said it ran contrary to the principles of free enterprise.

The original Ottawa suggestion was that the new legislation be patterned on Quebec regulations which went into effect Jan. 1970, and limited retail store hours to 80 hours a week, including two nights.

This point was deleted from the motion which was accepted. It calls on the Ontario government to enact legislation that would remove from local au-

Queen to See Bathtub Race

But first they will go to the legislative buildings where they will be received by Premier W. A. C. Bennett and the Queen will inspect the only guard of honor of the 10-day royal tour.

Following a luncheon with the premier and his cabinet, the Queen and Prince Philip will visit by car the Vancouver Island communities of Ladysmith, Duncan and Nanaimo.

Nanaimo, which held its first bathtub derby in 1967 and now claims to be the Bathtub Capital of the World, will put on a special race of powered bathtubs for the royal visitors.

Princess Anne will miss the show.

She will be seeing some of the wild beauty of Vancouver Island's west coast while opening Pacific Rim National Park.

This is the second day of the royal tour marking British Columbia's entry into the Canadian Confederation a century ago.

The Royal Family arrived in Victoria Monday evening on their yacht Britannia.

During the six-hour voyage aboard the Britannia, the Queen had a private talk with Prime Minister Trudeau.

Ulbricht Resigns

EAST BERLIN (Reuter) — Walter Ulbricht, one of the few Communist leaders to survive the reign of Josef Stalin, bowed to old age and failing health Monday night and resigned as head of the East German Communist party.

The 77-year-old leader, who more than anyone else was responsible for founding and maintaining communism in East Germany, handed the reins of the party to 58-year-old Erich Honecker, long regarded as his heir-apparent.

The smooth transfer of rule over 17 million East Germans indicated that it had been thoroughly worked out beforehand.

Meeting Held On Tanker Dangers

WASHINGTON (CP) — Senior Canadian and American government officials met privately Monday at the state department to discuss possible hazards to the Canadian West Coast from the proposed shipment of Alaska oil by tanker to the U.S. mainland.

As expected, there was no official statement after the meeting. One source who was present at the conference said later the American side had presented its views on safeguards against accidental oil spills and plans to cope with them if they occur.

He said there was a recognition on both sides that there are risks in moving large quantities of oil anywhere, and the meeting attempted to assess the risks and determine how they could be minimized.

Queen Clothed In Cherry Red

VANCOUVER (CP) — A cherry red ensemble helped the welcoming crowd focus their attention on Queen Elizabeth as she landed at Vancouver International Airport Monday.

Bright sunshine highlighted the Queen's cherry red coat, open at the neck to reveal a matching dress. Her hat, in the same color, was adorned with big black and white flowers.

U.S. Dollar Is Beaten To Floor

LONDON (AP) — Currency speculators sent the United States dollar reeling on European exchanges today, and the flood of U.S. money exchanged for West German marks, Dutch guilders and Swiss francs threatened to send inflation soaring further.

The dollar was on the floor in Frankfurt and Zurich. Only heavy buying by the Bank of England kept the rate just off its mandatory intervention point of $2.42 to the pound.

Anxiety over the monetary situation drove the price of gold up in the London and Zurich free markets. The lamp was 43 cents in London to $39.86, the highest level since the 1969 crisis over the undervaluation of the mark.

West Germany's central bank was reported to have taken in $250 million to $300 million in the first hours of trading today and more than $128 million in the last hour Monday.

The speculation apparently was touched off by the call from five West German economic research institutes Monday for the mark—now pegged at 27 cents—to be set free in world markets to combat inflation.

Speculators saw a chance of a quick profit, anticipating another upward revaluation of the mark that might even force the guilder and the Swiss franc to go up, too.

The British pound was caught in the squeeze but to a lesser extent. However, the Bank of England is reputed to have taken in more than $1 billion since December, driving the country's rate of inflation up to the highest level of any country in Western Europe, 9¼ per cent.

Chancellor Willy Brandt's government raised the value of the mark 8.5 per cent to end the 1969 crisis. But so far officials of the central bank of Frankfurt deny that it is likely to be revalued upward or allowed to float free in the near future.

Tired of Stud Removal

Since the provincial edict banning the use of studded tires on city streets and Ontario highways last week, local garage owners and tire shops have been hard pressed removing the metal studs by hand. Here, Gary Riddell, proprietor of Trepanier Tire, Dundas Street East, makes inroads on part of the pile of tires waiting for his tongs. In the past week, he has worked on more than 100 tires.

Two Killed in Montreal Shootout

MONTREAL (CP) — Two men were killed and four people wounded Monday in a shootout between Brink's Express Co. guards and two would-be bandits at a downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal.

Four Brink's guards arrived at the bank, located on the main floor of the Bell Canada headquarters on downtown Beaver Hall Hill, around 11 a.m. with a delivery of money. They were met by two hooded bandits who opened fire with machine-guns.

Police said "close to 75" shots were fired in the exchange which left one of the bandits and an innocent bystander dead and the bystander's wife, two guards and a young Bell employee wounded.

As the guards entered the building on their way into the bank, two bandits revealed guns and opened fire.

Two guards were injured in the initial burst of bullets, but their partners managed to return the fire.

One bandit, later identified by police as Raymond Lynch, 26, was shot in the head four times.

His accomplice then escaped through a side entrance and fled with a third man believed waiting in a getaway car.

A police spokesman said police were aware of the bandits' identity and expected an early capture.

Corrado Festa, a 58-year-old businessman from Rome, and his wife Ada were caught in the crossfire, and Mr. Festa was fatally shot. Mrs. Festa was taken to hospital with a head wound, later diagnosed as a skull fracture.

One of the guards was shot in the arm, the other in the back.

A young Bell employee was struck in the thigh by a bullet that deflected off a wall as she tried to get out of the way of the gunfire.

All four wounded were reported to be in satisfactory conditions.

A police spokesman said the holdup trio entered the building through an employees entrance about 80 feet from the main entrance where the shootout occurred.

Just before the shooting started, witnesses said the two men donned "gruesome looking" rubber masks.

One of the security guards in the building told police he had noticed the men "acting very strangely" when the guards walked in.

He said he tipped away to an alcove to call police, and a few seconds later the gunfire began.

A police spokesman said the downtown area, where the attempted robbery took place, was a favorite of bank robbers because it was just north of the city's bank district on St. James Street and bandits could disappear easily into crowds.

Where Can Trash Go?

TRENTON (Staff) — Long suspecting they will have trouble disposing of trash collected in the annual Operation Clean Sweep campaign, officers of the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority now know they will.

Town council here Monday directed that the authority be advised it will not be able to use Trenton's sanitary landfill as a disposal site in the June 12 cleanup.

A letter from the LTRCA executive read during the meeting asked for permission to use the town dump but this must be closed by June 1 by order of the department of energy and resources management.

More Work For Lawyer

TRENTON (Staff) — The Town solicitor William Weston, will be paid a rate not to exceed $40 a day to represent Trenton in traffic violation cases. The crown will not represent these and the municipality must seek its own representative.

Judge J. J. Jackson has indicated his intention to hold one court session a month to hear such cases.

The court pay for Mr. Weston comes in addition to his $400 a month retainer fee.

Pollution Conference For Students Only

Just how bad is pollution anyway?

What's causing it and what's being done about it?

Who is responsible?

There has never been a face-to-face source of hard information on pollution, says Laurentian University. So it is providing one for high school students in June.

There has never been a place where students could sit down with biologists, engineers, economists, ecologists, zoologists and ask questions. No dialogue, no forum and no free exchange, says the university.

A face-to-face exchange on pollution will take place at Laurentian University June 3, 4 and 5 for Ontario high school students only. It's called The Straight Goods and is open to one representative from each high school in the province.

The idea is that each delegate goes back to his school with "the straight goods" on pollution.

Cost if $18 a student for board and lodging, plus transportation expenses.

About 600 delegates are expected to attend. Three dozen scientific, technical and academic experts on the environment will serve without fee. Aim of the organizers is to give the students "as close a shot at the 'fruit' as they can get."

Bike and Cartage Licences Needed

TRENTON (Staff) — By council decisions Monday, the town launched into new licensing programs — one for cartage services, another for bicycles.

Both had previously been responsibilities of the police department but were transferred because they involve handling money destined for municipal coffers. The practice of issuing bike licences had fallen into disuse.

Bill No. 1 new bicycle licensing scheme, a child must pay 25 cents to the municipal offices where he will receive a licence plate.

Failure to do so will result in a one - dollar fine or prosecution.

Council was told such licences would be a boon to police in processing bicycle thefts.

"If the only ones it helps are the police, they should handle it," maintained Councillor Ted Parker.

Councillor Paul Trip contended that the town were to get into the licensing field they should break even on the program. He suggested that 25 cents is too small a charge.

"I feel we should subsidize the children," Councillor Stan Ketchenson stated and the 25 cent program was accepted.

The second licensing scheme adopted requires that individuals using vehicles to convey goods belonging to others in the town pay an annual $10 licence fee to the Corporation of the Town of Trenton.

The charge will be the same regardless of the vehicle and must be paid at the Municipal Offices' before December 31 each year. All applications for renewal must be accompanied by certificates of mechanical fitness.

The cartage licences will be needed by only four or five local firms not operating under provincial regulations.

Store Closing Hours Up in Air in Picton

PICTON (Staff) — "They don't seem to know what they want," declared councillor Ross Cronkwright, considering Picton merchants' reactions to a proposed removal of store closing hour restrictions.

Mr. Cronkwright said he has conducted an independent survey of 95 per cent of the town's businessmen to learn their feeling toward the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce suggestion to leave store hours "wide open." A similar survey was carried out by the merchants among themselves. A list of 26 stores owners opposing any changes in store hours was presented to council last night.

"Nine of them who are now saying 'no' told me 'yes,'" said councillor Cronkwright.

Members of the chamber of commerce last night forwarded a motion passed during a director's meeting yesterday which requested council to do "as it sees fit, bearing the requirements of the community in mind."[1] It has been established by chamber directors through town solicitor Jack Ward, that town council has the power to repeal existing store closing hour bylaws.

Council agreed to take no action at this time concerning business hours in Picton stores. "They do what they want anyhow. Just leave them alone, and if they want a survey with a majority fine, but we won't do it for them," emphasized councillor Harry Abram.

Picton reeve Albert Piroth added that if a store owner wishes to complain anonymously against a colleague ignoring store closing hours, the existing bylaws will be enforced. Councillor Cory Watterson interjected, "The leader of the merchants is also on the police commission, so you can draw your own conclusions."

Provincial Offer 'Inadequate'

PICTON (Staff) — The Picton Fire Department will terminate protection services to Prince Edward Heights May 15 unless the Ontario Department of Public Works retains the protection, provincial termed "completely inadequate" by councillors.

Temporary fire protection services to the Ontario Hospital site have been provided free of cost for nearly one-year by the Picton Fire Department, pending negotiations.

Town council forwarded a proposal to director of the buildings construction branch of the provincial public works department offering fire protection for $30,000 annually. A letter of reply to this suggestion reviewed by council last night ignored the figure "a high fixed fee". Town councillors were urged to consider a fixed fee annually rental basis of about $500 plus a charge for individual fire calls, based on a monthly rate for each equipment piece and the cost for the total man - hours involved.

"If hate to slam the door in their faces," said deputy reeve James Bird, discussing council's refusal of this offer. He suggested that for a lower rate the Picton Fire Department would provide a lower level of fire protection for the hospital site than is given the rest of the town.

Councillor William Lane noted that fire in the Prince Edward Tripp feels, in view of Picton's present protection agreement with Athol and North Marysboro townships, a further agreement with the public works department would be "overstepping it."

Councillors generally agreed the town would consider further negotiations with the public works department for fire protection but also passed a motion declaring their last proposals "completely inadequate".

Councillor Harry Abram observed "they want a truck on 24-hour standby. There was a lot of shadow boxing at the start and one-year of free fire protection to negotiate and now comes their offer of $500. I think we are being led a little."

Councillor Lane confirmed that the provincial public works department delayed negotiations until the town clerk advised them that the temporary fire protection agreement would expire this month.

The original letter was written in January. I can't be too sympathetic with these people."

Homebuilders' Request OKed

TRENTON (Staff) Council here Monday put off approval of the official plan of the Town of Trenton to give members of the Quinte Homebuilders Association a chance to analyze it.

A letter from the homebuilders' group read at last night's meeting requested a copy of the plan and an opportunity to examine it before it is accepted.

Council was scheduled to give its approval last night.

A public meeting had been held to hear objections to the plan, Councillor Paul Tripp, a planning board member, pointed out.

Councillor Ted Parker said he was aware of this but advised giving the homebuilders a chance to look it over because they depend on its format for their living.

"This is inviting objections but we do not have to accept them" he added.

It is the intention to withold judgment on the plan, council has been involved in developing the town.

streets today in an effort to assert four traffic circles.

But it appeared many of those freed from jail this morning apparently also decided not to risk a second arrest and some were soon leaving the city.

As the rush hour began, traffic flowed smoothly across the four Potomac River bridges which were the target of Monday's disruption. Street-cleaning machines criss-crossed the bridges an hour before dawn to clear away a scattering of nails and tacks.

The fire department reported 85 false alarms in areas the protesters had marked for tieups today.

The demonstrators conceded police and military forces had prevailed Monday, when the largest groups tried to block the four major bridges into Virginia without lasting success.

Troops resumed their patrols of the bridges early this morning. The soldiers were no more than 20 feet apart on each span.

The disruptions Monday ranged from peaceful sit-downs at busy intersections to sheer vandalism. Hundreds of trash cans, bricks, bottles and other debris were thrown into the streets. Many cars were abandoned at intersections, some set afire. Fuel lines were snipped on buses, and several motorists had their tires slashed.

There were several incidents of protesters exchanging blows with police, although reports of serious injuries were scant. About 100 persons were treated at area hospitals.

Among those arrested Monday was Rennie Davis, one of the Chicago Seven and a co-ordinator of the demonstrations. He was charged with conspiring to violate civil rights. Earlier, Davis admitted that "in no way did we outmaneuvre the police."

Bond for Davis was set at $25,000, and he was still imprisoned early today.

Protesters, tired and hungry, found refuge late Monday in a few churches and at residences scattered around the city. But food was not plentiful, and sleeping space was at a premium.

So many were arrested that authorities had to commandeer a sports stadium for 1,520 of them. But by evening they had been moved and they spent the night under temporary shelters in the courtyard of the main city jail.

About 15,000 police and federal troops were called out to deal with the protesters, supporters of the Milltest Coalition for Peace and Justice and the Mayday Tribe, estimated to number 20,000.

The intent of the demonstrators had been to stop federal civil servants getting to work and thus, in effect, paralyse the government bureaucracy.

thorities the power to regulate store hours. This would ensure that any restrictions on retail store hours would apply equally throughout the province.

Ottawa delegates argued that the future welfare and prosperity of the retail business "makes it necessary that there be a resolution of the obvious differences between demands of the large mass merchandiser on the one hand and the small- or medium-sized personal-service retailer on the other."

They said that longer business hours would increase the cost of doing business and mean the ultimate withdrawal of many small/businesses from the retail field.

Two Car Washes Planned for City

There should soon be no excuse in Belleville for motorists driving around in dusty and mud-covered autos.

With four car washes already operating in the city — two of them with automatic facilities — a couple more automatic washes are being proposed with one of them already under construction.

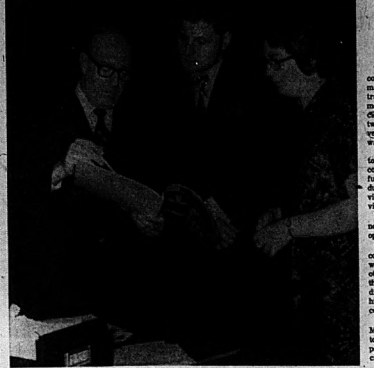
And now plans are going ahead for a second new automatic facility for the north side of Dundas Street West, near the site occupied by Advance Cleaners.

The city traffic committee yesterday approved the two entrances into the proposed car wash to be constructed by Esso.



Graham Brown, oil company representative said plans called for two gas pump islands with a single automatic car wash facility capable of handling up to 60 vehicles an hour.

Picton Mayor Proposes Traffic Flow Changes

PICTON (Staff) — Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman's proposal for a one - way main street coupled with off-street parking will be examined by members of council's public works committee in conjunction with its planning and development committee.

Mayor Ackerman, who was absent from last night's council session, outlined her suggestions in a letter to council as "a possible solution to our traffic problems and a step forward in anticipating the future development of our town."

The proposal calls for a two-way entrance on Bridge Street with a new cutoff at the top of this street permitting traffic to flow to the right at the top of the town hill. Traffic would proceed one way east on main St. to Paul St. and one way on King St. from Paul St. to Elizabeth St. travelling west. There will be one-way traffic flow on Mary St. going west from Bridge to Ross St. and two-way traffic on the remainder of Mary St.

Mayor Ackerman has stated that she hopes submission of her plan will stimulate thinking, provide constructive criticism and promote establishment of an over-all plan designed to relieve peak hour and tourist season traffic congestion. Provisions also would be made for needed off-street parking facilities. The mayor added that to expedite movement of emergency vehicles to major fires or accidents, the best possible conditions must be provided for their travel routes. "By establishing parallel parking only on Main Street and prohibiting entirely the double parking by delivery vans, traffic flow would be greatly improved. With respect to the cited problem of parking it may be well for council to consider the creation of a parking commission. This commission would have appropriate powers to establish and to administer all parking facilities. This I believe would be in the merchants' best interests," said Mayor Ackerman.

The mayor does not feel the proposal she has introduced would cost a great deal, according to chairman of the public works committee, James Bird. The traffic light now at Ross Street would be turned out and others erected at Paul and Elizabeth streets. It would be necessary to relocate parking meters and to repaint several streets. Mayor Ackerman has suggested off - street parking behind Picton stores.

Councillors discussed the mayor's proposal for a one - way street briefly and it was generally agreed that she be forwarded this plan to provoke a review of possible improvements in the traffic flow and the current parking situation.

Councillor Bessie Ward reminded, "The merchants are definitely against it." This remark prompted councillor William Lane to suggest local merchants should become involved in the problems of traffic control and parking. "Let's get them to take some interest in this town — a thing the merchants have never really done," he said. It was agreed that merchants' views would be invited added that to expedite movement of emergency vehicles to major fires or accidents, the best possible conditions must be provided for their travel routes. "By establishing parallel parking only on Main Street and prohibiting entirely the double parking by delivery vans, traffic flow would be greatly improved. With respect to the cited problem of parking it may be well for council to consider the creation of a parking commission. This commission would have appropriate powers to establish and to administer all parking facilities. This I believe would be in the merchants' best interests," said Mayor Ackerman.

Trenton Delays Dump Decision

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Despite a recommendation from the administrative board that a contract be signed with a commercial dump operator, council here Monday appointed a two - man committee to investigate further Trenton's waste disposal problems.

The board advised council to accept a $25,000 a year contract with Commercial Refuse Services for use of a dump located between Belleville and Trenton that Belleville is now using.

Trenton's garbage dump now costs $30,000 a year to operate.

Councillor Paul Tripp told council a delay in signing would be in order to see if others wished to tender for the job. He mentioned two individuals had approached him, showing interest in the contract.

Another property owner in Murray Township also wants to turn his land into a disposal site, according to Councillor Pete Axir.

Under current provisions with Commercial Refuse, household waste collected by municipal garbage trucks and the industrial garbage of the town could be disposed of at the site. However, a citizen taking a load of trash to the dump himself would have to pay a fee.

"I feel this surcharge is an imposition and we can get a better deal," said Councillor Tripp in asking for a decision to be stalled.

Furthermore, he said a delay might help avoid a legal dispute with David Scott, who leases the now - used sanitary landfill under contract.

Town engineer Arthur Campbell mentioned he had talked to Scott earlier in the day and no mention had been made of a legal fight, adding Mr. Tripp's broaching the subject publicly may plant the idea in his head.

Councillor Ted Parker cautioned against simply putting off a decision on what Trenton will do with its garbage.

"We are facing a tight time squeeze and we have talked about this for two or three months," he said, suggesting if such a decision were held up for too long a committee should be appointed to report to council lest no action be taken.

Councillors Tripp and Axir were given the job of reporting to council results of their investigations, which will include information on whether the waste management branch department of energy and resources management will extend the June 1 deadline for closing Trenton's dump. Recent communiques from the branch indicate one would not be granted.

Councillor Parker pointed out that the town would have to have substantial reason for an extension. "If we just ask for one without reasons, the answer will obviously be no."

Considerable time would be consumed in gaining approval for alternate sites other than one operated by Commercial. Mr. Campbell explained each would need approval of the township in which it is located, an engineering study would have to be taken, the proposals would have to be approved by the waste management branch, intentions of the town would have to be advertised. The Commercial Refuse site is already approved by the bodies involved.

County Wolf Bounties Exceed $4,000 A Year

Despite the inroads of civilization into their natural habitat, there is still a considerable wolf population in Hastings county.

Proof of this is the fact that the county pays out more than $4,000 a year in wolf bounty, this amount representing a slaughter of upwards of 150 animals.

Last year the county paid out $4,135 in wolf bounty with the payout in 1969 being $4,733 — or $233 more than had been budgeted for.

The county this year budgeted $5,000 for wolf bounties, the same amount as a year ago.

County Administrator Carl Bateman said the county pays $35 in bounty for an adult wolf and $15 for a pup.

The province in turn rebates the county 40 per cent of $25 for an adult wolf.

Also, some individual townships pay wolf bounty in addition to that of the county and one or more in Hastings are believed to be continuing the practice.

But payment of wolf bounty by individual townships can backfire when it is not general.

There have been instances where wolves killed in a municipality where there is no bounty have been taken across the township boundary to collect the additional bounty.

Payment of wolf bounty is a carry - over from earlier days when it was felt that wolf packs had to be reduced to avoid excessive raids on farmers' livestock.

This argument in favor of wolf bounties still exists with claims regularly being put forth of calves, deer and sheep being killed by the wolves.

But there also is another school of thought, this being that deer kills by wolves are actually a way of establishing a balance in deer population. Proponents of this line of thought say wolves kill only old or diseased deer.

Also there is the claim that wolves are unnecessarily maligned creatures and that continued payment of wolf bounty will upset their extinction as a species.

White-House Dialogue

President Nixon brings a measured, legalistic, approach to the conduct of his Press conferences. The "tricky Dicky" reputation, we feel, is unfair; for his stand on Vietnam in recent months has been nothing if not consistent. He has said again and again that U.S. forces will be gradually reduced, and this has been the case.

U. S. forces, however, will not be withdrawn in their entirety until it is felt that the South Vietnamese will be able to resist the enemy on their own, and certainly not so long as U.S. protective cover remains in their hands.

One would think such conferences would be free of patently silly questions, but this is not the case, and one of the most absurd, we believe ,is the one about naming a specific date for a final U.S. withdrawal. For strategic reasons, if for no other, Mr. Nixon can give no such assurance, and he has said so.

The president's answers are usually full and have the ring of frankness and honesty — even to those questions which, as we have noted, deserve short shrift.

Since this Washington television appearance Mr. Nixon has been to California, and on radio there he made a statement which was strangely prophetic in relation to the anti-war demonstrations at the weekend. He said that the right to demonstrate for the cause of peace abroad does not afford the right to break the law at home.

As had been anticipated, the demonstrators were out in force and many were arrested. No one can quarrel with the aims of these people — an end to the war in Southeast Asia — but their methods are highly questionable. In this case their objective was to disrupt traffic so that no one could get to work.

It says much for the work force that many got there as early as 3 a.m., in advance of the demonstrations. Such responsibility, we feel, is not matched by the anti-war people whose methods too often involve disruption and destruction, and whose sympathies are not even with their own country but rather with the communist enemy.

On His Own

Can Eric Kierans find success, happiness and recognition outside the Cabinet? Well, the former Communications Minister and one-time czar of Canada's postal services likely feels he has nothing to lose. He was finding himself more and more at odds with Government economic policies and feels he can be of greater value on his own while still remaining an MP.

At the same time look what happened to Paul Hellyer, the one time Defence Minister, and subsequently Minister of Transport with responsibility as well four housing, and that was an impressive position if ever there was one.

Mr. Hellyer has dropped virtually out of sight, although he surfaced recently to make another denunciation of Government economic policies. The point is, nobody in Cabinet takes Mr. Hellyer very seriously any more. The fact that he is more or less in the political wilderness is sufficient guarantee of that.

Mr. Kierans may suffer the same fate. He will likely be happy doing his own thing, but he may be sure no one — in the Cabinet at least — will pay him much attention.

'Spring Fever'

Last month's prison riot in Kingston had an earlier parallel halfway around the world at Auckland's Mount Eden prison. Trouble erupted in mid-March when 83 prisoners refused to come in from the exercise yards.

The prison superintendent was presented with a list of grievances, but about an hour later inmates started to smash seats, benches and wooden fixtures in the yard, and some armed themselves with batons.

Pistols were issued to prison officers and the riot subsided after one prisoner was shot in the thigh. Blame for the affair was placed on "a handful of troublemakers" among the inmates.

We get the feeling though that, as in the circumstances at Kingston, there were likely some inadequacies that were the real problem, we should think, is that strange restlessness of the spirit that hits most of us at this time of year. It does not necessarily have anything to do with romance, but call it spring fever if you like. "Down under," in Auckland, it might have been a sense of depression caused by the approach of winter which in that region is a damp, misty season. Mount Eden prison institution, incidentally, underwent a previous more serious riot, when troops were called out, two or three years ago.

The Real Power in the Land

Canada Remains in Grip of the Bureaucracy

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Evidence piles up with one respected authority after another testifying verbally and in writing that it is not the Government — but the "secret rulers" of Ottawa — which controls the country.

The true power, they all have said from Mackenzie King down the years until this very day, is in the clutch not of the House of Commons, elected by the taxpayers, but of the federal Civil Service mandarins, a self-perpetuating oligarchy.

They are beyond the reach of any government, untouchable and unbreakable.

They build their pyramids of power-finding through self-renewal, while governments — conservative and Liberal, come and go.

Former Prime Minister Mackenzie King, a "strong man" if there ever was one on Parliament Hill, said it first in his diaries:

The ministry, his Cabinet, his very own colleagues, were in order the control of the mandarins.

So ultimate was their power, he wrote, that his Finance Minister, James Lorimer Ilsley, confessed to making decisions and following policies he knew were mistakes and wrong, simply because his deputy minister, the storied Dr. Clifford Clark, the "Big Daddy" and mighty mandarinate, demanded it.

Dr. Clark, of course, believed he was right.

Finance Minister Ilsley was convinced he was wrong, but was helpless to countermand him, even though, theoretically, he was his boss.

Then Senator Grattan O'Leary, from his regular editorial chair seat of Parliamentwatching for 60 years, said flat: "Parliaments come and go. Ministries rise and fall. Only the bureaucracy prevails, its power unbroken and ultimate."

The Diefenbaker Conservatives discovered the truth of it, when they found themselves regarded as "occupation troops," as the Senator pinpointed it, by the mandarins.

New in office, but old in federal political experience, former Conservative Prime Minister Diefenbaker swore publicly he would do something about it, he would break the death-grip on power of the bureaucrats.

And he made a start, with the firing by former Trade Minister Gordon Churchill, Mitchell Sharp — yes, one and the same — then a departmental deputy minister and now Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Diefenbaker found himself a Gulliver, bog-tied by the Lilliputians of the Civil Service in miles of red tape.

The Right, a Conservative, Liberal and New Democratic — know where the true power lies and make no pretense that it is with them in Parliament.

Dr. O. M. Solandt, a mandarin's mandarin, and still a federal harness as Chairman of the Science Council, has said it, recently as the other day, testifying that the Government was "anti-industry," as he phrased it, because that is the way the ruling bureaucracy said it had to be.

Now, more recent evidence, and again from within the Liberal Cabinet, testimony based on 22 years in Parliament, given by former Defence, Transpod, Minister Paul Hellyer. The crux of the mild cabinet minister Paul Hellyer, but until he resigned, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's No. 2, his deputy.

And Paul Hellyer has laid it on the line about the power elite of the departmental deputy ministers, the ruling clique within the real authority of democracy continuing from one Parliament to the next, from one government to another.

He agrees with Dr. Solandt, but goes much further.

"The ongoing bureaucratic machine has far more power than any other group," he has proclaimed publicly, "too much power."

The economy is derailed, the country sideswipes its way past one crisis after another, even society itself becomes more accident-prone because these ultimate decisions that Paul Hellyer has seen them at work since 1949, are out of reach of reality.

The thing then to do?

"Fifty percent of the top two or three senators should be changed, not because they are not good people, well-motivated people, but many are brilliant people, but because some of them have been in Ottawa 30 years and more and get out of touch with the real world, as it is called. Something," I think

High Cost of Justice Under Attack in Ontario Legislature

TORONTO (CP) — Bills to standardize court reporters' fees and fines of Crown witnesses received third reading in the Ontario legislature Monday after opposition members criticized the high cost of justice.

A bill to standardize fees of justices of the peace also received third reading.

Three other bills sponsored by Attorney-General Allan Lawrence received second reading or approval in principal.

One provides for the use of a uniform traffic ticket that could also be used for offences other than traffic violations and is aimed at speeding up justice administration.

The other bills add two professions to the list of those exempt from jury duty, provide for uniform pay for jurors, and standardize other fees that come under the Administration of Justice Act.

Patrick Lawlor (NDP—Toronto Lakeshore) said that the province's system of court reporters is in a "confused and disorderly state" during debate on second reading of a bill to amend the County Judges Act.

He said the government "deliberately" preserved a section of the Public Service Act which allows court reporters to accept fees for transcriptions.

Mr. Lawlor said this will allow court reporters to continue to extract high fees from the legal profession and its clients despite the fact that "the cost of justice is high enough in this province."

Verna Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) said the current court reporting system results in delays of appeals or in the lawyer paying extra fees "for a hurried transcript, which makes no sense to me at all."

Mr. Lawrence agreed that the system is "ripe for reform" but he wants to do it "one bite at a time."

The "bite" of the bill would standardize fees paid court reporters no matter what type of tribunal they were doing transcripts for.

The bill, which received third reading, would also authorize an additional county court judge for Wentworth county and three additional judges having jurisdiction anywhere in Ontario.

Mr. Lawrence said a standardized fee scheduled for court reporters has not been established yet.

But in speaking to the bill amending the Crown Witnesses Act, he agreed that the current $6-a-day payment is "pretty archaic and out of date." It was last reviewed in 1956.

The bill, which received third reading, would standardize Crown witness fees under the Administration of Justice Act.

Mr. Lawrence did not say whether there would be a change in the fee schedule but one section provides for higher fees or allowances in special circumstances.

Mr. Lawlor was also critical of the province's system for employing justices of the peace and called for its reorganization during debate on an amendment to the Justices of the Peace Act which also received third reading.

The act would provide for uniformity in fees received by justices of the peace.

Mr. Lawlor said all JPs should be salaried because the fee system encourages them to "curry the favor of people in authority to get these little tasks."

Mr. Lawrence said he agreed with him at one time but investigation showed it was not economical to have JPs in rural areas on salary rather than a fee schedule.

He said, however, that there are 30 JPs in Ontario who are salaried, 23 of them in Metropolitan Toronto. Their pay scale ranges from $9,705 to $11,340 a year plus $120 a month extra for night duty.

In other business Monday:

—George Kerr, minister of energy and resources said the Ontario Water Resources Commission would spend $5 million this year helping established industries install water pollution-abatement equipment. He told a legislature committee studying the $100 million expenditures for his department in 1971-72 that the new program would eliminate excuses by industry that they could not afford to install equipment.

—Making his first public statement on bilingualism since succeeding John Robarts as premier, William Davis said that provincial government departments and agencies would be told to provide bilingual services where feasible, starting in areas with large Franco-Ontarian populations. The careers of unilingual civil servants in those areas would not be affected, he said.

—In reply to a question from James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) MR. Kerr said the federal government decided not to join Ontario as a co-plaintiff in the province's $25 million suit against Dow Chemical of Canada alleging mercury pollution of the St. Clair River and Lake Saheries. He added that Ottawa did not offer any opinion as to whether the province had jurisdiction under the constitution to launch the suit.

—Mr. Kerr also told the legislature that pollution charges were being considered against Canadian Gypsum of Weston. The company was polluting the air with mineral wool fallout and exhaust because of failures of its pollution abatement equipment, he said.

—Torontonians may soon be able to purchase liquor in city parks if a bill that received first reading Monday wins approval. The bill empowers the Metropolitan Toronto Council to license operations in city parks to sell liquor on a yearly basis or a period not to exceed 10 years.

—Another bill introduced by Attorney-General Allan Lawrence seeks to amend the Wages Act to allow a judge to adjust downward from 79 per cent the percentage of a debtor's wages that are exempt from seizure.

—Rene Brunelle of the lands and forests department, announced that two new provincial parks would be open this year —McRae Point on Lake Simcoe, east of Orillia, and Sioux Provincial Park on Highway 101 between Wawa and Chapleau.

—Installation of diesel units to supply electricity to small villages is being studied, George Kerr, minister of energy and resources said.

—Mr. Kerr said Ontario hydro would not sell power to a United States company if it means a loss of jobs in the Fort Frances area of northwestern Ontario.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR READERS: Remember the letter from the San Mateo wife who marked a calendar so she could keep count of how many times her husband made love to her? The response to that letter was an eye-opener. I had no idea thousands of other wives were also keeping calendars. These women have convinced me that I was too hard on the gal who wrote. Here are excerpts from the mail which proves once more that everybody knows better than anybody.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married eight years and I don't even write to my own mother, but your intensitive answer to the San Mateo wife made my blood boil. This is my second marriage. My first husband came home for lunch every day and didn't even eat. I thought I'd lose my mind. My present husband said to me after our third child was born. "Now I hope you will stop bothering me for sex." So, I have known both extremes and I can tell you, too much is better than too little. — FEAST OR FAMINE IN LA PORTE.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: I sympathize with San Mateo. I have the same problem, only I don't need to keep a calendar. I know the count — my birthday, his birthday, Christmas and the Fourth of July. When I told my husband his low sex drive was not normal for a man of 30 and suggested he see a doctor, he said, "I'm just fine. You should see a doctor." Your column was pinned to my pillow last night. Thanks for nothing. — HUNGRY IN HARTFORD.

* * *

Dear Ann: Your advice to San Mateo stank. Did it ever occur to you that the poor woman did make several passes at her husband and was turned down? Do you realize what this can do to a female's ego? Four years ago, after a spell of seven months with no loving, I decided to vamp my cold fish into submission. I bought a $25 nightgown, a bottle of Joy cologne and had my hair done. Do you know what he said? "Stop pestering me or I'll belt you one." My husband is 27 — not 77. So don't tell me I need counseling. — COLD BED IN COLUMBUS.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am very upset over your recent column. I don't care whether or not you print this but I want you to know what you've done. In your answer to a medical writer of the Houston Chronicle you said you checked with Dr. Denton Cooley and discovered that you had made a mistake. You closed with two words — "mea culpa."

Do you realize whatever said "Mea culpa" means you are so remorseful, and heartbroken over a transgression that you are reduced to nothing. It means you are begging forgiveness for a grievous fault — beating your breast and crying, "Mea culpa!" A person doesn't do this over a mistake in the newspaper.

I realize you are Jewish, which is your business, so why don't you close with "Eli, Eli" — or is that just as bad? — SARATOGA READER.

* * *

DEAR SARA: My editor is a Catholic and he did not find fault with "mea culpa." He says it is Latin for "my fault." If it offended you I am sorry. Will you settle for "O! gevald!"

CLUB 4-H NOTES

COOPER KITTENS

TWEED — The organizational meeting of the Cooper Kittens Homemaking Club was held recently at the home of Mrs. Jean Bailey.

For the business the election of officers was held as follows: president, Linda Clarke; vice-president, Jane Bailey; treasurer, Joan Bailey; press reporter, Lynda Watson. The girls discussed "Cereals For Everyday Eating".

The group work was making "Pastry Cookies" which everyone enjoyed.

A second meeting was held a day later also at the home of Mrs. Jean Bailey, when discussion was on the parts of a wheat grain and their importance.

The members cooked dogwoods and onion rice. Everyone enjoyed the former but the onion rice wasn't favored so much.

Meeting three was held one day later again, at the same home and the girls discussed a "Catalogue of Cereals". Group work was cooking "nuts and bolts" and "cherry bran squares". Everyone agreed both treats were delicious and the nuts and bolts were appetizing.

The fourth meeting was held one day later again, at Mrs. Jean Bailey's home, at 9.30 a.m. The Club girls discussed "Flour — Many Kinds, Many Uses". For the demonstration some members mixed a basic muffin dough and cooked it to see how the muffins turned out.

They made jam muffins and bran muffins. Both were tasted and found to be delicious.

Meeting five was held the same day, but in the afternoon. The discussion was from snacks to banquets and the popular pasta.

Group work was making tomato meat sauce, baked lasagna, and peanut cookies. All went home with their hunger satisfied.

The sixth meeting was held the following day and was about convenience, cost and the consumer.

The members and leaders discussed the cost of convenience, the consumer looks at cereals, buying reminders and storing guide.

For this meeting, hot water gingerbread, lemon sauce and brown sugar sauce were made and tasted.

The Experts Say

Hearing Problems Should Be Caught Early

TORONTO (CP) — If you think your child has a hearing problem, the sooner you do something about it the better, says Errol Davis.

The most important thing is to get them early, between birth and age three. If we miss them until they are four years old, we've missed one of the important time spans in developing normal speech."

Mr. Davis is an audiologist, consultant for the Canadian Hearing Society and a teacher at the University of Toronto medical school.

An audiologist fits hearing and helps choose hearing aids. Audiologists use electronic testing equipment and computers to help sift results.

He says many people believe a baby cannot be tested, but "a child can be tested at six months—not completely accurately, but fairly accurately."

Mr. Davis says a young child's whole outlook can be affected by poor hearing.

"How he relates to other people for years often depends on what he hears from his mother.

"If he can't hear, his concept of what's going on around him can be different from anyone else's."

He says deaf children will often manipulate things well, be quick at picture puzzles, but be lost when they try to deal with abstract things.

Mr. Davis says a deaf child may desire to a loud stereo set or respond to a loud noise because he can feel the vibrations. He might be able to hear a very loud sound or he might be able to hear sounds in a low range.

"Parents gesture when they talk to a child, and the child will begin to gesture as if he doesn't begin to speak, he can still make himself understood."

Apart from such clues as a discharge from the child's ears, the signs that a child does not hear well may not be immediately obvious, but they are there.

If his responses to the things people say are often inaccurate, he may have a hearing problem. If he does not seem to know someone has come into a room unless he can see them, he may have a hearing problem. If he is late talking or has poor speech and language development, he may have a hearing problem.

"Sometimes it is medically correctable, sometimes not. But it is important to get a hearing aid if necessary, and the parent should know how to help a child with a hearing problem.

"How you start with a child is going to determine his future, whether he goes to an ordinary school, a school for the deaf or a class for the hard of hearing."

Mr. Davis recommends taking a child to an ear specialist or a hearing aid speech centre where he can get the best testing possible and advice on a hearing aid.

Rum Cream Pie Excellent For Large Buffet Dessert

By MARY MOORE

Tarte Beauvoir is Rum Cream Pie and will serve from 28 to 30 people. Our hostesses, ever on the search for large scale desserts for their buffet parties, will clip this if they know what is good.

It is to be served at Glenhyrst Arts Council Gourmet Dinners at Brantford, Ontario on May 5, 6, and 7 and I hope some of you can attend.

RUM CREAM PIE

(Tarte Beauvoir — serves 28 to 30).

CRUST:

2 cups fine chocolate cookie crumbs (or, graham wafer crumbs)

½ cup melted butter

FILLING:

6 egg yolks

1 cup sugar

1 tbsp. gelatine

½ cup cold water

1 pint whipping (32 percent cream)

¼ cup light or dark rum

2 squares semi-sweet chocolate (for topping)

To make the Crust I think a 10 x 15½" deep pie plate is advisable because it facilitates serving. But you can use a spring form pan. Combine the fine chocolate cookie crumbs with the melted butter and line bottom and sides of well-buttered deep large pie plate evenly.

To make filling, in heater bowl beat egg yolks with sugar until thick and light — about 10 min. Soak gelatine in the cold water then stand the container in boiling water and stir until dissolved. While beating on "high" add gelatine liquid to egg-sugar mixture.

Whip the cream until stiff. Fold whipped cream and rum into egg-sugar mixture until perfectly blended. Pour into crumb-lined pie plate or spring form pan. Shred semi-sweet chocolate directly onto pie and let it scatter at will. Chill until set overnight.

Take note that his is a rich pie. Take not that this is a rich guest dessert that will serve a large number.

U.C.W. Meetings

FRANKFORD UCW

FRANKFORD — On Tuesday April 13, the units of the Frankford UCW met at 7.30 p.m. in Rose Lowry Hall prior to a general meeting at 8 p.m.

The president opened the meeting with a reading on Holy Week. An invitation was extended from the Foxboro UCW to attend a "blossom" tea on May 25. A number of thank-you cards were read and also correspondence for the Board of Stewards regarding a proposed organ fund.

The following coming events were announced: luncheon for $1.00 on May 4 at the legion hall with the home economist as guest speaker; all day quilting session on April 20 at Lions' centre with a pot luck lunch.

Reports were received from the unit leaders on projects for coming events, Mrs. G. Halsall reported on the recent survey package of handages, knitting etc. sent to Angola. The next project is "operation eyeglass" for Caribbean students.

It was decided the UCW members will now assist the elders in extending greetings at the entrance of the church on Sunday mornings.

Next year's mission study will be on the new generation in Africa. It was suggested that an initial folder be ordered for viewing. It was agreed to send two delegates to attend camp Quin-mo-lac for the weekend conference in September.

Mrs. J. Weese reported from the Hastings Manor committee with a schedule for requests for help and food.

On behalf of the church school, Mrs. C. Halsall invited everyone to attend the fashion and entertainment night on Thursday April 15.

The worship service, under the direction of unit 2 opened with a solo by Mrs. E. Windover who also read an appropriate meditation. This was followed by a hymn.

Details of the last supper were read by Mrs. R. Marver with a duet sung by Mrs. R. Reid and Mrs. C. Partington. The "trial" was portrayed by readings. Mrs. B. White closed the service with readings from Luke 24 and a hymn.

Successful Living

Mother's Day Dates Back to 1907

By DORIS CLARK

Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia had a warm, wonderful relationship with her mother. She was sure the sentiment was universal, so in 1907 she campaigned for a national celebration of Mother's Day. She chose the second Sunday in May, with the carnation as the symbolic flower. A colored carnation indicated a living mother; a white one meant that the mother's love one who wore it had passed on.

The ancient Greeks and Romans honored mothers and d with celebrations. A mid-Lenten Mothering Sunday has long been kept in England and other countires have their own ways of giving Mother a boost.

Not all children share Anna Jarvis' happy relations h i with their mothers. Mother is human and prey to individual hang-ups. Yet the sacrifices and efforts of most mothers are generally well beyond the limits of duty and prompted by selfless love. A mother's own ambitions and wishes may often go unrealized so that her children may have opportunity.

It is not enough to remember Mother with a gift and a pretty card on Mother's Day. Mother deserves affectionate consideration all year round.

May this Mother's Day be only the beginning of a perpetual honoring of one of the two most influential persons in our lives! — Dorothy Turcotte.

Dear Doris: What can I do for bony knees? The inside of the bone sticks out more than usual. I was told by a friend I'd have nice legs if it wasn't for this bony protrusion.

How can I get chubbier arms but still keep a slim figure? My arms are away too thin. — Bony

Dear Bony: Lots of women have knock-knees because of the shape of this bone.

Better bone up on fattening up. Without knowing your actual weight and height I can't say how many pounds you ought to be putting on — but even three to five pounds can help round out a figure.

I hope you are eating breakfast. This is what a lot of thin people skip. Write in for my Chart for Curves. Send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

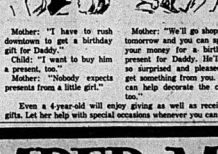
Dear Doris: Since we moved to the city it's been hard to find true friends. I am 13.

Would you know of anyone around my age who would be glad to visit back and forth just to talk over a cup of tea and pass the afternoon?

It bothers me to put into groups of people so I avoid it. But I am a very devoted person and would like to find one or two ladies that would also appreciate a devoted friend they could count on. — Lonely.

Dear Lonely: This is a question I get all the time. Other readers may be glad of the ideas I have for you.

I don't live where you are so I can't name any convenient neighbors; but there are bound to be people who would like to make friends with you. Not something you do at the drop of a hat.



Perhaps you don't like groups, but when you limit yourself to the neighbor on either side of you, you can't be sure to hit the jackpot. It is far easier to make a selection when you get to know a number of people.

This is what I'm suggesting: that you get to know people where you are by taking an interest in some community efforts. One or two of the things you mix with will jump at your invitation for a cup of tea. That's the way friendship grows.

Make the first gesture and get the ball rolling.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I have to rush downtown to get a birthday gift for Daddy."

Child: "I want to buy him a present, too."

Mother: "We'll go shopping tomorrow and you can spend your money for a birthday present for Daddy. He'll be so surprised and pleased to get something from you. You can help decorate the cake, too."

Even a 4-year-old will enjoy giving as well as receiving gifts. Let her help with special occasions whenever you can.

Windsor Lawyer Is Named Commerce Chamber Head

TORONTO (CP) — The new chief spokesman for 50,000 Ontario business leaders is a corporate lawyer with strong views on the need for a review of labor-management bargaining procedure.

C. J. Clark, 50, of Windsor, elected president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce today, sees three main areas of concern for the chamber in the next year or so.

One is the rising cost of education, another the trend toward regional government, and the third to seek some "new approach" to collective bargaining.

Mr. Clark recalled in an interview that the annual convention of the chamber last year called for a search for a new and better labor-management relationship. He promised that he would press on with this study.

"There must be improvement," he said.

Mr. Clark also expressed concern about inflation.

"Not enough people are concerned. Governments are not too certain about its cure and a lot of people have a lack of belief in government policies.

Benson Won't Table Budget Until June

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Monday he will not present his annual budget in the Commons until next month.

He said in the Commons that at the same time he will introduce legislation on changes in the income tax system and comment on the status of the Canadian dollar.

Mr. Benson was replying to opposition MPs, including Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield who said unpegging of the dollar a year ago has had serious consequences for Canadian exporters, especially manufacturers.

In reply to John Burton (NDP —Regina East), the minister said his tax change legislation will be "related" to the budget, an indication that the two may be presented in a single package.

The proposed changes in the income tax system have been under reconsideration by the government since Mr. Benson's announcement that all the recommendations in the white paper on tax reform would not be adopted.

Questioned further by New Democrat leader David Lewis, Mr. Benson said the house could expect that "substantial changes" in present income tax legislation would be presented in the budget.

The budget would also provide estimates of the unemployment rate for the rest of the year.

The minister refused, however, to state when the government believes the economy will reach a rate of three-per-cent unemployment.

Silent Majority Okays Pay Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons silent majority moved in Monday to vote for second-reading approval of a bill to increase the pay of MPs and senators.

Although almost all who have spoken on the bill during the last three days have committed themselves in fighting it, it soared over its first parliamentary hurdle by an easy 109 to 31 margin.

The legislation, which would increase the salaries of MPs and senators to $18,000 from $12,000, now goes to committee for clause-by-clause examination and possible amendment.

It would also increase the tax-free expense account of MPs to $8,000 from $4,000 and for senators to $4,000 from $3,000.

Voting against the second-reading motion were 18 NDP members, 12 Creditistes and Stan Schumacher (PC—Palliser).

Those who voted no were mainly the members who have expressed opposition to the bill, although three of its most notable critics were absent.

Missing were Liberal members Paul St. Pierre (Coast-Chilcotin), Douglas Hogarth (New Westminster) and Tom Goode (Burnaby-Richmond-Delta), all of whom said earlier they will not accept the pay increases.

Nearly all who voted in favor have been quiet during the debate, with the notable exception of John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview), who supported the increases and was the only member of his party to vote in favor.

Of the 358 members eligible to vote—Speaker Lucien Lamoureux does not and there are five vacancies—118 were not present.

U.S. Supreme Court Won't Bar Executions

WASHINGTON (CP) — Hope faded today for 651 persons sentenced to death in 31 states after the U.S. Supreme court refused to outlaw state executions.

The court's decision Monday in two key cases is not likely to result in wholesale electrocutions, hangings and gassings, but prison officials estimated a pre-1963 level of 40 executions a year seemed possible.

Death sentences were carried out with less frequency starting in 1963, when the Supreme Court began taking long looks at cases challenging the legality of the sentence.

Up to three-quarters of the 644 men and seven women awaiting death have yet to exhaust their appeals. Even a prisoner who refuses to fight for his life can expect to stay alive three years after sentencing because of automatic appeals.

But that still leaves about 25 per cent of the death row prisoners whose appeals are exhausted and who could face death shortly.

Opponents of capital punishment already are planning meetings to map new strategy to try to outlaw the death sentence.

Ray Tries To Escape

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray, who pleaded guilty to slaying Martin Luther King Jr., almost turned his 99-year prison sentence into death when he tried to escape through a prison steam tunnel.

"He would never have survived the heat if he hadn't got out of the tunnel," Warden Robert Moore of Brushy Mountain state prison said Monday of Ray's unsuccessful escape attempt.

Ray was captured in the prison compound as he sought a way over the stone wall of the maximum security prison in the Cumberland Mountains.

He faced a disciplinary board this morning.

"He was in the tunnel for about 10 minutes," Moore said, "and he had a few burns but they didn't appear to be serious."

Moore said it would have been impossible for Ray to reach the end of the tunnel without being scalded to death in the 400-degree heat. The tunnel leads to the prison steam plant outside the prison walls.

Augmented Choir's Elijah Thrills Jampacked Audience

By EUGENE LANG

Bridge Street United Church holds 1,100 people. Bridge Street United Church held nearer to 1,200 people last evening as every available pew was packed, along with dozens of extra chairs placed for the overflow. The reason for this unusually large contingent of people was the presentation of the Bridge Street United Church Augmented Choir of Felix Mendelssohn's crowning masterpiece Elijah written in the second last year of his short life.

Subtracting two or three defects of the composition, it remains, as Donald Francis Tovey so knowledgeably states, "a vivid and coherent oratorio which, musically and dramatically, towers above many later works by many accomplished composers" of the last century. Written in 1845, it was premiered the following year in Birmingham, England, with such success that eight of the numbers were encored, and when the performance was over, the composer was mobbed by his adoring public. The text is essentially more dramatic than lyric, albeit many beautiful arias are sprinkled through the score.

Seldom has one seen a choir of such dimensions in local musical attractions as was conducted under the counselling hands of Robert H. Reid, the director. Eighty voices brought eloquence to all of the concerted choruses. Mention of some golden moments in choral creations will illustrate. Yet Doth the Lord brought out resounding power and strength with sopranos cresting smoothly in their higher registers. A subdued softness was evoked in the lively paced Blessed Are the Men Who Fear Him, with strings blending suavely in instrumental tracings. Towards the end the tenors faulted somewhat in their descents on the word 'Blesses'. Excitingly sung was the Baal, We Cry to Thee with lively tempo set in second part that dissolved in hushed conciliation. Spontaneous outbursts gushed from all throats in The Fire Descends from Heav'n, culminating in hymnal reserve at close. Be not Afraid was stirring in rendition with splendor of vociferous exclamation from the large choir, with total instrumental forces in full play for enhancement of effectiveness. The forceful measures of Woe to Him were sing with terrifying impact while a lolling lustre of sustenance was maintained in the traversal of He, Watching over Israel. A fusing of dulcet solemnity was instilled in reverential probings of He that Shall Endure to the End.

Tremolos of tympani and shattering shouts combined in vibrant contrivings that decrescended to hummings in Behold, God the Lord Passed By! With tricky syncopations from the strings and organ as attendants, the force of all was felt to the distant reaches of the church in Thou Did Elijah The Prophet Break Forth. Concluding chorus And Then Shall Your Light Break Forth brought gorgeous sound in a paean of praise from entire choir that resulted in spontaneous applause bursting from the huge congregation.

Four soloists of sterling accomplishment were highlights in each of their appearances. The part of Elijah, demanding to any singer, was given a marvelous portrayal by Basso James Bechtel of Hamilton. Dramatic fervor was infused into all recitatives with stentorian richness. Living the part was his wont at all times. In various solo numbers a voice of great resonance and power was heard to advantageous characterization. One example: It is Enough, was delivered with intense dejection in a highly emotional sense of vocal artistry. Never did Mr. Bechtel disappoint his hearers at any time. Superbly he sang throughout.

Hazelanne Reid as soprano soloist again responded to all required of her, with soaring mellowness inherent in her cistillations. A soulful creation was her projection of the lovely Hear Ye, Israel to mention only one instance.

Margaret Sullwell, from Toronto, was the possessor of a deeply based contralto voice that rose to all occasions in her various offerings. Woe, Woe Unto Them was one of the opportunities to display the opulent qualities of her velvet timbre. This she did with extended lines of appealing fulfillment.

Tenor Larry Marshal, another Toronto import, is the possessor of a vibrant tenor voice, here used to excellence in his role of Obadiah. Sustained lyricism was noticeable in his singing of the pleading If With All Your Hearts, showing clarity in his ascending flights in line of aria.

Violinists Stephen Choma, Marion Stratton, Joachim Riemann and Wilson Grant along with Violist Lorna Scheel provided carefully devised accompaniments. Difficult instrumental parts were written into the score by the composer, especially for the strings, and here these five players gave much color to the benefit of the choir and soloists. Only once was an apparent hiatus to take the role of intruder, toward the end of It Is Enough.

S. Alec Gordon, as was to be expected, gave well devised accompaniments at all times. A long and arduous organ part; but Mr. Gordon is always there for a fine performance.

Jack Denyes added dramatic intent and two toned solidarity with his kettledrum undertonings.

Finally, a word about the conductor. From inception to projection the plaudits must go to Robert Reid for his sincere recreation of this great musical work. He again demonstrated his worthy musicianship and conductorial credentials by the truly inspiring performance that he generated from his choir. Untold hours of toil, trial, and tribulation on the part of all resulted in the stirring performance that was the outcome of session upon session of practice and rehearsal. To Mr. Reid and all, our congratulations on a formidable task of excellence.

Facelift For Market

TRENTON (Staff) — The question of what will happen to Trenton's farmers' market was finally resolved last night with victory going to the farmers.

Town council determined that the market should stay on its traditional midtown site and be improved.

By the decision, the interior of the market building will be painted and its lighting will be upgraded.

Trash cans will be placed on the market in line with farmers' requests.

The pavement on the market square will be repaired to prevent water lying on the ground as it does now after a rainfall.

In addition, signs will be erected on the market, advising the general public of marketing hours.

Town council determined that the market should stay on its traditional midtown site and be improved.

The Trenton Market Committee, formed to block attempts to have the market moved to a Front Street parking lot, had also requested that uniform tables be provided to the farmers and washroom facilities be made available. Council did not heed these requests.

Committee representatives told council they would be happy "with any small crumbs . . . if we can have improvements as time goes along, we will be pleased."

CNR's 6218 Retirement Ceremonies in Belleville

Canadian National Railways Rideau Area Manager, George Van de Water this morning announced the last operating Canadian steam locomotive, Northern class 6218, A CNR 1942-built Montreal express, passenger and heavy freight engine which operated between Montreal and Toronto, would have its final excursion run in Belleville July 3 and 4. The official retirement ceremonies will be attended by more than 7,000 railroad buffs and officials, including CNR president N. J. McMillan, J. H. Richer, vice-president in the St. Lawrence Region, city officials and special guests. Five 40-mile round trips to Amaon Junction will be made from Belleville over the holiday weekend.

Officials Favor Long-term Plan

Year-in-advance commitment by city council for capital works would do much toward assuring that such projects would be carried out in the year for which they are scheduled.

This was the suggestion from senior city staff members at yesterday's traffic and light meeting when committee members were asked to recommend priorities for a backlog of proposed 1973 capital works projects.

Such a policy, it was stated, would give engineering staff time to do the design work after OMB approvals were received and be ready for calling of tenders early in the year for which construction is planned.

Cost of the design work could be carried by the city and charged against the specific project or, if the work didn't go ahead, against the general rate.

Major works planned for construction this year include the first phase of the Sidney Street overpass and the reconstruction of Dundas East from Bleecker Ave. to the divided highway. Design work for these projects is completed and the work will go ahead.

However, the city's five-year capital works program calls for reconstruction next year of Dundas Street East from Front Street to Bleecker Ave. and city engineer Wilbur Purcell says the design for the project hasn't even been started.

Commitment by city council this year for the project would enable design work to go ahead now and allow for calling of tenders early in the year.

Traffic committee members agreed that the East Dundas Street reconstruction had number one priority for next year but further than this drew a line at recommending further work for 1972.

Instead, Alderman Arnold Orr, "without passing the buck" suggested that city manager J. R. Reynolds and city engineer Wilbur Purcell recommend project priorities for next year.

The two staff officials were in a better position to make such recommendations than were committee members, the alderman said.

"Staff officials could make recommendations for approval or amendment by council."

Committee members went along with the proposal and the two senior staff members were directed to recommend the capital works priority list for next year.

Allan Cup Doesn't Bring Out Best in Calgary Challengers

GALT (CP) — The Allan Cup finals, during alternate years when they are played in the east, have not brought out the best in Calgary Senior A hockey clubs.

When Stampeders skate across Galt Gutsy Hornets in the third game of the national finals here tonight, they will be attempting to end a frustrating 16-game losing streak in the east.

Stamps trail the Ontario Hockey Association champions 2-0 in the best-of-seven series after shooting 4-3 and 7-6 losses Saturday and Sunday.

Actually, Stamps have not been the victims in all 16 losses. Calgary Spurs started the frustrating losing streak in 1967 when they lost four straight games in the Canadian finals in Drummondville, Que.

"We're not responsible for those," says the coach of the Stampeders, Roy Kelly. His clubs, however, have lost six in a row to Hornets in the 1969 and the 1971 finals, all in the Galt Arena.

"We'll get better," he says, pointing to the 12-day layoff his team endured while awaiting an eastern winner.

There will be no change in officials for the third game as requested by Stampeders. The western club complained about the officiating of Blair Graham in the opener, but the entire Canadian Amateur Hockey Association executive was in attendance at that game and did not feel his work warranted a change.

In the two games, Calgary has drawn 17 infopns while Galt has taken 16 plus a 10-minute misconduct.

Galt coach Bill Wylie, whose team has overcome two serious injuries in recent weeks in their drive for a second Allan Cup in three seasons, is inclined to agree with Kelly's assessment of the western champs.

"They're a better club than in 1969," says Wylie. "But we're not kidding ourselves about winning four straight."

The loss of left winger Toni McCarthy with a broken leg and all-star defenceman Ron Herr, got with a separated shoulder in the eastern finals against Grand Falls, Nfld., has reduced Wylie's bench.

But Hornets have been able to get the jump on Calgary in both games.

Stampeders have held the lead only once in the two games.

Len Halsy, a pickup from Edmonton, gave them a 4-3 cushion early in the first overtime period Sunday. The lead lasted for only 40 seconds before Bruce Reier nullified it with his third goal of the game.

Reier, a 25-year-old native of Kitchener, is scoring at a phenominal pace—58 goals in 80 games.

Wylie gave Hornets the day off Monday to recuperate. The club has played seven games in the last 10 nights and their fatigue was showing noticeably in the late stages of Sunday's overtime duel.

Chicago-Hab Series Another Goalies' Duel?

CHICAGO (CP) — Michigan Tech and Cornell University in the Stanley Cup final starting tonight?

If goaltending is a decisive factor, then the outcome of the best-of-seven final between Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal Canadiens could well rest with graduates of one school or the other.

Tony Esposito, the Michigan Tech grad who had a record 15 shutouts in his rookie National Hockey League season last year, has played in all 11 playoff games this season for Chicago.

He allowed only 22 goals, recorded one shutout, winning eight and losing three for a 1.86 goals-against average in the Black Hawks' four-game quarter-final sweep of Philadelphia Flyers and seven - game semi-final with New York Rangers.

Ken Dryden, a Cornell grad and now part-time law student at Montreal's McGill University, appeared in only six games with the Canadiens late in the season.

However, he has appeared in all 13 Montreal playoff games, including eight wins. He allowed 43 goals for a 3.31 average in the playoffs plus two of them into empty nets.

While Esposito skated with the Black Hawks Monday to unwind from the tension-filled 4-2 win Sunday to end the seven-game set with New York, Dryden was undergoing tension of a different kind.

The quiet, reserved Montreal goaltender was kept busy with the rest of his team-mates on their flight from Montreal, signing autographs for a flock of passengers aboard the Boeing 747 Air France jumbo jet that brought the team here.

While Esposito, a former Canadien, has experience against his former team-mates over the last two seasons, Dryden has faced the Hawks but once, a 2-1 victory here March 28.

"I've no preference," he replied when asked by reporters after Montreal's six-game semi-final with Minnesota North Stars whether he'd prefer Chicago or New York in the final.

"I've met them both in the short time I was here before the playoffs." He was in the Montreal goal in a 7-2 win at home against the Rangers.

Esposito, almost as reticent as Dryden, admitted he was nervous against the Rangers Sunday and likely will have the pressure bull up again by game time tomorrow.

"You've got to be nervous out there," Esposito said. "I'm sure Eddie Giacomin (New York goalie) was just as nervous as I was.

"If you weren't nervous in a situation like that, you'd be too stupid to realize what was at stake."

Both clubs have doubtful starters for tonight's game.

Chicago's Pit Martin, who aggravated a knee injury early in Sunday's game when he and Ranger defenceman Tim Horton collided, and later when he was upended by Dave Balon, is listed as doubtful.

Rugged John Ferguson made the trip to Chicago but the hip injury he suffered in the fifth game of the Montreal-Minnesota series is bothering him.

In addition to Martin, the Hawks will be without forward Bryan Campbell who missed the entire Ranger series with a throat ailment and lost 12 pounds in hospital.

"He just isn't strong enough to play," said coach Billy Reay.

The Montreal team arrived here Monday evening and was scheduled for a light workout at Chicago Stadium at noon today after the Hawks had finished.

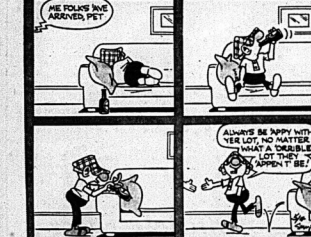
Harris Likes Chances As Candidate for Swedish Coaching Job

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Harris, veteran of 12 years in the National Hockey League, returned from Sweden this weekend and said there is good chance he may coach its national team.

Harris, who last year coached Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Jr. A series, said:



"I was very pleased with what I saw, and I think they were very satisfied with our discussions."

Harris flew to Stockholm last week to discuss setting up a program of summer hockey schools," Harris said. "Later though, at a second press conference, it was announced I was there as a candidate. The first announcement was apparently mislead them while we were negotiating."

Harris is a partner in a chain of Canadian and United States hockey schools.

If Harris does get the contract, it won't start until Sept. 1.

"This means it will not interfere with our summer hockey schools," said Harris. "I would coach their national team, do a lot of scouting, and put the team together. And I'd be the assistant coach for their B team and their junior national team, which I think means I'd be an advisor."

Dionne Wins Round

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — St. Catharines' captain Marcel Dionne scored a decisive victory Monday night in the second round of the battle of the Junior A hockey super-stars.

Dionne's four goals helped the Black Hawks crush Quebec Remparts 8-3 to even the best-of-seven Richardson Trophy series at one game each.

Dionne, who won the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring championship in regular-season play, and Quebec's Guy Lafleur, who scored 130 goals and won the Quebec Junior Hockey League points race, are expected to be the first two picks in the National Hockey League player draft next month.

Lafleur, criticized for his play Sunday night by Quebec coach Maurice Filion, ... aged just one assist all night — the Remparts' first goal, scored by Rene Lambert.

Dionne's four goals gave him 33 to go with 28 assists in 17 playoff games. Lafleur has 24 playoff goals.

Lafleur wasn't alone in having an off-night Monday as the Quebec team that upset the Hawks 4-2 Sunday was overpowered.

The Hawks fired 61 shots at Quebec goaltender Michel Deguise, whose goaltending was again a highlight for the Remparts.

In the second period alone, he faced as many shots — 24 — as St. Catharines' goalie George Hulme faced in the whole game.

"We didn't check tonight and anybody can score when we play like that," said Filion in an apparent reference to Dionne's output.

"We're glad to get one win in two games in St. Catharines. The Hawks really wanted that one and we were never really in it. We let them walk all over us."

"We'll see when we get back on home ice who is the better team. Our larger ice surface should help us."

Next chapter in the Dionne-Lafleur confrontation takes place Friday night in Quebec, with the fourth game scheduled for Saturday night. Fifth game will be back here next Monday.

Islanders Held in Check

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Al Cadman, coach the Red Deer, Alta., Rustlers, says some spirited checking and a great display of hustle is the reason his team dumped the Charlottetown Islanders 6-3 Monday night in the first game of a best-of-seven series for the Centennial Cup.

The next game in the playoff for the Canadian championship in level two will be played here tonight.

"Everybody checked," Cadman said. But checking alone didn't stop the Islanders, who directed 41 shots at Red Deer goaltender Dale Henwood.

The Red Deer goalie was particularly tough in the first and second periods when he held the Islanders to three goals on 35 shots.

For the Islanders, it was only the second loss at home in 22 playoff games this year. The first was early in March when Halifax Atlantics defeated Charlottetown in Maritime League action.

Arsenal Ends 18-Year Drought

LONDON (CP) — Arsenal defeated Tottenham Hotspur 1-0 with a goal two minutes from time Monday night to win the English League soccer championship.

Ray Kennedy scored the goal before 60,000 fans.

Arsenal finished the season one point ahead of Leeds—65 points from 42 games, compared with Leeds' 64.

Arsenal won the title for the first time since 1953. It will play in the European Cup of Champions next season for the first time.

It was the closest finish in the 82-year history of the English League.

Until two minutes from the end, with the score 0-0, Arsenal was ahead of Leeds by one-hundredth part of a goal.

Bobby Hull has finally escaped the ranks of athletes enshrined in the "You-sure-about-that?" club.

You know how it works. Somebody says "Poor old Sam Snead. One of the slickest guys what ever took a divot and he never won the U.S Open."

Then somebody pipes up: "You sure about that?"

Some of the oddities would be food even for Mr. Ripley's thoughts. Like Ted Williams never playing on a World Series team, even though his six American League batting titles certainly gave the Red Sox something to work with.

And there's sure to be someone say "You're pitching me on" when you recall that only one man has ever reclaimed the world heavyweight boxing title after losing it, namely Floyd Patterson. None of the great ones — Dempsey, Louis, and to date Ali-Clay — could do it.

Hockey has its share of such quirks that send its patrons scrambling for their record books.

Rocket Never Champion

Strange, is it not, that Maurice Richard, the Babe Ruth of shinny, couldn't connect one National Hockey League scoring championship from the 511 goals and 965 points he produced in 18 seasons! He led the league in goal output five times.

Similarly, until a week ago tonight, one of the NHL's most exciting journeymen, B. Hull of the Black Hawks, had missed out on one of hockey's big thrills —an overtime goal.

Hull's blistering slap right off Pit Martin's face-off beat New York Rangers 3-2, and was Hull's first overtime goal in 99 playoff games to that point. Two games later, a very similar goal from the fan's ras curved stick would again break Ranger backs.

The Golden Jet has nothing on Gordie Howe, who has never scored an overtime goal in 154 playoff outings.

However the supreme Red Wing can claim 11 game-winning goals for Detroit in Stanley Cup competition, which places him third on the all-time list behind the Rocket (18) and Bernie Geoffrion (14).

Not even NHL statistician Ron Andrews can say how many game-winners Robert Hull has pulled out of his sleeve in 12 years of playoff action, since that study is a relatively new inclusion in the record books.

Suffice to say, the fact that Hull has two game-winners in the last week suggest he represents a definite stumbling block between Montreal Canadiens and their 15th Stanley Cup.

Which Goal Wins?

The whole question of game-winning goals is a hotly-debated one. There is no doubt about the overtime period, which spells immediate curtains under the NHL's sudden-death format.

Undisputed champion in this, and many key playoff categories, is still Maurice Richard, whose six overtime scores will probably never be equalled. Mel "Sudden-Death" Hill is runner-up with three, but the Boston Bruin flash is the playoff goose in all his 9 in a seven game series with New York Rangers in 1939. (Richard, incidentally, also got three overtime goals in one playoff year, in 1951 series against Detroit and Toronto).

A raft of other NHLers — the latest being New York's Pete Stemkowski — have two sudden-death scores to their credit.

Other than overtime goals and one-goal differences, many experts are skeptical about calling say, the fifth goal for a team earning a 9-4 verdict "the winner."

One school of thought proposes that the player who puts a team ahead to stay in a game should be credited with scoring the "winning" goal. Games in which teams lead 7-0 and end up winning 7-3 lend credence to this reasoning. It's not uncommon for lopsided winners to lapse defensively, or throw out bench-warmers without worrying about giving up a goal or two.

But the gravel-dobby of game winners is still the overtime goal, a sports definition of instant success. Overtime is excitement at its greatest, but the National Hockey League is unlikely to soon adopt the practice to settle regular-schedule standoffs.

Most teams, except league powerhouses, are content with a point split in any opposition rink.

Under the added pressure of playoffs, (members of the Hawks and Canadiens have each picked up $7,000 in post-season cash to date, with the big apple to be sliced up, winning on the other team's ice is an even tougher chore.

Two members of the Dairy Queen house league novices show some fancy moves in a practice session for the Belleville Minor Lacrosse team last night. The minor lacrosse body will have a total of 18 teams operating this season, including three from Middleton Park. In addition there will be all-star teams in midget, bantam, peewee and novice age groups. The 270-strong body will be holding practice sessions at the Belleville Memorial Arena for the next two weeks before the regular season gets under way on May 17.

Opener Settles Nothing

BCI and Quinte battled to a 3-3 tie in the opening game of the newly - formed high school lacrosse league last night.

Teams represented in the league will be Moira and North Addington in addition to last night's combatants and each club will play a six-game schedule.

Outstanding goaltending by BCI's Pete Cox, who also picked up two assists and Quinte's Doug Semark highlighted the contest.

Quinte took a 1-0 lead in the first period with the Collegians tying things up in the middle frame. A goal by BCI with two minutes remaining to play squared matters after Quinte appeared to be on their way to a 3-2 victory.

British Soccer Comes of Age In Tantrum Era

LONDON (CP) — The trouble and tantrums of British soccer stars lately have been providing vivid proof of the way the game in this country has finally entered the modern age.

That stage of development, involving prima donna status for certain celebrated performers, was reached decades ago by hockey in Canada and baseball in the United States.

But until some 10 years ago, a maximum wage level was imposed on British soccer, which kept player salaries below a stated level and meant a greater parity of pay levels for players than would be thinkable today.

Now the salary ceiling is a thing of the past. Moreover, soccer, with its big crowd appeal both for on-the-spot spectators and the mass audiences commanded by television, has to a large extent "gone pop." Thus the game currently shares many of the traits common in the "swinging" world of British popular music and entertainment.

The result is a transformation of players like George Best into pop personalities, complete with thick hair, bushy beards, a tendency to sport "dolly bird" girl-friends and fans, and numerous commercial interests off the field.

Best joined Manchester United in 1964 and quickly announced his arrival with a last-minute goal which served to keep the club in a vital cup competition.

At first, the forward flash from Belfast was earning a mere $86 ($82.50) a week.

In two years, however, this increased sevenfold and Best was soon modelling men's clothes and breaking into the boutique business, concentrating on "mod gear" for young swingers.

He was named player of the year in 1968 but his numerous extracurricular interests and the strain of maintaining a star standard of on-field play rapidly made themselves felt. This season, Manchester United has plummeted spectacularly.

For his part, Best encountered repeated trouble with referees as well as missing training sessions and other team appointments. This brought a strong reaction and a two-week suspension from manager Sir Matt Busby, an eruption followed by a much-publicized Best flight to an address friend's home in London

Ultimately, Best and Busby achieved an apparent reconciliation. And a golden glow below a stated level and meant a greater parity of pay levels for players than would be thinkable today.

Best joined Manchester United in 1964 and quickly announced his arrival with a last-minute goal which served to keep the club in a vital cup competition.

At first, the forward flash from Belfast was earning a mere $86 ($82.50) a week.

In two years, however, this increased sevenfold and Best was soon modelling men's clothes and breaking into the boutique business, concentrating on "mod gear" for young swingers.

Cory Has Good Chance For Colling 'Keeper'

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Perhaps the longest distance in the Ken Colling Memorial Run for Quinte - area long distance runners will be that separating Picton's Paul Cory from the rest of the field.

The 18 - year - old Prince Edward Collegiate runner is already established in a class by himself in distances over a mile, and appears to have improved his performance this year.

Cory who will be shooting for his third consecutive win in the annual Ken Colling race Wednesday will have the added incentive of getting permanent possession of the trophy awarded to the winner each year.

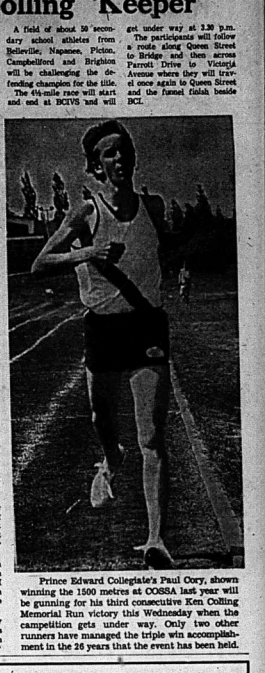
Only two previous runners, Jim Green and Bill Vermilyea have managed the triple win feat in the 26 previous runnings of the event.

"You have to be lucky in the fact that you get interested in running soon enough to give you a chance at three wins," claims Cory. "A lot of top runners have graduated before they had a chance to win it three times."

Luck and a back - breaking training schedule seem to have combined to give the Prince Edward ace a fine chance at permanent trophy possession.

Despite a number of minor illnesses he has maintained a training schedule of almost 90 miles a week for most of the winter, before dropping off to "only" 50 or 60 for the past few weeks.

He picked up a painful case of poison oak while practising cross - country running last week, but doesn't feel that the discomfort will hamper him that much.



"For some reason I seem to run really well in the Ken Colling," explains Cory, "I think it must be running on the pavement. It seems to help my rhythm."

Another mark that Cory will have his sights set on is the record of 31:48.5 which he set last year.

A field of about 50 secondary school athletes from Belleville, Napanee, Picton, Campbellford and Brighton will be challenging the defending champion for the title.

The 4½-mile race will start and end at BCVS and will get under way at 2.30 p.m.

The participants will follow a route along Queen Street to Bridge and then across Parrott Drive to Victoria Avenue where they will travel once again to Queen Street and the funnel finish beside BCI.

Prince Edward Collegiate's Paul Cory, shown winning the 1500 metres at OOSSA last year will be gunning for his third consecutive Ken Colling Memorial Run victory this Wednesday when the competition gets under way. Only two other runners have managed the triple win accomplishment in the 26 years that the event has been held.

Riders Want Bigger Cut

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — The threat of a jockeys' strike grew stronger Monday when entry lists for Wednesday's thirty-race thoroughbred card showed only six horses had riders named.

The jockeys last week announced they would stop riding Wednesday if their demands for pay increases are not met.

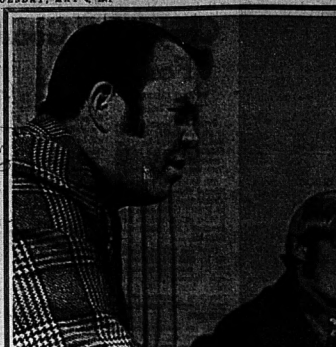
The Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association, comprising owners and trainers who pay jockeys' fees, has said it cannot agree to the riders' demands until it has reached a new agreement with the Jockey Club Ltd. on purses.

The deadline for the trainers and owners to name their riders for Wednesday's races is 3 p.m. today.

Avelino Gomez, once Canada's leading jockey, said he was considering riding again if the jockeys weed through with the strike.

However, Gomez may face problems if he wants a come back. Under Ontario racing rules, a trainer or owner cannot hold a rider's licence.

"I'll get someone to train my horses, maybe Yonnie Starr or my brother Mickey," said Gomez, who rode 3,586 winners before retiring last season.



Eric Hamilton, Ontario Racing Commission steward, said there would be no bending of the rules.

"If Gomez applies for his rider's licence he'll likely get it but he'll have to have a proper bill of sale for his horses."

The jockeys say the HBPA promised them last year that they would be given a new fee schedule by April 30, 1971. The HBPA had expected to have its new contract with the Jockey Club by that date but now has to await further meetings this month.

The jockeys' old fee schedule provides for $75 for a winning ride in a race with a purse of $2,500 or less, $85 for second, $35 for third and $30 for finishing out of the money. In races with a purse of $2,600 or more, the scale is $100, $50, $40 and $35.

The riders are seeking a new schedule under which winning riders would receive 10 per cent of the winner's purse. The fee for second, third and fourth or lower would then be $45, $35, $30 in a race with a purse of between $2,000 and $3,400 and $50, $40, $30 where the purse is between $3,500 and $4,900.

Greg Barton (centre) listens as Toronto Argonaut head coach Leo Cahill speaks during a news conference in Toronto Monday. Barton, who failed to show up to sign a National Football League contract with Philadelphia Eagles last week, flew into Toronto from Hawaii and signed for four years with Argos of the Canadian Football League. Argos Pull Second Coup

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts have pulled their second major coup within the last month over a National Football League club with the signing of quarterback Greg Barton to a four-year contract.

The agent for the 25-year-old quarterback had come to a verbal agreement with Philadelphia Eagles of the NFL but Barton flew here from Hawaii Monday and ended months of speculation about where he'd play this fall.

The Canadian Football League club earlier signed all-American Joe Theismann of Notre Dame, who was reported to have had a verbal agreement with Miami Dolphins.

"My agent, Chuck Barnes, agreed to terms with Philadelphia," Barton said Monday. "I decided to wait until I became a free agent on May 1."

"He can put it all together," Argo coach Leo Cahill said of the six-foot, two-inch Barton, adding he would play quarterback and "will be coaching in the passing area."

Barton played out his option year with Detroit Lions but remained under contract with them until May 1. In the meantime, the Lions traded him to Philadelphia.

Pete Retzlaff, vice-president and general manager of the Eagles, said he wasn't happy with Barton's actions but said he doubts if the Eagles could do anything legally.

"Any action we take will be through our league office," Retzlaff said Monday night.

CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur said Monday he had received complaints from Philadelphia of tampering by the Argos last March, and added:

"If Philadelphia wants to complain, it must do so to its league office and that league office then complains to the Canadian office."

Retzlaff said Barton had acknowledged and confirmed the contract two weeks ago and was to have signed it last Monday.

Barton's professional career consisted of one incomplete pass thrown late in a game against San Francisco 49ers two years ago.

Theismann's Eyes Rank with Best

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (CP — AP) — The ice-blue eyes of Toronto quarterback Joe Theismann ranked with the most efficient in tests conducted recently among professional and amateur athletes.

William J. Beausay of the Bowling Green University education department is testing the efficiency of the eyes of drivers entered in the Indianapolis 500 here later this month.

The drivers are running a poor third to the collegians and the pros, partly, Beausay says, because they are considerably older on the average.

The tests show how fast the eye can shift from one dot to another, then back. A variation uses footballs.

Ted Williams, who had a phenomenal ability to see a pitched ball all the way to his bat, made the highest score of any athlete Beausay tested.

Balk That Wasn't Preserves Met Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago Cubs feel the balk that wasn't gave New York Mets a 2-1 victory Monday night on Tommie Agee's pinch single with two out in the 11th inning.

In the only other major league action, Philadelphia Phillies edged St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

The was the situation when the argument started at Shea Stadium—score 2-2, top of the ninth, bases loaded and Ron Santo, who had driven in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning, at bat.

"Balk!" yells third-base umpire Stan Landes, and Ken Holtzman, the runner at third, trots happily plateward.

"No balk," overrules plate umpire Mel Steiner, explaining that he had signaled for time before McGraw started his move.

Santo then watched a third strike and Johnny Callison tapped to first for the third out.

TOMMIE AGEE

The Mets won it when Jerry Grote, who doubled home their first run in the fourth inning, singled to centre, scoring Agee with his fourth hit, off loser Holtzman.

"I saw Steiner put his hand up," McGraw said. "That's why I stopped my windup."

McGraw picked up the triumph and also singled in his only at-bat, giving him two hits in the game.

In the night's other game, Larry Bowa knocked in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning.

Bowa's two-out single, his fourth hit of the game, came off reliever Don Shaw and chased home Tim McCarver and Larry Hisle.

Freed's toss followed a base-loaded single by Ted Simmons scoring Dal Maxvill and nailed Brock, who was trying to make it from second base. Maxvill's was the Cardinal only run in a 1-1 tie that existed until Bowa's tie-breaking hit in the eighth.

Freed's throw saved Philadelphia starter Barry Lersch, who held on to pick up his second victory of the season.

The official lap record at the Speedway stands at 171.852 m.p.h. It was set by Joe Leonard in a turbine car during qualifications for the 1968 Indianapolis 500. Donohue's mark will not count as a track record because it came during practice.

Eighteen cars have now been certified by track officials and 22 drivers have passed their physical examinations.

Billy Cooper Says:

Golf's Million Dollar Winner

A THIN SLICE OF SAND

While the sand shot is not the easiest in golf anyone can become fairly expert at it with a certain amount of practice. The trouble is, most golfers simply don't practice the shot.

If you would think only of taking a relatively thin slice of sand out from under the ball (illustration) your sand shots will be adequate. Most sand errors occur when the clubhead is dug too deeply into the sand. When this does happen the ball is usually left in the bunker or is topped and skulled across the green.

Work hard on taking that slice of sand from, under the ball. Don't even think of the ball. You'll soon get the idea.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Too Much Washing Brings Dandruff

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I shed so much dandruff that I can't wear a dark suit. Look at my shoulders and upper back and you'd think I've just come out of a snowstorm. Is there any thing to do? I wash my hair practically every night but it doesn't help. — Mr. U.

Comment: When you consider how much is spent on commercials advertising dandruff cures, it's evident that the dandruff problem is a common one. The white flakes which all of us shed are really dead skin cells. In most people they are minimal and don't collect in sufficient quantities to cause a dandruff problem. When they do, then the simple process of thorough scalp-brushing with a stiff brush will prevent daily accumulation of an excess of dandruff.

I believe that you are washing your scalp hair too much. This in itself can cause excessive dryness and shedding. I doubt that hair tonics help much either, as the alcohol contained in these preparations also cause scalp dryness.

If your problem is as stubborn as you say, then it might be advisable to consult with a dermatologist. For another type of dandruff is due to excessive shedding of greasy scales. These are larger than those observed in simple dandruff.

The scalp may be red and irritated. Itching may be profound. This may be a form of seborrhea. Proper medication often alleviates this problem.

I think that too many, like yourself, Mr. U., self - treat themselves for months and get nowhere in overcoming dandruff. If simple brushing (and hair - washing about once a week) doesn't help, then it's time for specialized treatment by a dermatologist.

In a recent column I mentioned that following amputations some patients continue to complain of pain in the absent extremity. For example, if a leg has been amputated, the patient may say he still has pain in the foot or leg which he no longer has.

In some patients pressure on the nerve in the remaining stump is the cause; in others there's an admixture of psychological distress. Whatever the reason, folklore has come up with some macabre suggestions. Here are two notes received regarding "cures" for these phantom aches:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I noticed an item in your column regarding feelings about an amputated foot. In our town in Indiana there was a lady who had to have her leg amputated. It was buried in a family plot in the cemetery. She was so much pain she could not rest.

Someone told the family to have the leg dug up and turned over and reburied. This was done, and she became quite comfortable. The pain disappeared.

It happens I know the story is true. The family plot where this leg is buried adjoins our own family lot. Now, this may not help this person's case, but it might be worth a try. — Mrs. W.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Uncle Jim had his leg shot off by a moonshiner. After his wound was healed, he felt that his toes on this leg began drawing and hurting. He made us dig up the leg and straighten it out. The pain stopped. This may be imagination and superstition, but I've talked with a great American doctor who says there is something to it. Anyhow, it was a great experience to know the man who said "Straighten out may laig." — Mr. A.

Comment: Who is to deny "the great American doctor" who says there is something to it"? Ask me and I'll say, I don't know.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Here Is Difficult Quiz

Today's word-quiz is prompted by the California earthquake this winter, which made the public more aware of the "Richter scale", a device for measuring the force of earthquakes.

Here are similar devices, laws, equations, principles and theorems, in various fields, that are identified with the names of their inventors. If you know half the answers, you can be proud of yourself.

1. What is Grimm's law?
2. What is the Plimsoll mark?
3. What is the Doppler effect?
4. What is the Babinski reflex?
5. What is Planck's constant?
6. What is the Vernier scale?
7. What is Occum's razor?
8. What is the Schartz - Metterchuen method?
9. What is the Clerk-Maxwell equation?
10. What is the Lamarckian theory?
11. What is Fourier's theorem?
12. What is the Mackinder hypothesis?
13. What is the Pearson correlation?
14. What is Godel's proof?
15. What is Avogadro's number?
16. What is the Watson-Crick model?

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For May 5

Your birthday today: This year holds opportunity for material gain, according to your levels of skills and willingness to apply them. Ideas and projects you've neglected or given up come alive again and are effective by year's end as a newly created or reorganized work arrangement. Today's natives are gifted in advertising, selling while travelling, and are quite astute at handling money.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You need more than confidence to make it today. Check facts, bring up your reserves, let intuition lead you into a fresh experimental course.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): If you have taken the trouble to learn the details and develop perspective, this is an excellent time to rearrange your resources for better results.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your inclination is to adopt too narrow a view. Where you have missed certain developments, you must adjust plans drastically and-in a short time.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): If you really feel that you can follow through what you start today, use all available means. Most projects that present themselves are beyond your personal capacity, should wait until a team big enough to deal with them is assembled.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your pride or perhaps vanity could lead you into over-expansion. Take a rational look at what is offered.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Firmly push to get as much work done as your energy permits without undue fatigue.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): It's anextraordinarily good day for spreading your skills and enjoying your work. Take first things first, and see how far you can get.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Strive to brighten your surroundings, cheer up your friends and associates. If you look, plenty of useful ideas are around for ready application.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Excuses are out of season — be candid and willing to accept an objective account. Idealistic images come down a few notches, but at least you know what you have to work with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Tact is essential as you meet people with ideas from a distance. There is little likelihood that their efforts will greatly influence your chances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Avoid needless conflict this morning: good news, a better deal are on the way. Your work and ideals come in for favorable review.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Unusual circumstances prevail for a brief while; take full advantage of any chance to profit cuts.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painfully, relieve itching and discomfort in minutes and check bleeding. Even if the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved ... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief came quickly in cases of long standing, and most unbelievable of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

All this accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered as ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

35 Homes Vanish In Saguenay Slide

Margaret Maybank

Hole 100 Feet Deep Appears in Village

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP) — Rescue workers pushed through piles of mud they described as "cold lava" today in a desperate search for trapped survivors of a massive earth cave-in at nearby St. Jean Vianney Tuesday night.

Civil defence officials said at least 20 persons were believed to have died in the earth slide that swept 35 homes, several cars and a bus into a pit one-quarter mile long, 700 feet wide and more than 100 feet deep.

About 70 persons, many today. Ground rescue attempts screaming and moaning, were were hampered by rain, mud rescued overnight from the cra- and the fear of further slides. ter of mud and slime.

Heavy rain fell today in the area as the broken remains of a score of homes tumbled through a gorge into the Riviere des Vases, a small tributary of the Saguenay River.

Neighbors and relatives of missing persons waited through the night at the edge of the gorge. Several homes in the area were evacuated and police closed off roads to curious motorists who could see debris of homes floating at dawn in the Saguenay.

Roger Landry searched the area in vain for his wife and five children, then went to stay with relatives in Kenogami.

"It was dreadful, indescribable," he told reporters. He was in the basement of his home when the slide started shortly after 11 p.m.

He ran up to the ground floor. "I called my family until I thought my lungs would burst, but there was no answer."

Jean Boudreau was driving along when suddenly the road gave away in front of him. He managed to crawl up the slippery side of the crater but told police he believed his sister-in-law was still in the pit.

A Canadian Forces helicopter pilot, sent in to undertake aerial rescue operations, described the scene as "sheer desolation."

Capt. Maurice Roy said a whole chunk of earth and homes simply dropped out of sight into a hole 100 to 125 feet deep. "There are sheer walls dropping down into mud."

He dropped a lesting harness to a woman who said she spent the whole night stranded on the roof of her car in the hole.

"She was in a state of shock but she managed to slip the collar over her head and we raised her up. She told us that her husband had left the car just before the road—about a half-mile long —dropped out of sight."

St. Jean Vianney, a village of more than 2,000 with about 150 homes, is on the Riviere des Vases about two miles from where it meets the Saguenay. It is 115 miles north of Quebec City.

Rain all weekend and a heavy spring runoff have raised the levels of rivers in the region.

Small earth tremors were felt today's effort to block traffic into and around the city which was effectively thwarted by a massive counter-force of police and federal troops.

A total of around 10,000 people were arrested during the first two days of clashes between demonstrators and police.

Among them were Rennie Davis and John Froines, who were accused by the FBI of masterminding the demonstrations and charged with conspiring to violate the civil rights of Washington residents and interfering with federal employees.

Davis and Froines, both 32, were released on bail Tuesday night. Davis for $25,000 and Froines for $10,000, and both immediately said the protest movement would continue with a march on Congress today.

Davis told a news conference that "putting us behind bars for 10 years would not silence the movement."

Said Froines: "We have moved the struggle (for a total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina) to a completely new level."

Both will appear in court for preliminary hearings May 12.

Unlike Monday, when police frequently dispensed with the usual practice of filling out arrest forms, each prisoner was questioned and photographed with the arresting officer Tuesday.

The importance of the procedure was emphasized late Tuesday night, when a municipal judge ruled the police must release all demonstrators not linked directly to a specific charge. It was thought that there were still several hundred who had been jailed Monday without the arrest paperwork yet completed. Government attorneys won a stay of the court's decision pending appeal.

Banks Stop Money Trades

FRANKFURT (AP) — Government banks across Western Europe suspended trading in United States dollars today in an effort to check speculators swapping American currency for West German marks in expectation of an upward revaluation of the mark.

West Germany's central bank led off the movement. Government banks of Switzerland, The Netherlands, Austria and Belgium followed. Some, including the West German bank, halted all trading in foreign currencies. Others stopped dealing in marks.

Karl Klaser, president of West Germany's central bank, said it now is up to the German government to decide how to check the massive influx of U.S. dollars, which is creating a monetary crisis in Europe.

A meeting of Chancellor Willy Brandt's cabinet was set for Friday to discuss the most serious international monetary crisis since the 1969 revaluation of the mark.

There was no official word on what the measures might be, One course open to the govern-

Canadian Dollar Barely Affected

OTTAWA (CP) — Frantic trading in the West German mark and United States dollar by European speculators has produced only minimal repercussions on the Canadian dollar, a Bank of Canada spokesman said today.

In Europe, he said, "everything seems to be up in the air right now.

"As far as the Canadian dollar is concerned, the effect has been very minimal."

The Canadian dollar moved up in value slightly, due to trading in it in Europe, but "the market has been very calm here this morning."

Prince Philip Wrinkles Nose At Pulp Mill

VICTORIA (CP) — If there was a message from Tuesday's royal tour comings and goings in British Columbia, it was directed towards protection of the environment.

Queen Elizabeth gave B.C. a centennial year pat on the back for all the pioneering that had been done in the last century or so. But she added:

"You must also look ahead and determine to continue the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and human existence in these splendid natural surroundings."

Prince Philip expressed concern about the rotten smell of pulp mill and Princess Anne, off on a jaunt of her owned, opened a new national park.

Today, the three were to tour southeastern B.C.

Disposal of Dead Puppies Resulted in Boy Drowning

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

A jury under Coroner Dr. William Hipwell last night attached no blame to any person or persons for the death of 11-year-old Brian Talis Carter, who drowned in the swollen waters of the Moira River April 6.

The jury recommended that children attending the Cannifton Corbyville school "be warned of the dangers of playing near the river. No school staff member should at any time give any pupil permission to go to this area during school hours."

An official commendation was made to retired Cannifton grist mill operator Roy Pound "for his actions which resulted in Lorne Eugene Johnston's life being saved."

Lorne Johnston, 11, of Corbyville, testified two dead puppies were found at the north end of the school. The dogs were placed in an empty garbage bag and he and Brian Carter went to see principal Phillip Ainsworth.

Both the Johnston boy and Billy Spragg, 13, who found the dogs, testified their principal, "told us to go bury them or throw them in the river."

Crown attorney John Pringle asked Mr. Ainsworth what he had told the boys to do with the pups.

"I told them to bury them or throw them away," he testified, adding, "I did not" give them permission to leave the school grounds and "they didn't" say where they were taking the pups.

Mr. Pound testified he was attracted to the river by the feeble calls from the two boys as they were being carried downstream.

"I heard a voice or voices, went around and saw one boy in the water, about 10 feet out, another about 40 feet out."

Of the Johnston boy, Mr. Pound testified: "He seemed a bit dazed: he was out too far to reach. I got a cedar branch, about six feet long and he grabbed hold of it."

Brian Carter, he said, "was surrounded by chunks of ice."

Doctor Fears VD Vaccine

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Development of a vaccine protection against venereal disease could lead to the destruction of modern civilization, a veteran VD fighter warned here Tuesday.

Dr. Gordon Bates of Toronto said production of a vaccine for such a purpose would affect the way people think and act and remove the conscience factor in mankind.

The 81-year-old general director of the Health League of Canada said in an interview, such a step could lead to a "generation of alley cats."

'Comparatively Docile' Rally Lands 2,000 More in Jail

WASHINGTON (CP) — Anti-war militants, buoyed by the freeing on bail of two of their leaders, were hoping to gather enough supporters to march on Congress today—third day of their "stop the government" movement.

But the march appeared to have gone out of the demonstrations after a comparatively docile protest rally Tuesday outside the justice department landed more than 2,200 more young people in jail.

They joined about 3,000 others still detained following Mon-

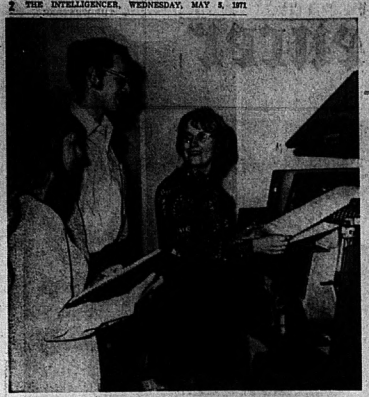
Robarts Says Ontario Requires 'Fiscal Space'

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario must have more "fiscal room to do our own thing," former premier John Robarts said Tuesday.

Ontario wanted recognition by Ottawa that if it was to provide Canada's main industrial growth it would have to have more "fiscal space" to develop without interference, he said at the National Press Club.

He described as highly unsatisfactory a statement by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp when he was federal finance minister that Ontario should "go out and raise your own taxes."

Ontario maintains that the province's needs for revenue are growing faster than the federal government's needs.



On another subject, Mr. Robarts said Ottawa and the provinces are "not doing badly" in constitutional review.

Constitutional problems could not be tackled any more quickly than they had been.

Plan Holdup Criticized

TRENTON (Staff) — Members of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board are irritated that council has delayed approval of the town's new official plan to give the Quinte Homebuilders Association a chance to examine it.

Meeting here last night, the board resolved to convey their annoyance to council through Paul Tripp, councillor and planning board member.

"I think it was a definite sign of weakness for council to do this . . . this board has spent so much time to rush it through, it is not right to hold up the plan now," said TSPB member Bob Carleton.

The board, urged by council, had several special meetings to complete Trenton's new official plan which was scheduled to be approved by council Monday.

However, a letter from the Quinte homebuilders was read during the council session, asking that the builders group be given the opportunity to examine the plan before it is approved.

Council heeded this request and instructed the town's planning officer, Arie Hoornweg, to determine the opinions of the four local homebuilders.

Dr. W. A. L. McDonald contended council had bowed to the homebuilders' wishes for political reasons and TSPB chairman, Dr. Robert Patrick agreed.

"These people had as much chance as anyone else to be heard and Mr. Klemencic (builder Stan Klemencic) had a copy of the plan," Dr. Patrick maintained.

The planning board held a public meeting in April to explain the new plan and hear objections to it.

"If the builders are so vitally concerned, they should make themselves aware of what is going on," Dr. Patrick concluded.

In the annual competition, the local team beat out 21 high schools in the area from Brighton west to Oshawa and north to Peterborough.

The ENSS winning score was made by Lloyd Buchanan. Carol Hewitt and Brett Cairns, all grade 11 students.

Lloyd Buchanan's performance in the contest placed him first in the district, 10 points above his nearest rival. He also placed 25th in the province and 90th in all Canada. A total of 19,000 students wrote the examination from coast to coast.

The three high scorers from Brighton were placed on the district honor roll for their achievements along with four other ENSS students: Tom Olsen, Lea Larson, Glen Fitchett and David Trueman, each of whom made favorable showings.

East Northumberland Secondary School has placed second and third in the previous attempts. In 1970, the school's team was only six points behind the district 18 winner.

Speed Limits Get Approval

Sidney Township Council has announced that approval for speed limits on Montrose Road, Aikens Road and the Johnstown Road has been received from the Department of Transport.

A limit of 40 mph will be established for Montrose Road and speeds of 35 mph for the other two.

These speeds will come into effect when the signs are erected in mid-May.

Also at council Monday, a report listing 18 building and demolition permits for April was tabled with a capital value of $197,100, with permit revenue for the township of $280.

To date, there have been 53 permits issued in 1971, with a capital value of $614,400.

Can Spring Be Far Behind?

The temperature hasn't been spring-like but the wild flowers that herald the growing season are blooming in Quinte woodlots. Jason Bellanger, 2½, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bellanger of Janyin Cres. admires clumps of pink, mauve and white hepatica. On tario's floral emblem, trilllium grandaflora, is in bud and will soon carpet the forest floor with white blossoms.

Wrecking Yard Opposed

An application to operate a wrecking yard in Sidney Township met with heavy opposition at Monday's council meeting from residents of the area.

Everett Long told council 39 residents had signed a petition condemning W. E. McDowell's proposal to open a wrecking yard on rented property.

"All those people are within 1,500 feet of that barn . . . we want to make sure he's not going in there." Mr. Long told council.

"We're all against it."

Deputy-Reeve Gordon Wilman stated, "I don't think he can."

Reeve Jack Bush told the delegates, "we received this letter and we want to see the township for ourselves. The bylaw stipulates he must be 1,000 feet from the road. Measuring that, as Mr. Wilman said right now, I can't see how he can get it but we'll see it . . . we don't want to discriminate against anyone."

However, the reeve told the township residents, "we want to put on a real war to clean up the ones we do have."

Delegates also drew council's attention to the mess scattered along their roads by trucks transporting wrecked cars to a dump site in Murray Township.

"It's right behind the hill where the (Riverview) Speedway is."

Mr. McCurdy said Murray Township Councillor W. R. Ellis indicated that yard may be closed out.

The possible solution to the littering problem, another delegate said, would "be a charge for littering . . . a few dollars."

Reeve Bush agreed with councillor McCurdy that Mr. McDowell had good intentions when he approached nearby residents for their opinion, but "it is the feeling of council that we don't want any more wrecking yards".

Teachers noted the boys absent from their classes.

Mrs. Judith Warren, grade six teacher, said she had not given permission for the boys to leave.

Mrs. Shila Ellis, grade grade five teacher, testified Billy Sprague told her "Brian and Eugene had been out burying dogs," the Spragg boys had returned to classes while his chums remained absent. She told the coroner's jury that three lunchtime shifts of 15 minutes each were undertaken by the teachers.

She said the Sprague boy remained nervous when he returned and "I got this feeling that something was going on."

Constable J. D. Chase of the Belleville OPP testified Mr. Ainsworth told him Johnston and Carter "had gone to bury pups."

"We had an enrollment check" at the school, he said.

The principal "said he thought they were back at the school."

The boys' father, Taite Carter, of Corbyville, testified at the inquest that his son had been preparing to take his junior swimming tests with the Kiwanis Club the following week and could swim.

Mr. Pringle asked if he was satisfied with the efforts of the police and police frogmen to recover the body of his son.

"I appreciate they did everything they could" he replied.

The coroner's jury consisted of foreman Norman Hazlewood, RR 2, Trenton, and Clayton Harding, RR 2, Trenton, Jack Jeffrey, RR 3, Belleville, Earl Meyers, RR 2, Trenton and Clifford Hart, RR 3, Belleville.

Crown attorney John Pringle said the inquest was called following receipt of a directive from the office of the attorney general, even though no body as yet has been found.

PECI Student Mechanics Win First Place Award

PICTON (Staff) — Two Prince Edward Collegiate Institute students Monday became trophy-winning trouble-shooters for their school in a province - wide auto repair competition sponsored in Toronto by Chrysler Canada Ltd.

Members of the PECI two-man auto - mechanics team are Henry Terpstra, 18, and Tom Veldstra, 17. Both trouble - shooters are students in a grade 12 auto specials course instructed by their coach, teacher Robert T. Fagan.

Mr. Fagan said yesterday that a total of 29 Ontario secondary schools entered teams in the contest held at Woodbine Raceway. Two separate competitions were organized, the first for students in Metro Toronto and the second for all pupils in the rest of the province. All Ontario high schools having grade 13 auto special students were eligible to enter. Contestants are competing for more than $15,000, in prizes, scholarships, trophies and tools.

Teams were judged on their answers in a written examination and for performance in a 1½ hour trouble-shooting contest. Mr. Fagan explained that "bugs" deliberately were placed in cars shown to young auto - mechanics for repairs. He explained the problems could lie in an open circuit ballast resistor, an open circuit coil wire, faulty spark plugs, a faulty rotor or malfunction in the carburetor.

When judges' score sheets were examined, results showed PECI's two - man team is first place and eligible for competition in the national finals to be held at the Canadian National Exhibition Grounds on June 7 and 8. The over-all winner in the national finals will receive a $2,500 scholarship.

Mr. Fagan said yesterday that the PECI team appreciates local support from their sponsoring dealer, Grindrod Motors Ltd., Picton, which provided them with a practice car five days before the contest. Both of the school's trouble shooters will graduate from PECI as apprentice mechanics next month.

Lockup for Picton Stirs Council Debate

By MARGARET HAVLOCK
Staff Writer

PICTON — Picton councillors, concerned with the impending necessity for lock - up facilities, have approved plans for an addition to the town fire hall. The addition, which will be constructed at an estimated cost of $51,550, includes a new fire truck bay, town offices, washroom facilities and three cells.

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis was instructed to take the preliminary steps necessary in financing the addition. The proposal is subject to approval by the Ontario Municipal Board.

Picton Reeve Albert Piroth urged council to consider the cost of using lock-up facilities reportedly owned by the Loch Sloy Holding Co. at the former Camp Picton. He remarked that seven cells are available at this site and possibly could be used by the town. Mr. Piroth expressed his awareness of an urgent need for lock-up facilities with the closing of the county jail. He added that the Napanee Regional Jail probably will receive prisoners soon after May 15 but because of problems in estimating lock - up needs, Picton may not use these facilities for some time. "Have we exhausted all avenues of lock-up facilities in the immediate area?" said reeve Piroth.

Councillor William Lane said the public works committee has been investigating lock-up facilities and added, "If we can find out what's happening in Napanee we can see how urgent this construction is." He noted that the closing date of the Prince Edward county jail is not known. In a recorded vote, councillor Lane did not support an addition to the fire hall. His motion to refer the discussion of lock-up facilities and the proposed additions to the fire hall to the public works and planning and development committees was defeated in an earlier vote.

Picton deputy-reeve James Bird warned, "It takes a very long time to go through red tape." He remarked that cells at the county jail will be torn out and would not be available to the town in an emergency situation.

A letter from L. Gartner, Chief Superintendent for the assistant commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police, cautioned councillors that construction of cells for the town police force should be given "top priority." The letter stated that the Picton detachment of the OPP has only two cells and the office remains unmanned from 12 a.m. to 8 a.m. each day. Reliable civilian guards must be hired during this period if there are prisoners in custody.

Cells at the Picton detachment would be available for Picton's use only if there is no prior demand for these facilities. Guards approved by the OPP would be hired to staff the lock-up. If the Picton cells should be occupied, the town could transport prisoners to the Belleville detachment's lock-up. It would be possible, however, for these cells to be filled, too, since this detachment houses prisoners from outlying areas. This information prompted deputy - reeve Bird to observe, "The OPP has indicated we are not welcome guests for any length of time."

He felt that a delay to study alternatives and institute further investigations could place the town in a difficult situation if lock-up facilities should be needed immediately. He noted; "It looks as if everyone wants to talk and get nothing done. Should we authorize the clerk to get approvals and investigate these other possibilities?" he asked.

Deputy - reeve Bird said it was "unfair to the taxpayer to refer the matter to additional committee discussions. He added that it was also unfair to leave the town clerk without authority to obtain permission for the proposed additions, initiate approvals and learn interest rates. He described it as "council's duty to provide some employment through public works."

In council's recorded vote, five councillors favored construction of the fire hall addition. The remaining three councillors Piroth, Walraven and Lane disagreed with the proposal.

Objection Overruled

PICTON (Staff) — "Not very many tourists take pictures of the fireball," observed councillor Harry Abram replying to a Picton resident's objectors to an addition to this building which could destroy its original lines.

A letter to council from Mrs. Robert Walmsley stated the addition proposed to provide town offices and a lock-up would "destroy the look of what is surely one of our finer historical buildings."

Mrs. Walmsley called it "false economy" to "sacrifice the firehall" to save the town a small amount of money. She said the firehall is one of Picton's better buildings and added it would be "short-sighted to tamper with it."

Picton reeve Albert Piroth told council Mrs. Walmsley's letter deserved discussion and said it would seem "odd to gloss it over."

Councillor Abram replied "old buildings, old buildings, that's all we hear. That's all we'll have unless we do something." It was agreed by council to file the letter. The proposed addition to the firehall was later approved by councillors.

Meeting Ponders Truck Diversions

Banning of heavy trucks which now use downtown Front Street as a through artery could be a simple matter.

All that would have to be done is to figure out what other streets the trucks would use.

This was the tongue - in - cheek comment of Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie at Monday's traffic committee meeting during the discussion on the Front Street truck problem which had been referred from city council.

He said that to avoid downtown Front Street, trucks coming down North Front Street and planning to turn west on Number 2, or go south to Picton would have to negotiate sharp right turns north of the Upper Bridge. Westbound trucks proceeding down Cannifton Road and Station Street would have to turn down Church Street to avoid the downtown section and this would route them up over a steep grade and past three schools.

But committee members agreed that some temporary measure to help alleviate north - south traffic tie-ups during rush hour periods had to be devised.

Committee chairman Alderman Arthur Keegan cited a recent late Friday afternoon backup of traffic extending from the downtown section north to College Street.

Mayor J. Russell Scott, citing another instance of Friday evening traffic congestion, said it took him 45 minutes to drive from his home on the East Hill to Quinte Secondary School.

The north-south arterial traffic study now being done by consultants Totten, Sims and Hubicki is expected to come up with proposals for the alleviation of traffic problems for motorists coming into the city from the north.

But the report will not be received until the summer and it could take up to two years before any recommended construction gets underway.

Chief Crosbie agreed that it might be worthwhile to take a look at Moira and Coleman streets for development as a bypass route for westbound traffic on North Front Street but said he would be "concerned" over Church Street being used as a truck route.

The committee authorized Chief Crosbie and the city engineer to investigate the Moira-Coleman Street route.

World of Contrasts

Mankind has always been a complex assortment of good and evil, as manifested by both adults and the young, but perhaps the greatest sin, evil, or whatever, which society is perpetuating against itself today, is its emphasis on artificial anomalies like the generation gap and what is termed "alienation."

There is this fragmentation of society and through it all is spiced all the tiresome old guff about the social ills of the day: alcoholism ,drugs and all the rest of it; and it is interesting, incidentally, to hear from Police Chief Crosbie that alcohol remains the greater problem in Belleville.

How do we raise a superior generation of people? How do boys and girls grow into superior men and women — and by "superior" we mean people who respect themselves and others, people who without being unrealistically, perfect, nevertheless have a monopoly of virtue, who exhibit responsibility, integrity, and who have a due sense of the fitness of things?

That such things take root in the home is obvious, just as — by contrast — neglect and improper training leading to less desirable traits, also begin in the home. Mankind forever will be a mixture of all these things, for the superior and the inferior go together. For example, it looks as if society is going to have to live with the drug problem. We have even reached the point where students are getting fed up with being talked at about the evils of drug use. That is the word from Peterborough social worker William Robb, who told a Brighton audience recently that in a classroom environment non-users do not want to listen to drug dialogue and drug users do not want to talk about the subject.

Ann Landers, counselling a parent who asked recently whether a 16-year-old son should be permitted to smoke outside the home, if he wished, on the theory he might stick with this rather than going on to say marijuana, said: "All kids do what they want when they are 'on their own.' The trick is to raise them in such a way that they will want to do the right thing whether they are supervised or not." But how do you raise someone who would deter a kid from going on to pot she termed "unrealistic." Proper upbringing ,she repeated, was the answer.

Perhaps it is a valuable thing that society does afford extremes, superior or inferior, good or evil, or combinations of each, for they serve to indicate that standards exist. As for helping the current generation toward the best qualities in life, there was that suggestion of Anthony Cekota of Batawa in a letter to Globe and Mail columnist Richard Needham. Mr. Cekota envisaged establishment of a National Civil Social Service whereby young people 18 and over could go to camps and become involved in reforestation projects, service to the elderly and the like, along with "personal education in sports, plays and manners" of the kind obtained in private schools.

Mr. Needham was not optimistic on this score. He felt such camps would go the same way as Rochdale College . . . would be troubled "with drugs, booze, vandalism, dirt, disease, mutiny and our old friend sex." And he added: "This is not to say that all the kids in this generation are slobs; or even that most of them are slobs. But enough of them are slobs to wreck any place where they congregate, be it a school, a drop-in centre, a work camp. . ."

Well, there is one extreme. The majority of kids — and adults — turn out all right, in spite of evidence of what we might term lack of her behaviour on the part of some. It should, we feel, be the responsibility firstly of parents, then the schools, by stronger discipline if necessary, to produce a superior person. If there is one thing the world needs, it needs this kind of person, so that there may come a day when excess of one kind or another is no longer a problem, and the world is a vastly more superior place.

Queen in B.C.

The Queen has begun her western tour, once again getting the better of those gremlins, physical or political, which invariably come on the scene when she is about to leave for foreign parts. As Benjamin Franklin put it in an earlier time, "The Royal Crown cures not the headache." Rather, the Queen's cold must have just taken its course, its demise helped along by the usual rest and medication which suffices for the rest of us mere mortals.

U.S. Negroes Better Off Than Some Canadians

Provincial Tax-Sharing, U.S. Investment and All That

Vancouver Sun

The average Prince Edward Islander is only slightly better off.

Such statements of fact may help to put into better perspective the federal government's attempts to remedy "regional disparities" in Canada. They may also give some hope to some of the glib nationalists who would bar foreign investment in this country as "unnecessary economic cost."

Similar comparisons will fit a scale of priorities for Quebec's grievances about alleged exploitation by the other provinces.

(Approximate statistics for the United States were hurriedly prepared at The Sun's request by Herman P. Miller, chief, population division, of the U.S. Department of Commerce's bureau of the census. Figures for Canada were supplied by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Both sets are for 1969, the most recent year available.)

Per capita money income for Negro and other colored races in the U.S. stood at $1,815; for whites, $3,231. The figure for the colored races was exactly what it had been for whites ten years before. During that decade, the colored people's incomes rose from 48 per cent of the white scale to 56 per cent.

Turning to Canada, the DBS tabulation shows personal income in Newfoundland at $1,615 per person and in Prince Edward Island at $1,827. Ontario led at $3,271, followed by British Columbia at $3,126. For Canada as a whole the figure was $3,015.

Newfoundland, $1,615; Prince Edward Island, $1,827; New Brunswick, $2,085; Nova Scotia, $2,308; Saskatchewan, $2,518; Yukon and Northwest Territories, $2,586; Quebec, $2,629; Manitoba, $2,947; Alberta, $3,018; British Columbia, $3,126; Ontario, $3,271.

It will be seen that Quebec, about whose miseries most is heard, stands about midway among the 11 political divisions of Canada, with four better off and six worse.

The six fall-enders tend to get less public attention than Quebec because they the combined population of about three million is only half of Quebec's six million. Separatist agitation in Quebec, based on language and cultural problems as well as relative poverty, also attracts the headlines.

Regional differences in wealth explain why the federal government makes equalization payments to all provinces except the richest ones, while also using federal funds collected from all Canadians to offer various incentives for investment and retraining in the more retarded areas.

Such diversion of money for the aims of national unity requires political skill. How much is enough? Premier W. A. C. Bennett's favorite battle-cry is that Ottawa regards British Columbia "as a goblet to be drained". In Halifax, John Buchanan, who recently resigned as Ontario's premier, protested that Ottawa is "wasting Canada's golden goose" by taking out of his province this year about $2 billion more than it puts back.

Both politicians argue that Canada's ability to redistribute money is the "fiscal jiss-factumale provinces" depends ultimately on the ability of their provinces to generate federal revenue. They reason that Ottawa should give them more help to accomplish that purpose. Otherwise, less will be available to share with the poorer provinces.

Much of the argument boils down to a question of self-interest. But there should be little argument that the interest of all taxpayers would not be served by a policy of restricting the inflow of foreign capital.

Private investment from outside Canada will surely help to generate new wealth for all Canadians more efficiently and faster than will be possible by relying on politically-administered tax revenues shifted from one pocket to another.

Ottawa Journal

Ontario's government has enough good reasons to quarrel with Finance Minister Benson's policies without resorting to the exaggerations which slipped into Provincial Treasurer McKeough's budget speech.

McKeough could say with full justification that the federal Government is "pursuing policies which are seriously reducing our economic strength". He can argue with validity that the federal Government has firmly bent on a course of greater centralization and concentration of power in its own hands. He can also argue, with validity, that it is trying to prevent provincial ownership,from making a mockery of the federal concept; if the provinces "opt out" what is left in?)

But it is rhetorical over-kill, even within the fairly honorable tradition of warring with Ottawa, to make such statements as these:

"Ontario has been singled out for a reduced role in the building of our country."

"Federal economic and fiscal policies have been aimed deliberately at the curtailment of economic growth in this province."

"I can only conclude that the intention seems to be one of reducing regional disparities in Canada by diminishing the economic strength and standard of living of Ontario."

The statements refute themselves. If Ottawa is using Ontario as Canada's milking cow which to some extent it is, then it is patently not in the federal Government's interest to diminish the economic strength of the province. Benson's stubborn policies may be stultifying private economic growth, but that applies to the whole country and is due to his wobbling uncertainties and his budgets. Ontario certainly has not been "singled out" for diminishment.

Premier William Davis pleaded on the same theme a few days before the budget speech, saying that "the people of Ontario reject any policy whereby the federal government singles out Ontario for a reduced role in Confederation or in economic development of this jurisdiction."

Of course they do. But they also would reject an Ontario-first stance. They reject a narrow provincialism which would set province against province, and against Canada and against the Government — any government — in Ottawa.

Davis and McKeough should fight as hard as they can for their policies. But in reality, the form proposals are preferable in many ways to the Liberal Government's. But it would be a bad moment for Canada if the broad national statesmanship shown by John Robarts was now replaced by a strident anti-federalism. That would not even be good politics in Ontario.

"You call $789,523 a little white lie?"

Prison Psychiatric Services Lacking

Quebec Le Soleil: The dramatic mutiny which took place recently at Kingston Penitentiary has justified . . . the worries the former solicitor-general of Canada, George McIlraith, expressed several times in the last two years on the subject of the extremely abnormal situation prevailing in Canadian penitentiaries, particularly St. Vincent de Paul, where last year there was a record-number of suicides.

Moreover, some days before the incident at Kingston began, the new solicitor-general, Jean-Pierre Goyer, announced the formation of the committee charged with studying the general conditions of treatment received by residents of Canadian penitentiaries. Among the number of complaints raised by the Ontario mutineers were those which could prove the most important of all, that is the poor attention that seems to be given psychiatric treatment.

For some years, studies conducted across the country have shown that most psychiatric services is federal correctional programs are reduced to a strict minimum and, therefore, leave much to be desired.

In fact, there may be only 10 full-time psychiatrists to care for almost 8,000 individuals in federal jails while, according to the superintendent of penitentiaries himself, at least 40 are needed.

And this point is all the more important in considering that if there is one place where the individual is really susceptible to psychiatric problems it's in prison. . . .

There are federal and provincial laws authorizing the transfer of a prisoner to a psychiatric establishment. Article 567 of the Criminal Code says a prisoner suffering mental problems can be placed in such an establishment. . .

Medical centres in penitentiaries would be able to fill certain needs while assuring mental health services especially needed by prisoners.

Pesticides' Effect On Animal Life And Tree Growth

Letter to the Hamilton Spectator

Our organization would like to congratulate The Spectator on the excellent reporting of the benefits of DDT for the treatment of malaria and "blood worms" and the prevention ad containment of these dread diseases.

We would like to raise a question regarding your more recent editorial comment on "pesticides which kill bees", implying that tampering with nature caused this disaster. We have slightly different information on this point which might be of interest to your readers.

We would like to suggest that episodes of bee-killing and tree-killing which have become so much more numerous in recent years are really man-made disasters, caused by the substitution of more toxic and less effective pesticides where DDT used to be allowed for use.

We certainly had no such drastic results when DDT was used to protect forests and crops, and most episodes involving wild-life to some small degree were either caused by pesticides other than DDT or occurred in the very first year of use of this chemical.

There is actually very little evidence connecting DDT with the decline of the Bald Eagle. It is an opinion that has been repeated so often that many people regard it as the truth. Most responsible ecologists put loss of wilderness habitat and violent death by gunshot ahead of DDT as a killer of Bald Eagles.

Wages Issue For Police In Ottawa

Ottawa Journal

Ottawa's 564 policemen will show more good sense than did their association leaders if they accept the 7.2 per cent pay raise offered by the Police Commission. The executive's rejection of that offer showed both a self-interest and an inability to read the public mood. If the policemen think they will get public support in a demand for anything beyond the 7.2 per cent offer, they are in for a surprise.

The salary of a first-class city police constable has gone up an average 10 per cent in the past six years: 1969 and 1970 brought 18 and 12 per cent increases, respectively. The latest offer would bring the pay of a first-class constable to $10,300 — a good salary by any standards, including those set by other police departments in the country.

The Journal believes the city's police pay scales should be adequate to attract the kind of men needed to fill changing roles of law enforcement officers; for that reason we supported the 10 per cent increase given the force in 1969. But salaries alone will not do that job.

It is past time the policemen were told by both the commission and the public that they gain neither our support nor respect with the kind of selfish attitude evident these past two years.

Taxes Support Bureaucracy

The Trentonian

Comforts for the low wage earners are really not very many in the Ontario budget. We have reached a point in government spending where the most we can expect is no increase in taxes. Tax cuts seem to be foreign to the thinking of those who are now spending so much of our hard-earned money.

But there is nothing this country needs more than a real tax relief for the wage and salary earner below $18,000. Taxes now take one fifth to one-quarter of our incomes, and that is frankly too much. The worst of it is that the money is not helping the people. Bureaucracies are being built, and millions of dollars are going into palatial government buildings, and useless, costly things like information services.

Mark in Great Demand

ment would be to let the German mark in the international money markets find its own level. Bankers estimate this would raise its value in relation to the U.S. dollar by four to five per cent.

Another possible course was to fix the mark's parity at a rate higher than the present 27 U.S. cents.

Either move would make the mark unattractive to speculators when trading resumes and would thus slow the influx of U.S. dollars.

In the United States, some financial sources said the European crisis is not expected to have a great impact on the dollar domestically or the economy at this time.

One American banker said the speculative spree is a West German problem for the time being and that it is up to that country to stop the heavy flow of dollars into West Germany.

The Banque France continued to lend in U.S. dollars, but the Paris money market and banks stopped trading in the mark.

Speculators switched hurriedly to the London market, to sell their dollars and buy the marks, and the Bank of England bought U.S. dollars heavily to maintain the value of the pound fi relation to the U.S. currency. The U.S. dollar hovered just above its established floor of $2.42.

Th U.S. dollar was quoted in Paris at its floor, or intervention level, of 5.5125 francs.

Some arrangements were made for tourists. German commercial banks were selling up to 1,000 marks for U.S. dollars. One Swiss bank refused to accept U.S. dollars or dollar traveller's cheques; the American Express in Geneva was exchanging up to $200 in its own cheques but no cash.

Trading was virtually suspended on Swiss markets following the national bank's decision to let the Swiss franc float. Dealers said they had no rates for the U.S. dollar, the mark or any other major currency.

Dealers in Beirut, the Middle East's money market, said banks were buying up marks and selling U.S. dollars. Both held steady at 3.265 Lebanese pounds for the U.S. dollar and 0.90 pounds for the mark, but dealers said if Arabian oil money entered the market, they expect a sharp drop in the price of the U.S. dollar.

The Austrian national bank ordered all banks in that country to stop buying any Western currency for the time being.

The West German bank suspended purchases to support the U.S. dollar an hour after the Frankfurt exchange market opened. Dealers estimated it had absorbed about $200 million in the first 45 minutes of trading, on top of an estimated $1.2 billion Tuesday and $120 million in the last hour of trading Monday, when the speculative pressure began.

One top dealer at a major German commercial bank termed the foreign exchange situation "simply catastrophic." Most major German banks suspended dealings in all foreign currencies.

It was the first international monetary crisis since the fall of 1969, when West Germany was forced to increase the value of its money by about 9½ per cent. This time the rush to exchange dollars for marks began after five leading West German economic research institutes recommended that Chancellor Willy Brandt's government let the mark float free again to find a new, higher value as a tool against inflation.

American and foreign economists agree that the U.S. dollar now is overvalued in relation to at least five other currencies—the mark, the Japanese yen, Dutch guilder, the Swiss franc and to a lesser extent the French franc.

Sales and Ad Speaker Says Trend Alarming

The women's Sales and Ad Club finished its season on a challenging note last night.

The members of the club, filling the lower room of the Sun Luck Gardens, sat for close to an hour listening to Christina MacBeth telling them that they were all losing their individuality.

Miss MacBeth, editor and publisher of the Milverton Sun, explained that the mass media was the individual's worst enemy.

"Through the use of words such as mothers, taxpayers, youngsters etc., we are all being thrown into groups and our individuality is being thrown out the window.

"Newspapers, radio and television approach the public at large and seem to pay no attention to the needs of the individual," she said.

"Not to mention any other person or company, looking Via Fanny, that groups people together to find a standard."

Retailers, sociologists and computer workers all received the scorn of Miss MacBeth who is also a faculty member of the Ryerson Institute in Toronto.

"We are being put onto little cards saying what we have done and what we are capable of doing," complained Miss MacBeth.

"If there was ever an institution that every buildoned anyone it's the institution of education," Miss MacBeth continued.

In a later conversation, Miss MacBeth was asked what she was doing to avert the problem of the individualityr crisis, as a school teacher.

Miss MacBeth replied, "I have done nothing other than serve as an alarm to the people I know and speak to."

Prison officials said he was recaptured a few hours later driving a stolen car. Harris was serving four years on charges of theft and possession of stolen property.

Schizophrenics Help One Another

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: We are a newly formed group called Schizophrenics Anonymous. The requirement for entry to this club is merely a desire to get well.

It has occured to me that perhaps Recovery Unpprporated may have some ideas as to what we could do at our meetings. We are all lay people in various stages of illness, many of us unable to hold permanent jobs.

Secretary, S. Anon.

Dear Secretary: A group like yours can do wonders for its members.

Even just having an understanding friend to unload to means a lot; and when people with schizophrenic tendencies share some of their tough times and how they cope, this is doubly useful. Also uncaps the tensions.

Recovery Incorporated dealing as it does with persons who are struggling to maintain a good emotional balance is bound to have some ideas for you. Write to Mrs. Shirley Harding, 118 Brunswick Street, Brantford, Ontario, for information.

Dear Doris: After I married this attractive man I discovered he was an alcoholic and an extremely sick one. After a good summer he started to show signs of drinking again.

I don't trust him and I wish only to be free, though I still love him. He says he loves me but I think he loves the money I make. Yet he is very sick and I guess I'll have to see if I can help him.

Do you think he just runs around with wanting because he's an alcoholic or because he's sick mentally? — Going Insane

Dear Going: Let's see what you can do before you desert the ship.

Alcoholism is the escape of the immature. Flirtatious are schoolboy stuff too. Just how much identifiable sickness of the mind exists is in question. But they are all bound up together.

Get the professional help which is there for you — in your own family agency and in the alcoholism foundation for your province. Get to your local Al-Anon group for more understanding of this quirks that go with alcoholism, and how you can help yourself. He is young, and the future may not be all dim.

Dear Doris: I have tried all over to find out what pot cheese or farmer's cheese is.

I am on a diet. This cheese is very low in calories, but can't seem to buy it any place — Cheese Lover

Dear Cheese: Farmer's cheese is cottage cheese through a cheesecloth so that it is fine-textured and the free moisture has been removed from it. It is then aged.

When the farmer's wife made it, she put it in a pot to age — hence the two names. Usually you can find it in the cheese section in a plastic bag.

(Would be reducers, perhaps this is a new item for your low calorie delectation — especially if you love cheese! If you try it let me know how you like it.)

Three Steps in Making Hollandaise

By MARY MOORE

Crepes Hollandaise is a prize of a recipe for hostesses. Three steps comprise its preparation and each can be taken in advance: make the crepes, prepare the filling and the sauce and refrigerate all separately. At mealtime assemble and bake. Or make all just ahead of mealtime.

CREPES HOLLANDAISE
(Serves 6)

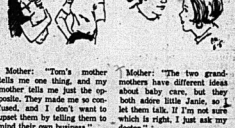
CREPES:
¾ cup milk
¼ cup water
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
3 eggs
2 tbsp. melted butter
½ tsp. salt

FILLING:
2 tbsp. butter
¼ cup minced onion
1½ cups cooked or canned shellfish (crab, shrimp, salmon, tuna or smoked oysters) (or ham or mushrooms)
Salt and pepper
¼ cup dry white wine

SAUCE
4 tbsp. (¼ cup) butter
5 tbsp. flour
2¾ cups hot water
1 tbsp. chicken bouillon cordial
½ tsp. salt
2 cups shredded Edam or Gouda cheese

To make Crepes in blender or bowl: blend or beat all ingredients until smoothly blended. Refrigerate batter 2 hrs. if possible. To fry crepes grease lightly a 6" heavy-frying pan. Pour in about 3 or 4 tbsp. batter and fry about 1 min. until pale gold on bottom. Flip over and cook other side about 30 seconds. Slide crepe onto holding plate and cook remaining batter, greasing pan when necessary. Stack between layers of wax paper and refrigerate.

To make Filling saute grossly onions and fish (or meat or mushrooms) in butter with shakes of salt and pepper for 1 min. Add wine and bring to boil. Cool and refrigerate.



To make Sauce melt butter, blend in flour, then stir in hot water, chicken cordial and salt until thick. Stir in cheese until melted. Refrigerate.

When mealtime arrives, blend half the sauce with filling and spoon some on lower third of each crepe and roll up and place them in buttered baking dish. Cover with remaining sauce. Sprinkle with more shredded cheese if desired. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 15 to 20 min or until bubbling and tinged with gold.

Mother: "Tom's mother tells me one thing, and my mother tells me just the opposite. They made me so confused, and I don't want to upset them by telling them to mind their own business."

Grandmotherly advice almost always is well meaning, and the young mother who is emotionally mature can listen without feeling dominated by the grandmothers.

Mother: "The two grandmothers have different ideas about baby care, but they both adore little Janie, so I let them talk. If I'm not sure which is right, I just ask my doctor."

Executive Council Okays Amalgamation

At a recent meeting of the Hastings County Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, the members of the executive council agreed to amalgamation with the Prince Edward County Association, an the necessary motions to accept this amalgamation will be put before the membership. These motions were willingly agreed upon by more than the quorum vote required, with only a few of the members in the county not being heard from. Also, the new constitution and bylaws, which are standard for all Associates in Ontario, were reviewed and accepted. These motions will be ratified at the initial meeting of the new Association, which will be held on June 9, 1971, and a new membership nominated.

It is now the official policy of the "Ontario Association that all associates have a total population count of at least 100,000, and I feel that with the larger associations, a much better program can be carried out. Health Education and Screening Development.

A refresher course in respiratory diseases, specifically for nurses, was held at Sunnybrook Hospital, sponsored by the York - Toronto Association. The Hastings Association paid expenses for four nurses from the Belleville General Hospital to attend this course. They were chosen from intensive care unit, surgery floor, inhalation therapy and also the supervisor of in-service education. Also attending were two nurses from the physiotherapy department and a technician from the pulmonary function unit. All these attended gave an enthusiastic report on the presentations given.

The industrial x-ray survey done in Hastings County has now been completed. Prior to this survey, the association contacted 99 industries and large businesses in Hastings County with a total of 7,791 employees. From this number 5,915 employees took advantage of this service offered. In addition, 69 x-rays were done at the Indian Reserve, and 189 tuberculin tests. These figures represent a fairly good percentage of attendance, and is a much better result than the mass surveys that used to be carried out with the general public.

The health education chairman, M. J. Dales, reported on his recent activities with film showings, anti-smoking demonstrations made with the aid of "Puffin' Pete", and lectures on a vital capacity lung testing machine. During the month of May, a screening survey will be made at one of the public schools in the county at the request of the principal, as he feels, hopefully, that this might have some effect, at least psychologically, with the smoking problem among his students.

Ann Landers
Family Album Brings Back Fond Memories

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please pardon the stationery but I am sitting here with this scratch paper sitting down notes for my lawyer who is preparing a property settlement for a divorce. While going through our joint personal belongings (my husband's and mine) we ran into all sorts of problems trying to decide who gets what. It was terribly difficult because I had always thought of everything as "ours."

This afternoon I came across the family album which represents 27 years of marriage. As I looked through it I thought to myself — before any couple decides on a divorce they should be made to sit down together and go over the family album — starting with the wedding pictures.

ANN LANDERS

Our album recalled the happiest of times, the picnics when the children were small, the first little house we owned, the family pets, the old cars, the funny dresses and hats. There were snapshots of trips and anniversaries and the kids' graduations. Looking back gives one a different perspective. It's a pictoral history of the past which makes one ask, "Could we ever have been that happy if we weren't deeply in love? Do I really want this divorce?" Now I'm not as sure as I thought I was. It's too late for me but maybe it will help someone else if you print this letter. — HONOLULU.

* * *

DEAR HONO: Here's the letter, and who knows — you may have saved some marriages.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Contrary to the advice from our pastor, our physician and our attorney, our 17-year-old daughter decided to keep her out-of-wedlock child. (Her mother backed her up.) Marylou is back in high school and is taking a heavy schedule in order to catch up on the work she missed during her absence.

I am now in trouble with my wife and daughter for reminding them that when a girl decided to keep her fatherless baby she must forego some of the pleasures and privileges other girls have. My question is this: Should Marylou be permitted to date boys as though she were a foot-loose, carefree teen-ager? I say no — not until she has finished high school. We'd like your opinion. — ON THE SPOT IN FORT WAYNE.

* * *

DEAR SPOT: If Marylou is living up to her responsibilities in school and at home I see no reason to deny her dating privileges — provided, of course, that she respects a curfew and that you know where and with whom she is at all times.

And now I will repeat some advice for which I caught plenty of heat recently. Once a girl has had an out-of-wedlock child she may intend to remain pure as the driven snow, but chances are that she will drift. It is essential that your daughter be informed on birth control techniques and devices so that she will not become pregnant again. Keeping a close watch on her or assuming she has learned her lesson is an inadequate approach to this problem.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a restaurant owner who has been for the short-haired waitress who was annoyed because she is forced by law to wear a hairnet, while a long-haired kid who worked beside her goes his merry way — getting his mop into everything. According to law in my community, anybody who prepares food or serves food must wear a head covering or hairnet if his hair is long. Boys included. Thought you'd like to know. — HAGERSTOWN, MARYLAND.

* * *

DEAR HAG: Thanks for the word. Hair ye — one and all! If the mop flops, cage it.

Twins Unexpected

EDMONTON (CP) — A survey of mothers of twins by the Edmonton Twin and Triplet Club showed that about one-quarter of the women were unaware that they were expecting twins until the time of delivery.

The club sent questionnaires to their members along with their registration forms this year, said Thelma Albert, editor of the club's newsletter.

Of 55 mothers of twins who answered, 13 said they were unaware they were going to have a multiple birth until the delivery.

The club also found that the average time between births was about 12 minutes, with actual times ranging from two minutes to 90 minutes.

Lewis Says Confrontation Is Sought

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government was accused by Stephen Lewis Tuesday of "recklessly toying with federal-provincial relationships" because of its desire to opt out of shared-cost programs with Ottawa.

In his reply to the budget speech in the legislature, the New Democratic Party leader said the government of Premier William Davis is "deliberately provoking confrontation with Ottawa . . . because it is desperately casting about for an election issue."

In his budget speech April 28, Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough chastised the federal government for its fiscal policies, which he said resulted in a sluggish economy and high unemployment.

He also stated that Ontario wants to terminate cost-sharing agreements with Ottawa as they expire and plans to avoid future cost-sharing commitments.

Mr. Lewis said Ontario wants to expand its tax points which "would destroy the fiscal basis of Confederation."

His one-hour attack on the budget was broadcast and televised on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's Ontario network.

Mr. Lewis offered a 18-point program of reform of the government's fiscal policies and ended by amending the government's motion that the budget be accepted. The amendment said the government failed to:

—Reduce the retail sales tax to four per cent from five per cent to stimulate purchasing power and increase employment;

—Increase the corporation tax by one per cent to reverse diminishing corporation contributions to provincial revenues;

—Provide a system of tax rebates for low-income earners, one of the Ontario tax reform proposals;

—Commit Ontario to taxation of capital gains at full income tax rates as an extension of federal capital gains taxes;

—Channel more revenue from resource industries to meet the needs of mining municipalities; —To recognize that imposition of the five per cent ceiling on civil service salaries is destructive of good faith collective bargaining and will be grossly unfair to many civil servants;

—To commit the province to take over 80 per cent of education costs;

—To reduce monthly medical care premiums to $5 for an individual and $10 for a family;

—To introduce "a municipal foundation" plan into the system of unconditional grants for municipalities, and —To adhere to Ontario's past role in supporting shared-cost agreements with Ottawa.

Mr. Lewis repeated his criticism of the government's pro-

Stirling

STIRLING — Gerald McGee has been engaged as a bylaw enforcement officer for the village. His duties will commence on May 15.

Fred Bateman, Lorne Hagerman, Clayton Burkitt, Delbert Mumby, Harry McAdam, Earl Wallace and Ed McIlravy attended the grand orange lodge sessions at Lindsay.

A large number of Stirling hockey fans attended the dominion ladies' hockey tournament in Toronto. The Stirling girls were the winners in the tournament in which 40 teams participated.

posed five-per-cent tax credit to industries buying machinery before March 31, 1973, saying it was a $125 million gift to corporations "courtesy of their friends and allies" in the Progressive Conservative party.

He said the "entire program evaporated under scrutiny" because much of the machinery will be purchased anyway; much of it will come in from the United States; much of it will support U.S. branch plants, and it will tend to automate jobs out of existence.

Mr. Lewis said that a reduction in the retail sales tax and an increase in the corporation tax would "greatly" contribute to economic growth and provide revenue to underwrite expanded social programs.

He said book profits of resource industries in Northern Ontario amounted to $396 million a year but they paid taxes on $15 million, or four per cent. He would provide $48 million for northern communities through a three-per-cent resources tax.

He was highly critical of government policy toward Northern Ontario in equalizing goods and services, and called the 11-cent reduction in the 24 bottle case of beer "bottled tokenism . . . you cannot buy Northern Ontario for a fistful of hope."

Mr. Lewis said an NDP government would establish a prices-review board, and institute a major land program so that processing of raw materials would be done "at home in Ontario." Crown corporations would do this if necessary.

On civil service wage ceilings, he said the NDP would not impose a five-per-cent limit and would accept "any arbitration award."

Mr. Lewis also said a full-rate capital-gains tax would generate $400 million although homes and farms would be exempt. He was also critical of the provincial government's intent to get out of the succession-duties field.

He said health care should be reorganized and there should be a shift from premiums to ability to pay.

The provincial government has committed itself to take over 80 per cent of education costs by next year, but Mr. Lewis said this should be upped to 80 per cent by 1975 and financed by revenues from the capital-gains tax.

Censorship Attacked

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer was asked in the Commons Tuesday to discontinue the practice of censoring the outgoing mail of prisoners at federal penitentiaries.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said that when prisoners write letters criticizing the penitentiary they are in or its administration the letters are censored and sent back to them for alterations.

Mr. Goyer said he could not give a specific reply on whether the practice will be altered, but it was his inclination that communication between a prisoner and his MP should be as free as possible.

Kerr Finds Difficulty Disposing of Garbage

TORONTO (CP) — George Kerr, Ontario's minister of energy and resources, said Tuesday his department is concerned because it is becoming increasingly more difficult to handle garbage.

Mr. Kerr told a committee studying his department's $100 million estimates that many methods to ease the problem are being studied—recycling, separation, pulverization and more improved incinerator techniques.

In a long debate, opposition parties and Mr. Kerr generally agreed that the disposal of waste, especially garbage, was one of the most pressing problems facing mankind.

Underground disposal of liquid industrial waste, some of it toxic, has become a problem because scientists are not sure where it goes and the public is reluctant to locate a pumping station in their area, Mr. Kerr said.

In the province there are 18 such wells, mostly in western Ontario. The government is considering the establishment of more, including a large one on an industrial site in Mississauga just west of Toronto.

Mr. Kerr told the committee that "nobody wants one (a pumping station) near their community."

He said he was concerned about where the liquid was going although there have been no known reports of it reappearing at the surface and doing any harm.

Mr. Kerr assured the committee that his department was examining the pumping of dangerous waste carefully.

Mr. Kerr said his department and a citizen's group in Burlington, Ont. will conduct a six-month test of 5,000 families in that city to see if a system of separating garbage into three categories—glass, cans and paper—is workable in a recycling process.

Fred Young (NDP—Toronto Yorkview) suggested the government study a system whereby housewives could separate their garbage into three containers within the home.

Mr. Kerr said he liked the idea but it would be difficult to institute a plan unless there was some method of convenience to it.

In business in the legislature Tuesday:

—Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence told the legislature the provincial government did not intend to make direct grants to community health centres but was assessing a system of loans to them.

—Resources Minister George Kerr said there "may be one or two" charges laid against cottage owners in the Muskoka and Kawartha Lakes "regions for" septic-tank violations.

—Agriculture Minister William Stewart said that if an agriculture course at Woodstock and Simcoe was not cancelled May 15 every Ontario county could demand a similar course for a total annual cost of $3.5 million. He accused the Liberal party of stirring up farmers on the issue of the course for political motives.

—Murray Gaunt (L—Huron-Bruce) suggested the establishment of an emergency fund to allow provincial conservation authorities to make quick purchase of properties that came on the market.

—A bill to restrict loan corporations acting as brokers was given second reading.

—Premier William Davis said the house would still be sitting in June when the Ontario government holds its conference on economic and cultural nationalism, appearing to indicate that he will not call an election for this spring or early summer.

—Outside the legislature building Education Minister Robert Welch was shouted down when he tried to speak to high school students protesting government disposal of college and school board spending.

—Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales said if a "reasonable" number of municipalities ask for the right to permit liquor sales in parks, he would consider permissive legislation for the whole province. He was speaking during debate on second reading of an amendment which would permit liquor sales in Metropolitan Toronto parks.

Justice Body Plans Tough Queries

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee served notice Tuesday it plans to question Solicitor - General Jean-Pierre Goyer intensively about RCMP and prison policies.

Liberals, Conservatives and New Democrats agreed to set aside the rest of the month for the inquisition.

"Have the minister bring his bulletproof vest and hard hat," warned Walter Deakon (L—Toronto High Park).

Mr. Goyer's spending estimates for the RCMP and the federal prison service are still before the committee but it must deal with them by 8 May 31 deadline, the deadline for committees to report back to the Commons on 1971-72 estimates.

Committee members from the three parties said the major areas of questioning will be:

—RCMP surveillance. Mr. Goyer underwent stormy questioning in the House last month about whether or not MPs are "bugged." Other RCMP procedures, such as methods of collecting dossiers and campus surveillance policy, also are expected to come up.

—Mr. Goyer's action last month in stopping a spot visit by four New Democrat MPs to Millhaven Penitentiary after the riot at the nearby Kingston penitentiary. Committee members have been advocating spot checks of prisons and were upset by the move.

Report Lists 37 Bilingual Federal Districts

OTTAWA (CP) — The image of a bilingual Canada of the future was put in slightly sharper focus Tuesday with an official report that gives details of 37 districts across the country in which federal services must be available in French and English.

The proposed districts would ensure federal language rights for between 75 and 99 per cent of the Francophone Canadians who live outside Quebec as well as for the entire Anglophone minority in the province.

With its recommendations, the report puts directly to the government the next step in the bilingualism program first outlined by the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

Based on 1961 census figures, however, it leaves open the language status of an additional 34 districts to be reviewed after the results this year. It also points to what is described as a critical weakness in the Official Languages Act of 1969 under which it was authorized.

The proposed districts may be proclaimed as legal entities by the government at any time after Aug. 2. That a more gradual approach may be adopted was suggested by the chairman of the bilingual districts advisory board shortly after its report was tabled in the Commons.

"The government is free to accept or reject in whole or in part our recommendations," Roger Duhamel, Queen's Printer, told a news conference.

He said the government may decide to proclaim at first perhaps only half of the proposed districts and to extend bilingual rights to the others as time goes on.

Close to 42 per cent of the Canadian population and 22 per cent of Canada's French-language minority would be covered by the proposed districts.

All of New Brunswick, with a Francophone minority of 32.5 per cent of the provincial population, and all of Quebec, with close to one million Anglophones, would be designated as bilingual districts.

Ontario would have 12 specific districts ensuring language rights for 80 per cent of 425,000 French-speaking citizens. The districts include five eastern counties, the Windsor-Chatham area, the upper Ottawa Valley and much of the northern region.

Eight districts are recommended in Manitoba; seven in Saskatchewan; three in Alberta; two in Nova Scotia and one in each of the remaining three provinces.

Under the Official Languages Act, a district qualifies for bilingual status if at least 10 per cent of its people are classified in the census as a French- or English-language minority.

Also assured are the rights of even smaller local minorities, as in many places in Quebec, who have traditionally been able to deal at federal offices in their own language.

The report dismisses any fears that implementation of the districts might result in millingual federal postal clerks and other workers being fired. In most cases, it states, the addition of one or two bilingual workers would solve the difficulty.

Studies Drugs

Studies by the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario show that the use of illegal drugs among high school and even elementary school students has increased. H. David Archibald, foundation official, said in a recent speech that it is a serious mistake to think of drug education as exclusively a matter for the schools. He suggested that the church, community groups and parents must help the schools with such programs. (CP Photo)

Changes in Grain Payments Praised

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition agriculture spokesmen gave the government a backhanded compliment in the Commons Tuesday—limited congratulations for bringing in amendments to the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act they said might undo some of the damage it has done to western farmers in the last few years.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) didn't have time to contribute to the guarded compliments, but offered more than his share of the assessment of the damage.

His main point was that when the government decided to double the limit of advance grain payments to western farmers to $6,000 last year and ease their repayment schedule, it put small farmers into debt situations they haven't yet been able to get out of and drove many of them to taking welfare in the cities.

The amendments reverse the repayment trend. Although the maximum annual advance payments will remain at $4,000—double what they were when Mr. Horner said Mr. Trudeau decided to buy some votes in the west—repayment schedules are designed to make sure a farmer pays them off within a crop year.

Under the act's current terms advances are repaid by reducing 50 per cent of per-bushel advance money from the initial price paid to farmers when grain is delivered.

Under the proposed amendments the farmer would pay back at the same rate as the loan was made—if he received a $1-a-bushel advance on a grain, a $1-a-bushel would be taken from his initial price when he delivered.

It would expand the advance payments system from wheat, barley and oats to include flax, rapeseed and rye.

It would also allow the cabinet to grant advances on unharvested grains or grain being dried. The government, now must go to Parliament for special legislation in such times of emergency.

The House earlier gave second reading to a bill that would have the government take over responsibility for hosting the prime minister, the Opposition leader and the Commons Speaker.

The prime minister now pays $3,000-a-year rent for his accommodation at 24 Sussex Drive, the Opposition leader is housed in a mansion called Stornoway that is paid for by a trust supported by private citizens, and the Speaker is allowed to reside at a farm in Kingsmere Park, bequeathed to the government by the late prime minister William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Health Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) and Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) approved the government assumption of responsibility.

But Roland Godin (Creditiste —Portneuf) said it is disgusting that the public will have to pay rent for Prime Minister Trudeau, who had a personal fortune and was well paid besides.

Kingston Verdicts Puzzling

KINGSTON (CP) — The fate of Robert J. Brown, sentenced Monday to 15 years in penitentiary after being convicted of kidnapping a 10-year-old girl, will be decided by the lieutenant-governor of Ontario following consultation with prison officials.

Brown, 25, was found guilty of the kidnapping charge April 16 by a 12-member jury.

However, the jury found him not guilty by reason of insanity on an additional charge of attempted murder. He was ordered Monday to spend an indefinite period in a hospital for the criminally insane in connection with that charge.

Crown Attorney John Sampson said Tuesday that the verdicts had presented the court with a perplexing problem.

Information on the case has been sent to the lieutenant-governor who, following consultation with prison officials, will decide whether Brown will be sent to a penitentiary or incarcerated in a hospital for the criminally insane.

Town Fool

Officials of the Canada Council readily admit that although the organization tries to invest productively in people, it makes occasional mistakes. Scars have resulted from controversy over such incidents as the council's award to Vancouver's "town fool" Joachim Foikis, shown here in a 1968 photo. Mr. Foikis obtained his grant for his "serious contribution to the self-awareness of the entire community." (CP Photo)

'Steal-to-Order' Gangs Cracked

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Police said Tuesday they have cracked two gangs of youths who operated on a "steal-to-order" basis, taking merchandise and selling it later to people who had requested particular items.

Police said that about 30 youths, including 18 ranging in age from 16 to 20, were arrested in the last few days. The others are juveniles.

Urge 'Impaired' Clause Be Removed

TORONTO (CP) — The insurance industry should set up some sort of review board that could help get unsafe drivers off the road, a provincial committee studying insurance claims was told Tuesday.

The legislative committee of the International Railway Brotherhoods told the three-man provincial investigating team in a brief that many unsafe drivers are allowed to remain on the road by paying exorbitant insurance claims.

"Such drivers not only continue to menace everyone but they cause all insurance costs to go up," said J. G. Armstrong, vice-chairman of the Transportation-Communications Employee Union.

A brief from the Ontario Motor Coach Association asked that the ability-impaired condition be all standard auto insurance policies be removed.

"We believe the matter of impaired driving should be left to the police and the department of transport," said W. H. Black, supervisor of claims for the Toronto Transit Commission.

"Let the Criminal Code deal with it," urged Mr. Black. "As the matter now stands, if a man has violated the impaired-driving condition, his innocent victim is limited in Ontario to a maximum of $50,000 though his policy may be for $100,000 or $200,000."

In another brief, the Ontario Insurance Agents' Association said it favors a system of advance payments to motorists involved in property-damage accidents.

The association also recommended the compulsory use of licensed collision appraisers, to allow the car owner to have repairs done where he chooses and allow the insurer to know the price was fair.

Headed by Windsor lawyer David I. McWilliams, the committee will make recommendations to the provincial government on possible changes in the Insurance Act and other related acts.

Tuesday was the final day of hearings here. Next hearing will be in Ottawa May 16.

Labor Official Says Demands Will Grow

TORONTO (CP) — The secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress said Tuesday that businessmen who think present union demands are exorbitant should be prepared for even more exorbitant ones.

William Dodge, participating in a panel at the annual meeting of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, said unions will demand control of pension funds, a say in company anti-pollution policy and a voice in other company decisions affecting consumers.

Mr. Dodge said that collective bargaining, despite its imperfections, should be retained and made to work better.

R. P. Riggin, vice-president of corporate affairs for Noranda Mines Ltd. of Toronto, also said collective-bargaining procedures need improving.

Mr. Riggin and Mr. Dodge agreed joint research by labor and management on such topics as wages and working conditions would be helpful.

MAN ALIVE by D. S. Halacy

A lively, non-technical look at man's physical nature and various theories of how we came to be, starting with definitions of life itself, one of our greatest mysteries. Mr. Halacy, well - known science writer, surveys the wonders of man's body and how it works, including the chemical codes which set the behavior patterns of our cells and thus make us what we are.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND NEUROSES by Dr. Arthur H. Cain

Dr. Cain is a recognized authority on sociopathic behavior and has written five previous books addressed to young people. Here he explains various terms used to classify neurotic and psychotic behavior and outlines ways in which the reader can recognize such traits in himself and in others, as well as how to cope with them. This is a realistic guide for young people concerned about their emotional development.

THE WILL TO LIVE by Arnold Hutschnecker

It is an accepted fact that at least 50 per cent of all patients passing through doctors' offices complain of symptoms for which little or no physical cause can be found. The author outlines ways in which stress may be dealt with and energy replenished.

LOW BLOOD SUGAR AND YOU by Carlton Fredericks and Herman Goodner

Diabetes has been known for years, but its opposite, hypoglycemia or low blood sugar, is less easily recognized. Unfortunately many of its symptoms resemble those of emotional illness and the diagnosis is therefore not always correctly made. The authors of this book, one a nutrition expert and one a prominent New York physician, say that anyone undergoing a medical examination should ask for a glucose tolerance test. They also outline a low-sugar, low-starch diet which must be followed in cases of hypoglycemia.

OVERWEIGHT: CAUSES, COST AND CONTROL by Jean Mayer

Dr. Mayer, professor of nutrition at Harvard University, gives a comprehensive explanation of the psychological and environmental factors that contribute to obesity. He shows why the popular notion that overweight is caused only by gluttony and lack of willpower is false. He also shows how it can be controlled. Included are charts and tables, giving nutritional as well as caloric values of everyday foods. A chapter on adolescence points out the dangers of fad diets to which young people are prone. An excellent book for the person with a weight problem.

YOURS AND MINE Prepared by the Professional Committee of the Schizophrenia Foundation of New Jersey.

The most severe health problem plaguing civilized man today is mental illness, with schizophrenia at the head of the list. This book seeks to dispel the false stigma attached to this illness and to enlighten the public about it. The authors assert that schizophrenia is brought about by an imbalance in body chemistry and that psychotherapy alone is not a successful method of treatment. There is discussion of symptoms, diagnosis and treatment. Alcoholism and drug addiction are discussed in relation to mental illness.

Government Advised to Drop Voluntary Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, says the government should abandon any attempts to hold back pay and prices by voluntary or compulsory restraint programs.

The head of the federal advisory agency calls instead for positive approaches aimed at steadily-growing employment in place of negative policies that try to buck market forces.

In a 7,500-word analysis prepared for presentation today to a special Senate inquiry into Canada's economic-management policies, Mr. Smith says in effect, that federal efforts for several years have been clumsy, out of date and sometimes more damaging than helpful.

His detailed study criticizes shifts in policy in the last three years—from "extremely vigorous anti-inflationary actions" in late 1968 and through 1969 to "large-scale monetary expansion" last year.

"Policy shifts are made after problems have developed or when impending problems are no longer avoidable . . . Such reactive policies run serious risks of aggravating instability and other problems."

There had been an absence of major policy innovation at the centre of planning and a 1930's attitude generally in Canada towards economic management.

Mr. Smith's rejection of income-restraint programs runs counter to government efforts through the federal prices and incomes commission and, warnings about the possibility of mandatory controls from Prime Minister Trudeau and John Young, chairman of the prices commission.

The advice also conflicts directly with an emphatic proposal presented to the Senate national finance committee at the opening of its special inquiry Tuesday.

Oxford University economist Sir Roy Harrod advised then that Canada should aim immediately at reasonably-full employment, followed by a compulsory freeze on pay and prices and development of a permanent program of restraint on wage rates and corporate dividends.

Mr. Smith says flatly that income-restraint policies, cutting across market forces, have not been very successful.

"Beyond incomes policies lie price and incomes controls, but these will tend to create even more problems, intervening even further with market mechanisms."

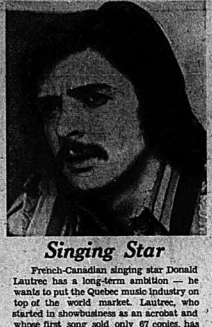
Instead, the council recommends what Mr. Smith calls reconciliation policies that would work with market forces rather than against them.

The economist, chairman of the 20-member council since 1967 and a member since 1963, catalogues a list of policy ideas designed to reconcile the supply and the demand for goods and services in the economy over the long term.

Problems arise in an economy when there is a wide gap between supply and demand—unemployment when supply capacity exceeds demand, as at present, or inflation when demand outstrips supply.

Mr. Smith, whose council represents business, labor, farm and consumer interests, says new programs—experimental if necessary—should rank in policy-making importance with the orthodox management methods of clamping down on spending and credit to fight inflation and reversing the process to combat unemployment.

Such policies should be based on better analysis of the causes of economic trends, policy-making should look ahead years instead of months, and programs should be co-ordinated among various levels of government, and in co-operation with private business.



Policies designed to reconcile supply and demand more evenly should concentrate on eliminating production, distribution and manpower bottlenecks through manipulation of tariffs, business competition, innovation and training programs.

They would aim to increase productivity—turning out more goods for less effort and money.

Mr. Smith stresses throughout that most of what he presented to the Senate committee has been advanced repeatedly since 1963 by the advisory economic council.

Long Hot Summer Faces MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Politicians are looking towards a long, hot summer of debate in Parliament following word that the government's budget and tax-change legislation are to be delayed.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson says his spending budget for this year and the long-awaited tax legislation will be presented to Parliament some Friday or Fridays in June. It will likely be one package on a single day but possibly a week or more apart, his office said Tuesday.

Six days of debate on the budget itself are assigned by parliamentary rules. Debate on legislation that flows from the budget has no time restrictions, short of the imposition of time-limiting closure, a politically-volatile power of the government.

The Opposition Conservative party has served notice it would fight tax changes it opposes every step of the way.

The New Democratic Party also will battle the legislation.

Some government MPs and Commons officials are preparing now to spend the whole summer in Ottawa—and Ottawa summers can be hot, humid and uncomfortable, especially in the Commons where there is no air conditioning.

Finance Minister Benson said the budget and tax day would be a Friday so that stock markets would not be affected.

Previous budgets have been presented in mid-week, but after the markets have closed.

Presenting the budget and tax bill on a Friday night means that opposition MPs would be unable to give a considered Commons response until at least three days later.

Last-ditch Fight On Farm Bill Seen

OTTAWA (CP) — Pressure is mounting, particularly from the West, for Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield to lead a strong, last-ditch stand against a government bill that would establish national farm marketing agencies.

The measure has passed the critical committee stage—after long and bitter wrangling and one all-night session—and now is again before the Commons for its final stages of approval. This is often a formality, but it will be different this time.

There are 29 amendments to be considered before approval of the bill. And many western MPs are urging the Conservative party to stage all-out warfare in an attempt to prevent the measure from going through in its present form.

More than 30,000 coupons have arrived in the office of Mr. Stanfield to protest the legislation. They resulted from an advertisement placed in some western newspapers under the heading: Attention Prairie Farmers. Mail These Coupons Now and Help Delay Bill C-176.

The advertisement was sponsored by a group of agriculture associations, including stock growers, hog producers, swine producers, egg and pullet producers and cattlemen's associations. It asked that the protest coupons be sent to Mr. Stanfield and local MPs.

The legislation, said the advertisement, would reduce the freedoms of farmers—by allowing inspectors to examine books on the farm—and will result in eastern domination because Ontario and Quebec, as the chief buyers of farm products, can prevent western imports.

The advertisement said the measure would result in greater corporate control, lower feed-grain prices and reduced livestock production.

The bill is expected to come before the Commons again within the next week.

But while I enjoy the savings very much, what I really like about Loblaws is their quality. I look for quality first—and then price—and I find I can get the best of both at Loblaws. Policeman Unaware of Record

TORONTO (CP) — Supt. Albert Wilson testified Tuesday at his own disciplinary hearing that he was unaware George Clinton Duke, an Oakville, Ont., businessman, had a major criminal record when he was told to cease associating with him.

Supt. Wilson said he attended functions at Mr. Duke's Oakville estate because he understood Commissioner Eric Silk "wanted OPP members to develop friendly relations with the public."

He described the events, many of them displays of Mr. Duke's lawn and garden equipment, as "breaking bores."

The 32-year veteran of the provincial police is charged on five counts under the Police Act of bringing discredit upon the OPP by associating with Mr. Duke.

The action follows a provincial inquiry into Mr. Duke's relationships with senior provincial police and persons of known criminal activity.

The inquiry under Mr. Justice Campbell Grant last year found no evidence of improper relationships between OPP officers and known criminals, but concluded some senior OPP officials unwisely associated with Mr. Duke.

Supt. Wilson challenged an official at the hearing Tuesday to explain why no file on Mr. Duke's criminal record was established in the attorney-general's office until 1969—a year after the commissioner's order to stop seeing Mr. Duke.

Commissioner Silk had testified that he ordered all OPP personnel to end social contacts with the businessman in 1968.

The commissioner said that was when he first learned of Mr. Duke's record—the most serious offence being a 1930 conviction for armed robbery in Buffalo.

Supt. Wilson and Staff Supt. Archibald Roger, his superior, were suspended with full pay in June 1970.

Trudeau Motors One-Price Policy

To All Residents of The Quinte Area...

JOHN TRUDEAU

We, at Trudeau Motors are constantly striving to make it easy for our customers to drive the leaders: CHEVROLET, OLDSMOBILE, CADILLAC and of course 'the car of the year' VEGA. In keeping with this principle, we have undertaken a new concept in New Car and Truck Buying that eliminates all the confusion, haggling and fancy figuring. It gives you the straightforward price of the car you want — a price that will beat any deal you have been offered in the city or the country.

What does this mean to you, the car buyer?

It means an honest retail price. We simply tell you the lowest price we can accept for a particular car, in the beginning, and our large volume makes this the lowest price anywhere in the district. This new policy eliminates the confusing red tape and makes it easy for you to buy the car you want.

Hand in hand with Trudeau's One-Price Policy is our honest trade in value offered for your present car. We will give you the top market price which is simply subtracted from the price quoted for your new car. May is 'Make-It' Month at Trudeau Motors — so come in and see our new 'One-Price Policy' makes it easy for you to drive a trader. I am confident that you will be thoroughly satisfied with this new concept.

Yours Sincerely,

Steer Swims River to Freedom

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Freedom wasn't just another word for an 800-pound steer yesterday that made good his escape from the Belleville Livestock Yards on North Front Street, swam the Moira River and raced down Station Street to the CNR Express Yards in the east end of the city.

Purchased at the stockyards yesterday by Alex Beaudric of RR 1, Foxboro, the new owner was unable to take legal delivery of the beast.

"He jumped over the racks and hightailed it," the owner told The Intelligencer this morning.

Belleville city police officers, who might well be known as members of the Steerchasers Squad, were hard put to capture the beast in a Keystone Kop chase up Station Street.

In an attempt to corner the frolicing beast, Humane Society officers joined policemen on foot. Madly waving their arms and swinging ropes, the officers and stockmen attempted to bring the steer to a halt.

However, he didn't like the idea and at every turn, managed to elude the men.

At one point, a Humane Society officer rode the hood of a squad car, rope in hand and the car paced the Holstein-Hereford, but to no avail.

Behind the express yards, the animal led a merry chase through brambles and bushes, on into the residential district behind the Haig Road development.

Liquor Parley Here May 11

PICTON (Staff) — Vice president of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and local tourist operator, Merle Pearsall will attend a meeting in Belleville City Hall, May 11, to obtain information concerning seasonal liquor licences. A representative of the Liquor Licence Bureau, W. T. Nugent will answer questions regarding six month tourist season permits.

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis also will attend the meeting on behalf of council. It was pointed out during Monday's council meeting that Mr. Jarvis could then provide answers locally for persons interested in learning liquor licence provisions here.

At this point, veterinarian Dr. Douglas Hall joined the chase equipped with a tranquilizer gun designed to stun, not harm the beast.

Dr. Hall managed to get one of his darts into the steer, but the beast shook himself and the tranquilizer fell out. Tail high and running, the freedom fighter took off again towards the subdivision.

A group of youngsters joined in the chase and managed to scare the animal back towards Dr. Hall.

A second shot followed but at the last minute, the beast turned, and the air-rifle propelled dart barely missed the animal's kicking heels.

At this point, city police had departed and a bedraggled, tired Humane Society officer decided to throw in his towel.

"Correction," said the Humane Society officer, "he's a steer."

With dark closing in, the search was discontinued and officers returned to the scene this morning.

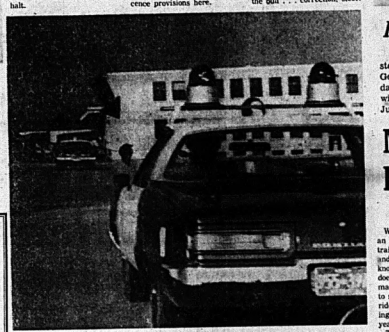
At last word, the last laugh was still in the possession of the bull . . . correction, steer.

He Had Two Chances

Dr. Douglas Hall, Belleville Animal Hospital veterinarian, yesterday prepared his third tranquilizer dart, needed to subdue an 800-pound Hereford-Holstein which escaped from the Belleville Livestock yards on North Front St., swam the Moira River and escaped into the woods behind CN's Express offices on Station Street. Dr. Hall's first shot was shaken loose by the steer . . . the second shot missed.

Fractured Fence Concerns Council

PICTON — Picton resident Elsher Hineman has been "fencing" with town councillors for almost one year. Mr. Hineman has appeared at several sessions of council in the past eleven months claiming the town is responsible for damage to a picket fence bordering his Jane Street property. The fence was broken when a tree fell against it last June.



Mr. Hineman insists that he warned the town the tree was unsafe but it was not cut. For this reason he feels council should pay for repairs to his damaged fence. Town council's insurance company has disallowed all liability claims in connection with the incident.

Although council erected Mr. Hineman's complaint with verbal sympathy, it was decided it would be unwise to pay for his fence repairs. Town solicitor Jack Ward suggested that by overriding the insurance company's decision, councillors would set a precedent that could prove damaging in future.

Council defeated a motion to notify Mr. Hineman that it is not responsible for any repairs as well as a motion to allow him $25 for damages, with no admission of liability.

Although the situation seemed deadlocked, councillors Ross Cronkwright, Corey Wallraven and Harry Abram offered a private solution to the problem. The three men volunteered to repair and paint the picket fence if Mr. Hineman would agree to supply the materials. The irate taxpayer did not reply to this offer Monday night but said in a telephone interview yesterday that he plans to refuse it.

Council voted to receive a letter from Mr. Hineman protesting the town's failure to pay for damages to his fence. In this letter the complainant reminded councillors that he could withhold taxes for a two-year period.

Fender Roundup

Ontario Humane Society, Quinte Branch, officer Rocky Hamilton yesterday rode the fender of a city police squad car as the vehicles paced an 800-pound steer, on the loose at the CN Express yards. On foot, from the top of cars and chased with ropes and a tranquilizer gun, the beast led officers a merry chase until darkness called off the roundup.

Committee Proposed To Police New Plan

TRENTON (Staff) — With the new official plan for Trenton complete, the planning board here last night decided its next major job should be to prepare minimum housing standards legislation for council's consideration.

A minimum standards bylaw for Trenton would probably be administered by a permanent three-man committee and require that homes be painted and yards be kept clean.

"We should start enforcing against all the rubble collectors around town — I would like to see Highway 2 coming in from the west — the best access to town — blighted," said planning board member Paul Tripp.

A rumor circulating the chamber that an old chicken hatchery along the route may be turned into a body shop was met with reactions of "Oh God, no!"

Trenton now has no way of checking the undesirable condition of a building unless it is a danger to health or life.

Looking at the prospects for a minimum standards bylaw, board member Douglas Livingstone said he thought such legislation would be "more controversial than anything we have tried so far".

"That is why we need a troika (a three-man Russian board) — we should think up names for a troika to administer this. We cannot have a bunch of gumshoes, we elect enough of those," Paul Tripp added.

The board decided to ask Dennis Flood, a consultant with Project Planners, to help draft minimum standards for early consideration. A list of troika candidates will be prepared by the board.

Town to Help

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton's deputy clerk, Arden Rose, was appointed by council Monday to help coordinate the town's participation in Operation Cleansweep.

Councillor Paul Tripp told council in making the request, the Lower Trent Conservation Authority is trying to delegate responsibilities for the cleanup blitz to its member municipalities because the LTRCA only has two permanent employees.

With Cleanup

He mentioned that he had been charged with the job of organizing Operation Cleansweep in the town and along the Bay of Quinte from Twelve O'Clock Point to CFB Trenton.

Mr. Tripp asked that the deputy clerk "head up the logistics . . . to get the mechanics of this rolling."

Retirement Ceremonies Discussed

Canada's last functioning steam locomotive, CNR Montreal-built 1942 steamer 6218, will retire officially in ceremonies at Belleville July 3 and 4, George Van de Water, manager of the CNR Rideau Area announced yesterday. He and Mayor J. Russell Scott discussed the upcoming ceremonies which will pay tribute to a bygone era with five special excursions to Anson Junction from Belleville, with 7,000 enthusiasts expected.

Monster Party Planned For 6218's Retirement

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

What can a railway do with an outmoded engine that few trainmen know how to drive and fewer maintenance men know how to service? What does a company do with a machine that thousands flock to see and pay good money to ride behind, but which is costing more to operate every year?

This problem has been the topic of much interest recently as Canada's only operating steam locomotive, CNR 1942 Northern class engine 6218, approached the end of its safe operating period. (Federal regulations require the periodic renewal of boiler tubes and flues in steam locomotives).

It has been estimated that total cost of renovation to put old 6218 in first-class running order in August would be in excess of $100,000.

So what plans does the CNR have for this metallic lady that has attracted more than 100,000 excursion travellers from all over the world and many times that number of admirers?

The railway isn't saying, but they announced yesterday that final ceremonies and concluding excursion runs will be held in Belleville on the July 3-4 holiday weekend.

George Van de Water, CNR manager for the Rideau area said Belleville was chosen because "6218 was in operation between Montreal and Toronto for many years."

"Belleville's tradition as a railway town makes it an appropriate place for the final ceremonies."

Public relations officer for the railway, Norman Lowe, added, "the roundhouse that was here in Belleville was the largest roundhouse in North America up until the turn of the century."

Several stopovers will precede the final ceremonies but, decked out "with flags waving," the old engine will storm into the city for the holiday weekend."

"Belleville is honored by having this event . . . our citizens, especially our retired railroad folk, are going to be very pleased," said Mayor J. Russell Scott.

More than 7,000 railroad buffs are expected at the ceremonies, planned by the railroad to coincide with the July holiday weekend and the CNR has laid on five 10-mile excursion trips to Anson Junction, near Stirling, to handle the buffs in 12 special commuter coaches.

With dieselization of Canada's railways in 1960, only five steamers were kept for excursions, including 95-foot 6218, the last of such engines to travel the rails.

This particular engine was overhauled when, in late 1964, locomotive 6167 came due for retirement. Because of the extreme popularity of steam engine excursions, the CN made this last engine ready for the rails, at an overhaul cost of more than $80,000 in CN's former repair shops at St. Stratford.

Canadian National steam excursions were best known in Ontario and Quebec, but certification by the United States Interstate Commerce Commission also allowed 6218 to make occasional visits to terminals in Chicago and Portland, Maine, by way of the lines of CN's U.S. subsidiaries, the Grand Trunk Western, the Central Vermont and the Grand Trunk New England lines.

All in all, over the 11-year era of the steam excursion runs, the five locomotives accounted for some 150 trains.

Although railroad officials wanted to maintain the engine as a "living" example of an almost dead era, operating costs and the antiquity of parts forced the railroad to remove the old iron horse.

Earlier this year, an official for CNR stated "it is becoming increasingly difficult to secure parts for engine 6218 in order to keep it in safe operating condition.

"It is no longer possible to simply order such things as side rod bushings or piston rings for the engine. These must be carefully fabricated in our railway shops or special castings ordered outside.

"During the last few years, there has been a gradual lessening of experienced people in our ranks to run the locomotive, fire the boilers and repair it in our shops," said the spokesman.

During the classic days of steam, fully equipped shops, such as the central yards in Belleville, were equipped to handle and service the coal-burners, with major overhaul shops situated across the country.

With train service provided by sleek diesel engines, these shops were all but scrapped, their unique machinery sold either for junk or to countries still operating steam locomotives.

Wherever the old engine stopped, fire engines and steam shovels or cranes were needed to replace the long-gone watering tanks and coal chutes. Modern fuels made it uneconomic to handle large supplies of coal.

And so Belleville is to be honored for the bowing out ceremonies of Canada's last operating steam locomotive.

Gone also will be the child's feeling of awe as he stood next to one of smoke-belching, gigantic, panting monsters at the railroad station. Or, lying awake at night hearing the mournful wail of a distant steam whistle.

That bygone age will finally die on July 5 as 6218 performs for the last time and rears down the track to take her place in the pages of history.

Plant Closing 'Definite'

TRENTON (Staff) — Despite efforts of municipal officials here to persuade Stokely-Van Camp not to close its Trenton canning factory, the plant manager indicated today that closure is definite.

J. B. Harder told The Intelligencer there will be no more production at the plant but the warehouse operated by the company here will stay open for at least seven or eight months — "to the end of the year, maybe longer."

The Stokely warehouse employs seven hourly-rated men now. Mr. Harder explained it would be premature to predict how long these jobs will last.

Mayor Duncan McDonald and council expended considerable effort trying to avert the shutdown when the initial announcement came in December that the Dufferin St. plant would close.

Civic officials had held out hope that the plant would keep going since that time.

Bike Rodeo Saturday

TRENTON (Staff) — The Kiwanis bicycle rodeo will be held at the Community Gardens here Saturday morning.

Students from Dufferin, North Trenton, Prince Charles, St. Peter's and Trenton Christian schools wishing to join in the rodeo are asked to gather with their bicycles in the Market Square at 8:30 a.m. where a police-escorted parade will leave for the Gardens.

Another parade from V. P. Carswell School will leave at 10 a.m. for entries from Broadacre, Queen Elizabeth, St. Mary's, Marmora, College St. and V. P. Carswell schools.

Parents may provide alternate transportation if they wish.

Marmora Preparing Activities

MARMORA (Special) — Members of the Marmora Recreation Committee are hiring staff and otherwise making ready for organized summer recreation activities.

Director of the summer program will be Merv-Lynn Thomson with Karen Acorne and Vicki Stewart to act as swim instructors. Two positions still unfilled are those of playground supervisor and park attendant.

Committee secretary Mrs. Glenn Wentworth has been instructed to place an advertisement in the Marmora Herald for inviting applications for the two positions.

Intelligencer Sports

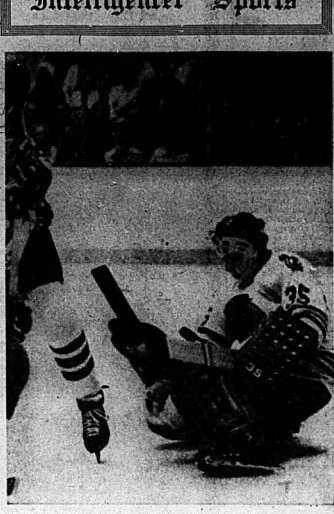
Bruins Rehire Johnson

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins announced Tuesday that Tom Johnson, who coached the team to the 1970-71 National Hockey League East Division title and its first Prince of Wales trophy in 30 years, has signed a new two-year contract.

The terms were not disclosed.

Johnson, 43, a former NHL all-star defenceman, moved from a front office post into the coaching job a year ago when Harry Sinden resigned shortly after leading the club to the Stanley Cup.

In the first round of Stanley Cup play this year, Boston was defeated by the Montreal Canadiens, four games to three.



Bowman Has Offers

CHICAGO (CP) — Scotty Bowman, who last week resigned his double role as general manager-coach of St. Louis Blues, said Tuesday he has "received several offers" from other National Hockey League clubs.

Bowman, here for the Tuesday night opener of the Stanley Cup final round between Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks, declined to name any clubs offering him a new position.

Rustlers Hustle

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Terry Wedderburn and Mick Girard each scored two goals Tuesday night to lead Red Deer, Alta., Rustlers to a 7-3 win over Charlottetown Islanders for their second consecutive win in the best-of-seven final for the Centennial Cup.

Pappin Rains on Hab Parade

CHICAGO (CP) — No one could blame Billy Reay today if he asks the National Hockey League to follow a suggestion he made in jest.

"Maybe the NHL should adopt a rule to award a point for a tie game in the playoffs," Reay, Chicago Black Hawks coach, said Tuesday night after his club beat Montreal Canadiens 2-1 on Jim Pappin's goal at 1:11 of the second overtime period.

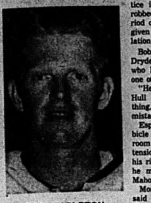
The victory gave the Hawks a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final. The second game here is scheduled Thursday.

Chicago now has gone into overtime in four of its last six games.

"If we only played 60 minutes in a playoff game now, I wouldn't feel like we had a game," Reay said.

The limited scoring in just over four periods of end-to-end hockey was due mainly to the excellent goaltending of Chicago's Tony Esposito and young Ken Dryden of Montreal.

Jacques Lemaire put Montreal ahead at 12:39 of the middle period, with Chicago's Eric Nesterenko serving a tripping penalty. But Bobby Hull got the equalizer at 7:54 of the third with Lemaire off for interference.



It was Hull's ninth goal of the playoffs with assists going to Pappin and defenceman Pat Stapleton.

Stapleton's assist brought his playoff total to 13 this season, tying a record for defencemen held by Tim Horton of New York Rangers.

Reay said he thought his club was a little flat in the second period, but rebounded in the third and overtime periods.

PAT STAPLETON

from the start of the second overtime session. Centre Stan Mikita got the puck to Pappin despite an entanglement with Montreal defenders in front of Dryden.

Pappin, whose only previous record on an NHL overtime scoresheet was a 1967 assist on Bob Pulford's goal against Montreal while he played with Toronto Maple Leafs, said Mikita was instrumental in the winning goal.

"Stanley did all the work on it," Pappin said. "It was my first goal into an empty net."

He said Dryden had moved to the side to cover the play from Mikita, but the Chicago centre still managed to get the puck to his winger.

Pappin said his goal was justice in a way as Dryden had robbed him late in the third period of a goal that would have given the Hawks a win in regulation time.

Bobby Hull gave credit to Dryden, a 24-year-old rookie who had beaten the Hawks in one of his six late-season starts.

"He's a real good goalie," Hull said. "I'll tell you one thing, he doesn't make many mistakes."

Esposito sat sullenly in his cubicle in the Chicago dressing-room slowly unwinding from the tension. He nursed a red welt on his right collarbone from a stop he made on Montreal's Frank Mahovlich.

Montreal coach Al MacNeil said the Canadiens were "not disheartened by the loss."

Reay said he used rookie defenceman Rick Foley, up from the Chicago Portland Buckaroos of the Western Hockey League, as a replacement for veteran Doug Jarrett after the second period because the latter was "jaded."

"She's tired from all the overtimes we've had," Reay said of Jarrett. "But he'll snap back."

Thursday night's second game could see the return of centre Pit Martin to the Chicago lineup. He sat out Tuesday night's contest with knee injury.

The Canadiens, losing their first overtime game after winning seven straight extra-period games, were expected to skate after the Chicago club.

Referee Bill Friday called 11 minor penalties, six to Montreal. Each team was assessed a minor in the first overtime period, both times as defencemen took out opposing forwards as they broke in on goal.

Gardens Gets Fifth Game

TORONTO (CP) — Maple Leaf Gardens will be the site May 12 of the fifth game in the Richardson Cup junior hockey playoff, the Gardens announced Tuesday.

St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association and Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Junior Hockey League are tied at one win each in the best-of-seven series for the Eastern Canada first-level junior amateur title.

The third and fourth games are scheduled for Quebec this Friday and Saturday and St. Catharines was to be the site for the fifth game. However, the demand for tickets exceeded the supply of about 3,200 seats at the St. Catharines arena.

Dietrich Gets Hot Around Midnight

The right winger for Galt Hornets scored the winning goal Tuesday night to give his team a 3-2 victory over Calgary Stampeders after 16 minutes and 32 seconds of overtime.

The goal gave the Hornets a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Allan Cup final for the Canadian Senior A hockey title.

Almost 48 hours earlier, Dietrich fired a similar 30-foot shot to beat Calgary 6-5 after 16 minutes and 28 seconds of overtime in the second game of the series.

Both of Dietrich's goals came shortly before midnight, and after about 3½ hours of suspense.

After the game Tuesday, Dietrich, 28, who works in Waterloo, Ont., said:

"I didn't even see the puck go into the net. I got nailed pretty good right after I shot.

"I heard the crowd though," he said, with a grin.

The win Tuesday night was before 1,567 fans—the smallest of the playoffs here. The next game is here Thursday.

Fern Belanger and Vance Millar scored in the first period to give Galt a 2-0 edge but centre Ron Huston scored in the second and third periods to send the game into overtime.

Russ Gillow, who replace Garry Bauman in the Stampeder nets, and goaltender Boal Hurley of Galt both played strong games.

George Hill, who has led the Alberta Senior League in scoring for the last three years, missed on a penalty shot awarded after he was pulled down on a breakaway in the first period.

After a regular schedule in which the net-bulgers had a field day, the National Hockey League's 1970-71 season is winding up with goal-prevention in the limelight.

It was not a banner year for NHL goalkeepers. The 14 league entries erupted with 3,609 goals, an average of 240 per team. Fifteen years ago, that would have constituted a record for goals by a team over the schedule.

New York's goaltending tandem of Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure won the Vezina Trophy with a 2.35 combined goals-against-average, highest winning percentage in five years.

But now that the cash is on the table, the puck-stoppers have taken over. The two top candidates for the seventh awarding of the Conn Smythe Trophy are guarding the nets of the Stanley Cup finalists.

It's no accident that goalkeepers have won the playoff MVP award twice (Roger Crozier - 1965, Glenn Hall - 1968) in its six-year history. At no other time in the season can the scoring of a single goal so affect the state of a pro hockey player's wallet.

Of particular interest these days are the billfolds of Montreal Canadien and Chicago Black Hawk assistants. Anthony Esposito and Kenneth Dryden, proofs positive that college hockey (Michigan Tech and Cornell U.) can't be all that bad, are doing their bit to brighten teammates' expectations of a big trip to the wicket.

Esposito's goaltending, which shows up in numbers as a trifle above 1.8 goals per game over 13 playoff dates, is one good reason why each Chicago Black Hawk roster member is $7,000 wealthier than he was a month ago. His unorthodox, but effective brand of puck-blocking was a great point in the Hawks' first-place Western Division finish, worth $2,500 per player.

Quarter and semi-final wins over Philadelphia and New York were worth $2,250 to each Black Hawk, making the individual bonus total $7,000 to date. If they beat out Montreal, each Hawk gets another $2,000. Even losing the Cup final is worth $1,500 per man.

Each Hab is also $4,500 to the good since the playoffs began, although there was only $750 per man for the team's third-place Eastern Division finish.

But then, the Habs only had aspiring lawyer Ken Dryden for six games in the regular schedule. The Canadiens have been slightly unbeatable in their 14 post-season outings while Dryden has stopped the lion's share of 600 pucks whistled his way by Boston and Minnesota marksmen, since departed.

Dryden's playoff average is not phenomenal. The Canadiens have had 45 goals scored against them (two into empty nets) in 14 playoff games, but 26 came in the Boston series alone. It was no small achievement on Dryden's part to hold the Bruins, who averaged five goals per game over a 78-game schedule, to that number in seven games.

In seven games since then, including Tuesday night's 2-1 overtime loss in Chicago, Dryden only has 24 goals in his discredit, plus the save of such sharp-shooters as Phil Esposito and Bobby Hull.

"He doesn't make many mistakes," Hull observed after Tuesday night's cliff-hanger. Unfortunately for Montreal, two mistakes in a 2-1 loss is two too many, although the towering 24-year-old couldn't be faulted for successful shots by Hull and Stan Mikita any more than he could for 56 unsuccessful Black Hawk tries.

Dryden is covering a lot of net for a chap with 30 games of NHL experience with his suspenders. Should Canadiens win their 15th Stanley Cup, he deserves to become the seventh winner of the Conn Smythe Trophy.

His Chicago counterpart ranks as the other top contender. And if the Hawks put together three more wins, Montreal management will surely hark back to that June 11, 1969 morning when they left Tony Esposito unprotected in the annual league draft.

Sports Briefs

BOSTON (AP) — Boxing promoter Sam Silverman said Tuesday he has offered Muhammad Ali $1 million or 35 per cent of the live gate and ancillary rights to fight 1968 Olympic heavyweight champion George Foreman in Boston in September.

TORONTO (CP) — Joe Louis, former world heavyweight boxing champion, said Tuesday George Chuvalo, Canadian heavyweight champion, will beat Jimmy Ellis when they meet at Maple Leaf Gardens Monday.

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — A threatened strike by Ontario jockeys that would have prevented thoroughbred racing here was averted Tuesday when jockeys and horsemen reached an agreement.

Under the new scale, winning jockeys will automatically receive 10 per cent of the owner's purse.

Bowl-O-Drome owner Bill Bateman will attempt to be an uncongenial host to the entries in The Intelligencer Gold Cup bowling classic Tuesday. Bateman won the match play tournament last year and will be defending the title against a number of top area bowlers. This year will mark the sixth time that the event has been contested.

Pinfall Not Crucial

"Blow the man, rather than the pins, down" will be the strategy in the Intelligencer Gold Cup bowling classic slated for next Tuesday at the Belleville Bowl-O-Drome.

Unlike most bowling tournaments which are concerned with total pinfall, the Gold Cup competition is strictly match play with the bowlers meeting in a series of head-to-head elimination matches. As one competitor puts it, "You could bowl a 400 game and lose or end up a winner by rolling a 190".

"We've changed the format a little this year," says tournament organizer Bill Bateman, who also happens to be the defending champion. "Rather than invite only the top 24 players in the area we're going to accept the first two dozen applications and then expand the number of entries to 32 if necessary."

The 24 entrants will be seeded into four equal groups to begin play and then play each opponent in their group once. The top two players in each group will then advance to the next round. A series of the top six out of three matches will then decide the survivors and eventual champion.

Bateman, who won the event for the first time last season will be back for another shot at the title as will last year's finalist Art Butler, who finished fourth in Saturday's "Mr. Bowling" tournament.

Already entered are Jack Calnan, who has the city's high average and was runner-up in the "Mr. Bowling" contest, Ron Saylor a third place finisher in Saturday's event and former Gold Cup winner Cec Hardwick and Glen Hamilton.

Two - time "Mr. Bowling" champion Wally Knapp and Leo Labelle who captured the Intell trophy two years ago are among the other likely starters.

The sixth annual event will get under way Tuesday, 7 p.m. at the Bowl-O-Drome.

Province To Pay Coaches

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government will pay part of the salaries of executive directors for sport-governing associations, Premier William Davis announced Tuesday at the fourth annual provincial sports achievement award banquet.

Mr. Davis said soccer, track and field, swimming and lacrosse already have been given grants for this purpose.

He said when an association feels it needs a director of coaching in addition to an executive director, the government will pay part of his salary as well.

The banquet was in honor of provincial champions, Canadian and international champions, coaches, managers and officials.

Carson was awarded with a special plaque for his outstanding service to the Ontario Baseball Association, while Walt representing himself and brothers Bob and Gary who were unable to attend, received an achievement award, lapel pin and medal. All three weightlifting brothers were Canadian Intermediate champions in 1970.

Lacrosse Balanced

League balance appears to be the keynote to the high school lacrosse loop, at least after the first two nights of play.

North Addington High School and Moira Secondary School battled to a 10-10 deadlock last night to create a four-way tie for first place among the quartet of league entries. Quinte and BCI had played to a 3-3 deadlock in the opening contest, played the previous night.

Doug Perry and Bryan Brooks of North Addington proved to be the scoring stars of the game, which featured excellent passing attacks by both teams.

Perry rapped in five goals and added three assists, while Brooks netted four markers and helped on two more. Brian Keith added the other tally.

For Moira it was Jim Lennox playing a standout game picking up four of his team's goals. Duncan Pressant added a pair of tallies with singles going to Gerald Grier, Joe Weymark, Dan Payne and Dan Coulson.

Twins Get Good Turn From Wheel of Fortune

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The wheel of fortune has taken two heartening turns for Minnesota Twins—and a sickening twist for Cleveland Indians.

Minnesota tied New York Yankees on Rod Carew's home run with two out in the ninth inning Tuesday night and then beat them 6-5 on Jim Holt's two-out home run in 10th.

The Indians bowed to Kansas City Royals 2-0 and also lost pitcher Steve Hargan for at least six weeks with a broken right ankle.

In another American League action, Baltimore Orioles trimmed California Angels 4-1, Boston Red Sox edged Chicago White Sox 4-3, Detroit Tigers nipped Oakland Athletics 6-5 and Milwaukee Brewers blanked Washington Senators 2-0.

Lindy McDaniel came out of the New York bullpen after the Yankees had struck for two runs in the top of the ninth to take a 5-4 lead. The veteran reliever got two quick outs before grooving a 1-2 pitch to Carew, who belted it into left centre field seats for his first homer of the season.

McDaniel retired the first two Minnesota batters in the 10th but Holt, who had entered the game as a late-inning defensive replacement, slammed a 1-0 delivery over the right field fence for his first 1971 homer.

Hargan was hurt after hitting Lou Piniella with a pitch and breaking the Kansas City outfielder's right thumb. Piniella is expected to be out for about three weeks.

Bruce Dal Canton scattered nine hits and received last-out relief help from Ted Abernathy as the Royals handed Hargan his fifth loss in as many decisions.

At Baltimore, Jim Palmer ran his pitching record to 5-0 with a seven-hitter as the Orioles breezed past California. Boog Powell clubbed two home runs to pace the winners' attack.

The victory kept the second-place Orioles one game behind Boston, East Division leaders, who broke a 3-3 tie with the White Sox on Phil Gagliano's bases-loaded single in the seventh. Left fielder Carl Yastrzemski blunted a ninth-inning Chicago threat by nailing first Luis Alvarado at the plate on a single by pinch-hitter Rich McKinney.

Al Kaline drew a two-out walk in the ninth at Detroit, then raced home from first with winning run as Jim Northrup's single to-right went through Reggie Jackson's legs for an error. Jackson had homered earlier for Athletics, who retained a 2½ game lead over California in the West despite the loss.

Rookie Bill Parsons spun a three-hitter as the Brewers extended Washington's losing streak to five games as Johnny Briggs' first AL homer—a two-run shot off Dick Bosman in the Flood Was Broke

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Curt Flood, Washington Senators outfielder, was near bankruptcy despite his annual $118,000 salary, Senators owner Bo Short said Tuesday night.

His creditors "were getting every bit of his salary," Short said. "He was really fouled up financially."

Flood jumped the American League team last week and went to Europe. The veteran had sat out a year of baseball after filing a suit in federal court against baseball's reserve clause.

An early-season starter for the Senators, Flood had been benched for lack of hitting when he left the United States.

A letter Flood left behind said he was leaving the team because of personal problems.

Short said the problems basically were financial. The club owner said he had told Flood the best way out would have been to file for bankruptcy. However, Flood's attorneys dissuaded him.

"If he had claimed bankruptcy, they wouldn't have been able to touch his salary," Short said. "If he claims bankruptcy now, he would be able to straighten himself out."

A source close to the Washington team said Flood was paying alimony, support for his five children, and had lost money in some bad investments.

Cranmer Latest On Argos' List

TORONTO (CP) — Running back Dave Cranmer of Calgary Stampeders was obtained by Toronto Argonauts Tuesday in trade for defensive back Ron Arends and graduating Ray Lancaster, 24-year-old backfielder from Xavier University in Cincinnati.

Cranmer came out of Bowling Green University and played in Ottawa Rough Riders. He and Mike Blum were involved in the trade that sent Lovell Coleman to Ottawa.

Cranmer was Western Conference Rookie of the Year in 1968, but broke a leg the same season. In 1969 he suffered a knee injury. He came back in 1970 and carried 73 times for 328 yards and caught 22 passes for 518 yards and six touchdowns.

Top San Diego Swatters Splitting Hero's Chores

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Diego's top swatters, Nate Colbert and Clarence Gaston, are falling over each other in an attempt to play the hero's role.

Gaston delivered the game-tying home run, his second of the night, and Colbert followed with a solo shot in an eighth-inning rally that carried the Padres past Atlanta Braves 3-2 Tuesday night.

Gaston, whose 29 home runs last year was second to Colbert's 38 on the club, had only delivered two circuit clouts this season until Tuesday's output.

In other NL action, New York Mets nipped Chicago Cubs 2-1, St. Louis Cardinals routed Philadelphia Phillies 7-3, Los Angeles Dodgers stopped Cincinnati Reds 2-1 and Pittsburgh Pirates blasted San Francisco Giants 10-2. Rain postponed Houston Astros at Montreal Expos.

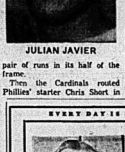
Gaston, who credited last year's fine season to a blazing getaway, is nowhere near the form that delivered a .318 average, 93 runs batted-in and a bunch of team-leading statistics.

He hit his third homer of the year to give San Diego a 1-0 lead in the first inning, then jumped on another Pat Jarvis pitch with one out in the eighth. Then Colbert unloaded his seventh circuit of the year.

Mike Lum slammed a homer in the second inning to give Atlanta a 1-1 tie, then the Braves went ahead on Sonny Jackson's run-scoring single with two out in the seventh.

Bud Harrelson singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning to give New York its third straight victory and eighth in nine games. Until that juncture, the only scoring had been Bob Aspromonte's home run in the New York second and Johnny Callison's run-scoring double in the Chicago fifth.

Jose Cardenal drove in three runs with a double and homer and Jerry Reuss weaved a six-hitter for St. Louis.



The Cardinals scored two runs in the fourth inning on consecutive doubles by Ted Simmons, Joe Torre and Cardenal. Julian Javier's home run made it 3-0 for St. Louis in the fifth, before Philadelphia came back with a pair of runs in its half of the frame.

Then the Cardinals routed Phillies' starter Chris Short in the sixth as Torre walked and Cardenal blasted his second homer of the year.

Al Downing allowed just three hits and pitched his first NL shutout in the Los Angeles cause. Downing, acquired from Milwaukee during the off-season, scattered a pair of singles by Hal McRae and another by Dave Concepcion in notching his third victory in four decisions.

Willie Stargell capped a seven-run eighth inning with a three-run homer, his 12th of the year, as Pittsburgh crushed San Francisco.

The Pirates took a 3-2 lead in the seventh on a run-scoring double by Richie Hebner and run-producing single by Roberto Clemente before the big inning when they sent 10 men to the plate.

Relations Between U.S. and China Said to Be Worsening

WASHINGTON (AP) — A hardening of official tone and attitude appears developing in Washington and Peking despite the goodwill generated during last month's visit of an American table tennis team to mainland China.

Although the visit brought hopes of warmer relations, the only thing heating up now is the rhetoric the two governments are applying to each other.

The New China news agency said Tuesday that state department spokesman Charles Bray used "gangster logic," tampered with history and "turned facts upside down" in saying the legal status of Formosa or Nationalist China is unsettled.

Declaring the Chinese people will never permit the U.S. government to plot a "two-China" or "one-China, one-Taiwan (Formosa)" solution, the agency added in a Peking radio broadcast:

"When and how the Chinese people liberate Taiwan is entirely China's internal affair, and no foreign country whatsoever has any right to interfere."

Among some professional diplomats the word "euphoria" has cropped up to describe the rosy hopes for better U.S.-Chinese relations.

One high policy-maker said: "What we are saying is that we are realistic and not so euphoric as to think we can change their objectives. The assumption we have to go on is that they have not changed their objectives."

Peking jumped on Bray's statement that the United States has treaty commitments for defence of Formosa and the Pescadores Islands.

"This exposes more clearly the vicious intention of the Nixon administration to persist in its hostility toward the Chinese people in a vain attempt to perpetuate the forcible occupation of our territory, Taiwan," said the Peking radio broadcast.

The heated exchanges from both Nationalist and Communist China and the U.S. reaction suggested Washington's adoption of a formula for keeping Formosa in the United Nations while the Peking regime also is seated, will satisfy no one.

Big Companies Using 'Sensitivity Training'

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Come on—say 'Happy birthday, Emily!'"

TORONTO (CP) — Some of the biggest companies in Canada now use psychological "sensitivity training" to help their personnel relate better to one another, but the practice has not gained unanimous approval.

The Aluminum Co. of Canada and Ontario Hydro have both used group sensitivity training for their employees.

Typical sensitivity group activities involve confessing personal problems, being frank with other participants about their merits and faults, and playing psychological games designed to place an individual in unfamiliar social roles.

Alcan introduced some of its personnel to group sensitivity techniques as early as 1959. Don Salmon, personnel manager at the company's head office in Montreal, says it helps management to "really come to grips with a lot more things that are fundamental to the profitability of the company."

Ralph Nicholson, director of manpower development for Ontario Hydro, says "sensitized" executives are better able to liaise in an understanding manner and to get their ideas across effectively.

Experience gained in sensitivity sessions improves communications among management of the utility, he says.

But Hydro has "paused" to reorganize its program and is currently not running any sensitivity groups.

Toronto psychiatrist Dr. Andrew Malcolm says personnel departments of large companies have "jumped on to the organization development thing" because they have "suffered a very great feeling of irrelevance for some time."

He says he knows of companies in which the personnel department "has embraced group sensitivity to the point where they now hire only "people they feel are warm and friendly."

He adds: "I think this is a pretty bad thing."

Alcan runs week-long and weekend sensitivity sessions, says Mr. Salmon, for "everyone from the president of the organization right down to the foremen."

"If people are more aware and open, they're much more able to identify real problems, things that are wrong in the company" he says.

Dr. Malcolm has several reservations about sensitivity training programs in business.

Troubled people may be urged to drop carefully-maintained defence mechanisms which could lead to severe emotional or mental problems.

He says people who run group sessions are often untrained in psychology or mental health and are unable to spot individuals who are getting into emotional difficulty.

Sessions which include direct superiors, subordinates and co-workers could be dangerous, Dr. Malcolm says it is impossible to ensure that anything said at a session will remain confidential.

Participants are highly suggestible, he says, and the sessions can be "basically authoritarian" devices by which conformity is nurtured.

University Students on Welfare

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Welfare costs are sky-rocketing in Western Ontario with a new twist—university students seeking benefits.

"That's all we seem to be doing," said Phil Johnston, welfare administrator for Waterloo. "We are handling nothing but applications from them."

Waterloo had 214 persons on welfare in March and issued $20,000 in benefits, compared to 121 persons and $10,000 in March 1970.

Mr. Johnston said so far 30 university under-graduates and a few graduates have successfully applied for welfare.

Ontario municipalities forked out $5.5 million in welfare benefits last February—a 28 per cent increase over Feb. 1970.

A provincial department of family and social services' survey shows 109,946 persons on welfare last February, a 49 per cent increase over Feb. 1970.

London, Ont., has budgeted $1,800,000 for 1971 welfare.

Direct welfare benefits paid out this past February totalled $302,452, compared to $178,540 for February, 1970. In February this year, there were 5,256 on welfare rolls. There were 3,254 in Feb. 1970, a 49 per cent increase.

Davis Says Ottawa Tries To Trim Ontario's Sails

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis makes his national debut at next month's constitutional conference in Victoria with plans to grab the cigar by the tail—federal government fiscal policies.

In an interview with the Canadian Press after completing his first two months as Ontario's 18th premier, the Progressive Conservative leader echoed his administration's growing impatience with the Trudeau government's handling of economic matters.

Mr. Davis said Ottawa has implemented policies deliberately aimed at taking the wind out of Ontario's economic sails and he wants an accounting from Prime Minister Trudeau at the June 14-16 federal-provincial conference.

"We're in a bind and we feel that this has to be a matter of very real priority," said the 41-year-old successor to John Robarts, citing a $415 million deficit in the province's 1971-72 budget.

"We don't want budgets with $415 million deficits. This can't continue . . . certainly not over a prolonged period of time."

Mr. Davis asked Prime Minister Trudeau in writing to include fiscal policy in the agenda for the Victoria conference, called primarily to deal with repatriation of the British North America Act and methods of amending it.

The new premier also bluntly declared he would like the premiers and the prime minister to get into specifics about the impact of federal policies on provincial economies.

To many observers, this kind of talk indicates that Mr. Davis has strayed from the mediator's role that Mr. Robarts carved out at conferences during the last four years of his administration.

While cautiously critical of Ottawa's economic policies, Mr. Roberts concentrated on smoothing feathers ruffled during discussions on such other questions as language rights among the federal government, Quebec and the rest of the provinces.

In the process Mr. Robarts earned the respect and gratitude of all concerned. Mr. Davis insists he'll continue down the Robarts path in June, but the attacks on monetary and tax matters emanating from Queen's Park are getting longer and louder.

In the background looms the possibility of a provincial election this spring or fall, though Mr. Davis could theoretically wait until next year to seek a new mandate.

Saddled with a huge deficit, a jumbled tangle of policy differences with Ottawa, massive unemployment and an uncertain image with the electorate, Mr. Davis said he simply hasn't made up his mind whether there'll be an election this year or not.

His performance at the constitutional conference could tell the tale. At stake is 28 years of uninterrupted Conservative government in Ontario under five premiers.

Q. When do you plan to call a provincial election?

A. The government has until the fall of 1972 and we have a number of things to do yet. I can't really predict accurately when the election will be. Quite frankly, I haven't come to any conclusions.

Q. In his budget speech, Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough said Ontario will have to reassess its role in the Canadian federation. What is Ontario thinking of reassessing?

A. This is really not a new posture—it's related to our fiscal and financial situation. Certain changes must be made, there must be some reconsideration. Provincial jurisdictions have growing responsibilities such as health, education and social services.

The treasurer in very specific terms pointed out some of the options. It would be logical to have the federal government allow us greater room or flexibility in the income tax area and cost-sharing agreements.

We're in a bind and we feel that this has to be a matter of very real priority. I have asked the prime minister that room be made on the agenda of the conference in June for consideration of economic matters as well as constitutional matters.

Whether or not there will be some input on economic issues will depend on the federal government—whether it gives some indication on its position on tax reform, whether there will be a further white paper on taxes. If this doesn't develop before the conference, it is my hope we can engage the federal government in discussions on the results of some of these policies and the serious problems of unemployment and the economic situation.

Q. How serious is the dispute between the provinces and the federal government on tax reform?

A. I'm not going to be put into the position of developing a confrontation with Ottawa, though I think any provincial prime minister has the responsibility to put forward his point of view.

I think it is very important that people recognize that the question of tax reform has to be one of the really major priorities. Take a look at the provincial budget—a substantial deficit. There is no question that some of the financial measures of a national character in the past year have reduced Ontario's economic growth. The percentage figures indicate that Ontario has felt the effect more than some of our sister provinces, and, this is what we say is fundamentally wrong.

We say that the economic strength of Ontario is very important to all of Canada. We don't want budgets with $415 million deficits. This can't continue, certainly not over a prolonged period of time.

Q. Are you planning to follow Mr. Robarts in backing these constitutional conferences?

A. The position of Ontario in respect to the federal-provincial conferences and the matter of the constitution will continue. At the same time I have been in the process of assessing what Ontario's position may be on two or three specific areas, and still am. But as a matter of general principle, there will be no change.

I have to satisfy myself and look at two or three of these things in the light of today's situation. We're anxious to have the matter of constitutional reform moved ahead.

The last symphony orchestra to perform in Belleville was the Kingston symphony orchestra which played at Centennial Secondary School in March 1969.

Tickets are available at Dorothy Clarke's stationery shop and cost $3.50 and $2.50 each. Students and senior citizens may buy them at half price. All seats will be reserved for the concert which will begin at 8.30 p.m.

Stirling

Malcom McMullen was given a birthday party on Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Brownson of Foxboro. His daughters Muriel Mergan of Port Hope and Shirley Carlisle of Stirling provided a specially decoraged birthday cake.

Children Fragile, Handle with Care

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: You don't actually have to be a child-beater to harm your child. I've told this in a friend of mine, yet she still mauls her children innocently as though they were rag dolls.

I wish you'd warn parents to be more careful when they handle their children. I've heard of one little fellow who got a fractured elbow when his 240-pound father yanked his arm while they were engaging in horseplay. — Mrs. H.

• • •

COMMENT: It's true, Mrs. H. Many an injury to a child is the result of carelessness on the part of the parent. I cross my fingers when I see some fathers throw a child into the air and catch him as though he were a football, or "tackle" a 40-pound youngster harder than they should, or spank a little fellow so hard that a misplaced blow might easily injure the child's spine.

Mind you, I am not recommending that fathers bring up their sons like sissies. Simply, that they use ordinary good sense and caution when here is a "physical interchange" between little fellow and big fellow.

Mothers, too, can injure a child innocently. You see some walk along the street with a youngster and suddenly and forcibly yank the child's arm, sometimes it is true to avoid danger from a passing car. More often, I see them being unnecessarily rough in lifting the little one on to the curb, or up steps or on to a porch.

The result: in many cases what is commonly called a "pulled elbow" which may mean an actual dislocation that requires orthopedic care. This is often overlooked and treated as an ordinary sprain.

Stop jerking your child's arm. He isn't a raggedy doll.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In response to Mr. B's letter regarding his apprehension towards the myelogram test, I would like to tell him of my personal experience and maybe put his mind at ease.

About one year ago, I was afflicted with a ruptured disc in my lower back. I experienced the same pain and discomfort as he describes in his letter. I also had to decide between a myelogram test and the ensuing surgery — or taking extended traction treatment.

I decided in favor of having the myelogram and I was glad I did. The pain I encountered from the myelogram test was about one-tenth as severe as the pain in my leg. The after-effects I experienced consisted of a short headache which was quite mild. I found also that the surgery and recovery period were less painful than the myelogram.

I followed my doctor's advice before and after surgery and thus achieved full recovery. I realize that every case is different, but I feel that Mr. B. is suffering needlessly. — Mr. N.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I may not have a problem but I would rather be safe than sorry. Is it possible for a 14-year-old girl to have real trouble from a lump in the breast? I've noticed a small lump for weeks but am too embarrassed to talk to my doctor or parents. What should I do? (Too embarrassed to sign.)

COMMENT: You may not have a problem since the lump may well be harmless, but you have provided the answer yourself by saying, "I would rather be safe than sorry." Tell your parents today and, if possible, see your doctor tomorrow.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Phone Now Way of Life

My 15-year-old boy and some of his friends were fooling around with our telephone extension in the basement, and he came up to report to me breathlessly that he suspected our phone was "bugged."

"Is that so?" I said, and continued my reading of the latest Dick Francis mystery. He was puzzled, and a little annoyed, at my apathetic response. I didn't bother to enlighten him.

I could wish no worse fate on television viewers than a stakeout on my home phone. It would drive them out of their minds in less than a week. Just transcribing the junk that passes along our wire in one evening would paralyze the hand and brain of any investigator.

With four children of school age still living at home (more or less), our communications system resembles the switchboard of an insane asylum that is run by the inmates. Like Pavlov's dogs, I am conditioned to the ringing of a bell; when it goes off, I don't salivate, I just prick my ears and pretend I entered a Benedictine monastary years ago.

Half the time, the kids are busy doing their homework collectively over the phone. The rest of the time, they are gossiping, making plans, playing tricks, returning cryptic calls, and relaying messages to half their class. Without "Call Pack," I'd go broke in 30 days.

My 13-year-old daughter the other day remarked that she couldn't understand how people ever got along without phones. When I told her that we didn't have one when I was a little boy, she looked at me as if both my legs had been amputated at birth. "But how did you keep in touch with your friends?" she exclaimed incredulously.

I tried to explain to her an old-fashioned function called "walking," but she couldn't seem to grasp the elements of it. "When I wanted to see a friend," I walked over to his house, or if it was far, I rode a bike," I said. She looked at me as if I were a member of a species from some distant galaxy.

And when we finally did get a phone, it was the coin variety, where a nickel had to be sent down the slot for every call. Since I had to use my own nickels for personal calls, and the nickel was an exceedingly large unit of currency in the 1920s, you can bet I didn't make more than one call a week, if that.

Nowadays, children are born with telephone wires extruding from their navels. They imagine the phone is a part of nature, like air, water, and allowances. Life is not complete unless you are hooked on the floor, doing your homework, with a TV on, a transistor blaring, a phone glued to your ear, and three other kids screaming for the line. Whoever may be hogging my phone deserves all the combat pay he can get.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For May 6

Your birthday today: Whatever creative talents you possess emerge and lead your program during the year ahead. There's a choice between bad habits and new approaches at an unexpected moment, and you will have little or no time to ponder what to do. Today's natives work more effectively under pressure. Often their careers are complicated by difficulty in bringing their work to popular attention.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The morning hours are for last minute plans; afternoon and evening for hard work making them come true. Before retiring give thoughtful reflection on your day's results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Do your best with complexities and the responsibilities you carry. Square matters away as nicely as you can manage. Moderation in all things lets you have your cake and eat it, too.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Gather wisdom while you may — this is a great day for it, to be approached in high good humor and an open mind.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Responsibility comes your way, largely because some time ago you indicated a will to carry it. Success in the matter builds strongly for a greater future.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your pride and perhaps jealousy or vanity could lead you into errors than you can cope with over the long run. Pause, give your intuition a chance to show an alternative course.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Get started early to clear off all the neglected, belated details. There are correspondence, deals to make, ideas to follow up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): It's an extraordinarily good day courageously should arrive, in proportion to what you have been presenting and praying for others. Don't let anything disturb your schedule for getting critical bits of work done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Events tend to move in an air of tension, excitement. Make full use of it to expedite your own serious plans, both personal and vocational.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): It may seem that everybody is up to mischievous behavior with impunity. Don't join the circus, as this is one time you cannot really get away with anything out of the ordinary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Bring all your resources to bear; involve as many concerned people as you can. Their opinions may not be very helpful immediately, but later their story will be most welcome on your record.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Do what you can do for your regular work, but indulge that impulse to seek and cultivate emotional expression, perhaps romantic interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your independence in a range of subtle details makes this day a success. Explain little to anybody; simply cut loose and follow your intuition.

Children's Ads Probed

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Advertising Advisory Board has commissioned a preliminary study to assess the effects on its audience of television commercials aimed at children.

Robert Oliver, board president, said in an interview Tuesday the study will investigate such questions as whether this advertising creates unhealthy pressures for children or pressures with which parents cannot cope.

Special Committee Will Review Regional Rule

TORONTO (CP) — A special study committee will be set up to review regional governments, Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales of Ontario said Tuesday.

He made the announcement in an interview after meeting a delegation from St. Catharines City council, which has voted to opt out of the Niagara regional government.

Mayor Mackenzie Chown said the meeting did not change his mind on the question of seceding but noted that the Niagara regional government will be among the first to be examined by the committee.

"Our official position is still to opt out," he said after the two-hour closed meeting with Mr. Bales and Education Minister Robert Welch. "We wanted to see some results."

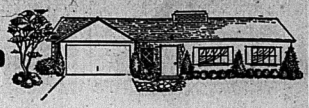
Ald. Jim Bradley said the tone of the meeting "was not friendly." It was very rigid in the beginning."

He said Premier William Davis, who addressed the meeting before St. Catharines' complaints were aired, told the council that any solutions would have to come within the limits of government policy.

"There was no strong indication that the department (of municipal affairs) recognizes the fundamentals of the problem," added Ald. Stewart Willmot.

In his opening statement to the meeting, Mayor Chown said regional government has imposed "serious inequities and increased costs on our city."

He said the government ignored St. Catharines' brief on regional government and when the city asked to meet Premier Davis and present its brief the council "was dismayed by his reply which was to advise us that he was too busy to grant our request."



Two of the city's main complaints are the costs of transitional payments it must make to smaller municipalities in the region and the fact that St. Catharines, with 23 per cent of the area's population, has only 21 per cent of the representation on the regional council.

No Hope for Any In Debris in Pit

Precarious Perch

A car totters on the brink of a 100-foot deep hole at St. Jean Vianney, a Chicoutimi suburb, after a massive earth-cave-in demolished an estimated 35 homes and caused the deaths of some 30 people. St. Jean Vianney is about 115 miles north of Quebec City.

Five Bodies Found

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que. (CP) — Floating debris was searched for the dead today — there was no hope for the missing — as workmen tried to prevent spread of the landslide that swallowed 31 persons Tuesday night.

Five bodies had been recovered.

Twenty-six persons were missing as a result of the slide in this community near the junction of Riviere aux Vases and the Saguenay River 115 miles northeast of Quebec City.

More than 30 houses slid to oblivion with the mucky landslide about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday. By today, 44 had been engulfed.

Efforts were being made to halt the devastation by keeping more water from reaching the soft clay that underlay the stricken subdivision. Fire hoses were used to divert water from a storm sewer soaking the clay and send it directly into Riviere aux Vases, where the bodies were found downstream from the disaster area.

Search operations were centred at the confluence of the Riviere aux Vases and the Saguenay.

Rescue workers gave up hope Wednesday of finding anyone alive in the debris of smashed houses at the bottom of the earth-slide pit, which covers 300,000 square yards and was estimated to be a quarter-mile long, 700 feet wide and from 100 to 200 feet deep.

The clay at the bottom of the gorge was like quicksand—one

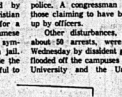
Washington Demonstrators Plan Their Last Battle

WASHINGTON (CP) — Already taxed by 12,000 arrests this week, anti-war protesters today turned toward the South Vietnamese embassy and the city jail in their last effort before leaving the capital's troop-guarded streets in "tactical retreat."

Today's plans, formulated by Mayday and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference called for a rally in front of the Viet Namese embassy, and then a 20-block symbolic march to the city's main jail. The first event may have made the second unnecessary. It is unlawful to demonstrate near an embassy, and organizers had no permit for the march.

Some 1,180 of the protesters were jailed in a peaceful but militant rally which closed the Capitol Wednesday afternoon and sparked renewed public debate over tactics employed by police. A congressman was among those claiming to have been roughed up by officers.



Other disturbances, resulting in about 50 arrests, were waged late Wednesday by dissident groups which flooded off the campuses of American University and the University of Maryland to block homebound traffic on two key roadways.

Although some 3,000 persons participated in the Capitol demonstration and some 5,000 were involved in the nearby Maryland activity, it appeared that the protest forces were steadily diminishing from their strength of perhaps 20,000 earlier in the week.

Organizers sought space on a nearby farm or park to regroup and rest the fatigued and hungry protesters, who have been split into small groups throughout the city since their eviction from a Washington campsite last Sunday.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Showers and isolated thundershowers will be confined to southwestern Ontario today as a cool and dry air mass begins to force the warm air southward. Friday will be mostly sunny in all areas of the province. Daytime temperatures will be near normal for this time of year with maximum temperatures near the 60 degree mark.

"Some plumbing?"

News Briefs

EDMONTON (CP) — The future of southern Alberta's vegetable canning and freezing industry is clouded and the province is trying to help producers find alternative income. The Process Vegetable Growers' Association membership has dropped to about 130 growers compared with 400 eight years ago.

LONDON (CP) — The U.S. dollar gained strength on the open market in West Germany today amid rumors that the Bonn government would not decide whether to increase the value of the West German mark until after a meeting of Common Market finance and economic ministers Saturday.

The West German economics ministry confirmed the rumor shortly before noon. But already on the strength of the rumors the U.S. dollar had risen to 3.59-3.61 marks on the open market after opening at 3.56. The official floor price is 3.63.

The West German cabinet is meeting in Bonn Friday to discuss the mounting pressure for an upward revaluation of the mark. But a decision then was put off by the scheduling of the Common Market meeting Saturday in Brussels.

At it the ministers of six nations—West Germany, France, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg—will seek to work out a cohesive policy to follow in this first major international monetary crisis since the mark was last revalued in September, 1969.

A German government spokesman said a special cabinet meeting would be held after Saturday's session to decide on international and domestic measures.

Despite the delay, there was general expectation that the mark would be revalued and that the Swiss franc, the Dutch guilder and possibly other currencies would follow it upward in terms of the dollar.

The U.S. dollar also strengthened on Italian exchanges. But dealers in London attributed this to buying by speculators trying to deliver the dolars they had been selling to German banks for marks.

The flight from the U.S. dollar spread to the Far East today but the situation there was not serious. In Tokyo, the Bank of Japan bought about $350 million but only about $100 million came from selling by customers. The rest came from commercial banks reducing dollar balances.

Foreign exchange dealers said the market was calm, despite the record volume, mainly because the Bank of Japan was the only buyer. The rate was 357.20 yen, compared with the official minimum of 356.40.

Dollar Strengthens

West Germans to Avoid Euromart View on Mark

What's Happening And Why

WASHINGTON (A P) — These are whats and whys of the European dollar crisis:

What has happened?

Government banks in most Western European countries have temporarily stopped paying out European money in exchange for United States dollars.

Why the suspension?

Speculators are flooding the banks with dollars, seeking to exchange them for West German marks or, in some cases, other European currencies.

Why do they want marks?

There is widespread belief that West Germany will increase the value of the mark as an anti-inflation measure. Major West German research institutes have so recommended, and unofficial reports have circulated the government might cut the mark loose from its present value of 27 U.S. cents and let it "float" to a new level of parity with the dollar.

What would happen then?

Presumably the value of the mark would wind up slightly higher in terms of dollars. The speculators who had swapped dollars for marks would make a profit.

Why are U.S. dollars less valuable in Europe?

There are more dollars in Europe than Europeans need, because of United States spending in the Vietnam war, its increase in imports and the U.S. inflation which has discouraged European demand for U.S. goods.

What happens if the mark is revalued upward?

An increase in value of the mark—and of other European currencies—would in effect lower the cost of U.S. goods in Europe and increase the cost of European goods in the U.S. That would tend to increase U.S. exports, reduce imports.

Drizzle Dampens Royal Tour

PENTICTON, B.C. (CP) — A drizzly, hectic day of touring in the interior of British Columbia came to a close Wednesday night with the presentation to Queen Elizabeth of an Indian peace pipe.

The presentation, as the Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne prepared to spend the only night of their 10-day British Columbia centennial tour away from the royal yacht Britannia, was made by George Lezard and his wife, of the Okanagan Indian band.

Frost and Robarts Knew Proper Role In Confederation

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

NAPANEE — Political confrontations have no place in Confederation. What is needed is the maintenance of strong, independent stands based on a co - operative understanding of what Confederation represents, Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon told members of the Prince Edward - Lennox Liberal Association last night. He said he is concerned with Ontario's stance in Confederation. The province must maintain the position of "the keel, the balance wheel, if Canadian unity is to be preserved."

Mr. Nixon was speaking at the Liberal Association's nomination meeting held at Prince Charles School, Napanee.

He noted that he has not always championed former premier Leslie Frost as "the greatest politician there ever was," but added that Frost was capable as leader of the government of dealing with Louis St. Laurent and John Diefenbaker in his visits to Ottawa.

"It didn't matter what the politics of those men in Ottawa were compared to the politics of the government of Ontario, because Leslie Frost had the concept essential to Confederation," said Mr. Nixon.

Mr. Frost understood the government of Ontario deals with the government of Canada, and did not feel it was the Conservatives of Ontario who dealt with the Liberals or Conservatives at the national level.

"When you talk to your neighbors and say "We can't have Liberals in Toronto, we've got Liberals in Ottawa, this should be rejected as the most irresponsible approach to democracy," insisted Mr. Nixon. He criticized Ontario treasurer D'arcy McKeough and his predecessor, Charles McNaughton for dealing with the government of Canada on a basis of political confrontation. This has escalated in the last few days as Mr. McKeough, in his new capacity as treasurer, has thrown down the gauntlet to the Canadian government and said unless more money is received from Ottawa substantial obstacles are foreseen lying in the way to further substantial changes in the development of our constitutional relationships, stated Mr. Nixon.

"Can you imagine Leslie Frost or John Robarts saying that?"

He emphasized that former premier Robarts could usually "get around all the political flak" associated with some of his supporters in the cabinet and still maintain Ontario's position as a balance wheel in Confederation.

Photographers of the Future

Ronnie Begley, Grade four student at Sir Winston Churchill School, discovered he needs a few more years' growth to realize his ambition to become a photographer. Standing on a hightstool in The Intelligencer darkroom, Ron adjusts the enlarger as his fellow members of a photo interest group take notes. Their teacher, John Smith is at the rear, wearing glasses.

Belleville Makes Its Mark

After 92 flat tires and 58,000 miles, two young Chileans arrive at Belleville to be hosted by the Fire Department and the Kinsmen Club. R. Schmidlin and A. Betancourt have travelled from their home in Chile to find a place in Canada where they would like to live. Moe Huddleston was asked by the Fire Department to autograph the car Good Luck, Belleville, as a sign of the city's well wishes for the twosome.

Chileans Like It Here

Fifty-eight thousand miles later the 1929 Dodge is still going strong.

Two young Chileans, R. Schmidlin and A. Betancourt left their South American home in 1967 to follow a trail that would lead them through Central America, Mexico, California, across the central states, through the maritimes of Canada, Quebec and here to Belleville.

They have been shot at by Colombian guerrillas (the car has the bullet holes to prove it), feted by fire departments in each country they entered and have acquired enough souvenir stickers to virtually cover the car.

And to do all of this said one of the young men, "We only had 92 flat tires".

The boys plan to stay in Canada once they find a place that they like and by the time they reach Alaska this summer they will have seen all that Canada has to offer.

Representatives of the Belleville fire department say that the International Firefighters Association has pretty well adopted the two boys and before they leave some time later today, their car will be filled with gas and a sign will be painted on the car commemorating their visit to the city.

Co-foster parents of the boys is the Kinsmen Club who gave lodging to the two last night and took them for an evening on the town.

Mayor Russell Scott spoke with the boys last night, offering best wishes and safety on their journey.

Throughout the trip, said one of the youths, there was only one accident involving a transport trailer in the U. S. A.

The rear end collision was not serious and they carried on after minor repairs.

The couple is leaving for Kingston later today where their car will be on display for the general public.

One of the Belleville firefighters said this was not the way to Alaska but "I don't think that the boys are in any rush to finish their journey."

With one spare tire, slightly bald, luggage strapped to every available space on the car, and a full tank of gas, the two Chileans leave tonight, to continue their search of Canada.

Nixon

Mr. Nixon said that if the Queen's Park become deeply involved in political socialism, real provincial issues may be given second place.

The speaker attributed the downfall following the 1930s to failure of the province to co-operate in a viable way with the government of Canada. "Certainly, I know the traditions, the history of politics and Confederation demands Ontario accept an independent but responsible role in substantially supporting Confederation, the unity of our nation and the strengthening of Ontario," remarked Mr. Nixon.

He jeered at William Davis' efforts to establish "a new government". He said that Premier Davis used "the New Wave" as his theme at the leadership convention and a bit later did four cabinet ministers.

"Characteristic of the Davis way, the four he got rid of were replaced by seven new ones. The cabinet is now the largest it has been at any time since Confederation," declared Mr. Nixon.

The speaker said this year's deficit is the largest since Confederation and added that problems in rural areas and Metropolitan Toronto also are at their all time high since 1867.

Mr. Nixon said he considers additional assistance for old age pensioners a federal responsibility and mused as that of any other level of government. It was his observation that the present problem of unemployment indicates that federal policies are not acting as they might to expand the economy.

"But don't forget, in Ontario the government spends 44.36 billion. It decides on the development roles, on the programs to establish new industries and surely it is irresponsible for anyone at the provincial level to say there is nothing we can do about it," challenged the Liberal leader.

Two Break-ins Overnight

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Conkwright, 380 Bleecker Avenue, was entered through the rear door last night. The broken latch was found on the basement steps.

Missing are an $80 transistor radio and $100 in cash, including 10 Centennial dollar bills, with the 1867-1967 inscription instead of serial numbers, and three silver dollars.

Nothing was reported missing from the coin laundry in the Belleville Plaza and damage was restricted to the door.

Steer Still Astray

At last word this morning, "we're not really putting too much effort into capturing 800 pounds of walking hamburger."

Ken Manson, co-owner of the Belleville Livestock Yards from which the two-year-old steer escaped Tuesday afternoon, said "as long as people keep chasing after it, the police, Humane Society and interested persons . . . it'll keep running. If they leave it alone, it'll get among other cattle and we'll be able to pick it up."

The steer escaped from the North Front Street yards, swam the Moira River, and ran along Station Street to the CN Express Yards, where 4 fruitless chase was undertaken.

Police, Humane Society officers and stockmen have all but given up the chase. When last seen the black and white steer was tall high, running east, away from the city.

Boy's Body Recovered

The body of 11-year-old Brian Tait Carter was recovered from the Bay of Quinte on the northeast shore of Cow Island at 1:15 p.m. yesterday, less than 15 hours after a coroner's jury attached no blame for his drowning death April 6.

Two men, George Truman, 182 Pine Street, and Blake Cook, 197 Pine Street, discovered the body, the subject of an intensive underwater search by police and civilian skindivers, after it washed ashore on the island directly in line with the government docks.

The Corbyville boy drowned April 6 when he and a friend, Lorne Johnston, 11, also of Corbyville, left their school to dispose of two dead dogs. Both boys fell into the Moira River at Camilton, but only the Johnston boy was close enough to shore to be reached by rescuer Roy Pound.

Identification of the body was made by a neighbor, Wilbert Webster after recovery by OPP Constable Garnett Brown and diver Stu Meeks. Coroner Dr. William Hipwell was present for the identification.

Dr. Potter:

Training of All Medical Personnel Should Be Integrated

The training of all medical personnel should be placed under the department of education, says the Hon. Dr. R. F. Potter, MPP for Quinte riding and minister without portfolio in the Ontario government.

He includes doctors, dentists, nurses, technicians and all those in the paramedical field in his remarks today to the Ontario Welfare Council's 1971 conference at York University.

"Much greater emphasis must be placed on the training of auxiliary personnel in preventive physicians and dentists alike of the tremendous burden they are now carrying," he said.

Dr. Potter's long-time concern for a total health care program was the theme of his speech. He called for integration of all areas of the departments of health and social services to "cut red tape and provide speedy development of the program as efficiently and economically as possible".

It is imperative that pilot projects in total health care be started immediately, preferably in two or three areas of the province, the minister said.

"Far too often we find branches of one department operating quite independently and very jealously of other branches — a condition which must not be allowed to continue," said Dr. Potter. "We have much duplication of services. This in itself is sufficient reason for integrating health and social services.

"For instance, we have several types of accommodation for the aged, depending on their individual physical and mental status. First, we have the senior citizen's unit, where small self - contained apartments are provided for the geared - to - income basis and administered by the Ontario Housing Corporation. These are now being expanded to include wings for the medically infirm which would be administered by the Department of Social and Family Services.

"A similar situation occurs with the nursing home program, administered by the Department of Health. But if a patient is unable to provide financially for his own care in a nursing home, he must seek assistance from the Department of Social and Family Services.

Dr. Potter reminded his audience that OHSIP and OHSC are to be integrated in a few months time.

"I suggest once again that we should do away with premium complexity, and have the program paid for by a surtax on our present income tax," he said.

Cost of instituting a total health care program would be "tremendous" and there is no way it could be launched at one fell swoop," said the minister.

He suggested implementation on a five-year plan basis, with various phases of the program having priority.

"In the process of working out such a project, we must consider how to make the most effective use of all medical and paramedical personnel," he said. "We must also consider how to provide a sufficient number of facilities to meet specific needs at all times."

Community health centres must be established to provide assistance on a 24-hour-a-day basis, added Dr. Potter, and he called for setting up of pilot projects in this field.

Drugs, dressings, dental care, mechanical appliances for crippled limbs must be included in a comprehensive health care program.

But the number of doctors is totally inadequate to provide for the health needs of the province, said the minister. For this reason, the department of education should oversee all medical training. "I see no reason other than doctors must be trained to take over motor pronouncements now controlled by guerdon" by doctors.

Nurses could be used to greater advantage, given further training to equip them to staff outpost medical centres. In Dr. Potter's opinion there are now spending "far too much time" on medical administration rather than nursing care.

Lack of facilities in many isolated and remote areas of the province was noted by the minister. There are valid reasons why doctors cannot be expected to settle in these areas, and qualified medical assistance will have to be trained to take over these outposts.

Barry Young Chosen Liberal Candidate

NAPANEE (Staff) — Napanee lawyer Barry Young last night trounced two opponents by a wide majority vote to become the Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association's candidate for the next provincial election.

A member of the law firm of Madden, Young and Nayasmith, the 31-year-old Liberal party newcomer defeated contenders Allan Ralley and Dan Nielsen, both of Prince Edward County, 257 votes to 124 to sweep the election winning 196 votes cast among 226 poll delegates who rallied at Prince Charles School, Napanee, for a nomination meeting.

Prince Edward Collegiate Institute geography teacher Allan Ralley received 11 votes while Dan Nielsen, an Athol township farmer won 29 ballots. Last night marked Mr. Neilsen's second unsuccessful bid for the Liberal candidacy.

Picton lawyer William Lane declined a nomination from the floor during the meeting which packed the school auditorium with delegates and visitors. The winning candidate, Barry Young, was nominated by Mrs. William (Doris) Lane, president of the Picton Liberal Association. The nomination was seconded by Ernestown delegate Ken Casey.

Guest speaker for the meeting, Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon, predicted Mr. Young's nomination could lead to "one of the biggest battles we have ever experienced and a victory for the Liberal party."

His optimism was reflected earlier in Mr. Young's address to Liberal delegates before ballots were cast. "I want you to choose me as the Liberal candidate in the next provincial election so I can be part of the team that helps put this province to replace the Davis government," he stated.

Mr. Young claimed that Liberal party policies would sound "like a breath of fresh air in a pretty stifling province at this stage." If Robert Nixon becomes premier of Ontario, he charged that the present Ontario government has basked in provincial support for nearly three decades, and now considers this support "automatic".

Mr. Young warned "It is my firm belief that the government of Ontario has started to ignore the people. Its policies and its programs do not reach the heart of the matter. On the surface there is concern, but inside the government where it counts, I don't think it's there."

He accused the Conservatives of offering "a patchwork of promises designed to shut us up" in the areas of tax reform, education and local government. "We seek assistance in local planning and in local government, and we get the promise or the hope or the threat of a system of government that really does not solve the situation but is just a bit further away from the people. We seek tax reform and end up getting a rebate system," he remarked.

Mr. Young examined education policies and suggested that there is an attitude of "change for change's sake. Start dealing with education and ask for reform and you will get a system but it's a system that is a quick program earmarked by financial abuse," he said.

He criticized a recent investigation of education spending because Premier William Davis appointed a former deputy-minister of education to the job. "His appointee, as investigator, the man who helped to put this whole plan into effect," charged Mr. Young.

He commented the Liberal party has had a "tough row to hoe" in this riding but said he refuses to accept the fact that the situation cannot be reversed. Mr. Young feels the party's strength locally could lie among the 50 per cent of eligible voters who did not go to the polls in the last election. "If we can get to those people we can win," said the candidate, who has

Liberals Are Against Provincial Tariffs

NAPANEE (Staff) — A farm bill, allegedly designed to provide "short run assistance" for Ontario broiler producers was opposed by the Liberal party as "a very serious step" in a war which has developed among the provinces as they try to protect Ontario markets from products coming in from other provinces and tending to downgrade prices.

Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon said Bill 19 was opposed because the government of Canada, realizing it is a national problem and not a provincial one, has introduced federal legislation now before the House of Commons for the third reading.

He predicted passage of this bill would provide the best means of solving the problem.

"Instead of that, our minister moved forward with this legislation which contributes to the balkanizing of Canada," remarked Mr. Nixon.

He added that Quebec rejected immediately by saying if Ontario refuses their broilers they, in turn, would refuse Ontario's agricultural produce. A bill to restrict importation from Ontario into Quebec is now before the Quebec National Assembly.

"I don't believe this so-called chicken and egg war should be waged among the provinces. It is the responsibility of the government of Canada and Canada's minister of agriculture to control these important matters that have such effect on us all because Ontario has a net trade surplus of $1.5-billion, not white bread, but with other provinces of Canada," he declared.

"If we are going to move from historic Conservative tradition in building trade barriers, not around Canada, but around our own province, in the long run surely it will hurt the farmers and the broiler producers as well and it will hurt the whole economy of the province," he said.

The speaker added it might be fine for Prince Edward Island or Saskatchewan to react in this particular way but for Ontario to base its cool and pass this ultimately restrictive legislation, it's simply going to escalate the war right across Canada to the point where it may be completely out of control and even the federal bill will not be able to move in to improve the situation.

"We voted against the bill, we were not prepared to sit back while that kind of legislation came forth for short term advantage," asserted Mr. Nixon.

Nixon Opposes Salary Ceiling

NAPANEE (Staff) — Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon last night rapped provincial treasurer Darcy McKeough's recent announcement of a five per cent ceiling on pay raises for civil servants and said it was greeted with "some shock" by Liberal party members.

We have said those working for the civil service in Ontario have no legal right to strike and negotiations between the government and the civil service must be settled by compulsory arbitration with the arbitrator appointed by the Civil Service Association on one side and the government on the other," explained Mr. Nixon.

He noted many public servants earn good salaries but remarked that others, for example, janitors, receive about $4,200 annually. A five per cent ceiling would give them a raise of approximately $215 per year and their salaries would remain "far below the poverty levels."

Looking Around

This is a tale of three cities, or more specifically the park and waterfront areas of three cities visited in recent days.

It was cold enough down on the waterfront in Kingston Saturday as a late afternoon ferry arrived from Wolfe Island. A long line of cars was waiting, including a few early Spring visitors returning to the United States. But the day was uninviting enough. A young couple walked around the fountains and a mother and her little boy sat nearby watching the spiralling waters. A group of children played tag on the lawn. Thoughts turned to a sunnier day a few years ago when the royal yacht, now in Pacific waters, lay at anchor off Confederation Park on the main street earlier it had been busy as usual, with shoppers (we encountered several from Belleville), and what appears to be, for Kingston, growing numbers of roughly-garbed and bewhiskered youngsters with nothing in particular to do.

The scene shifts to Cobourg on Monday. Along the way, on grassy banks on Highway 401 there remain, incredibly, stubborn ribbons of snow. Time for some shopping ,then a look at the beach. It is not California, or Florida, and there is not even a sign of the lotus-eating youngsters The Globe and Mail spoke of in a recent series getting quietly stoned in the sun. The lake is grey and forbidding, the trees flanking the beach tangled ghosts from some alien realm. But the area has life. Teenagers get high — on the swings — and a father introduces his two small offspring to the sticks. Over in the park there is a group of ball-playing stalwarts, projecting the missile with swift underarm action, bodies relaxing in that sporty, languid way of men who Walter Mitty fashion, imagine themselves for a moment in the big time . . . bats swing in response, and of course it is just the local park and it is fun anyway. Down on the water's edge a man is exercising a magnificent Great Dane and you can see the animal is a show dog, for now and again its owner stops for a brief word about posture, setting of elegant legs and angle of proud head.

Back to Belleville the skies have been leaden too, but at Zwick's Island there has been some activity, with city workers cleaning up around the water's edge, picking up trash, and generally tidying up. And uninviting as the skies have been there was a couple playing tennis Saturday morning and, as in Cobourg, slow dog owners were doing their thing on the lawn over there by the train Monday evening.

The moral, if there is one: rain or shine, live every day, as Thoreau or Emerson advised, as if it were your last. The passage of time in these historic parts is everywhere evident, in the interesting old churches, museums and antique places in communities like Grafton and Colborne. Time waits for no man.

Some Home Truths

The Hamilton Spectator makes some pertinent points about some of the anomalies of compulsory education, in an editorial reprinted on this page today. Moreover, one could say with truth that schools are places where, unless students have a background of sound family life and moral training, they may be corrupted. Not by any shortcomings of the staff or curriculum, but by day-to-day life in permissive society and drug trafficking which have become entrenched among some sections of student society. Who is to say, let alone any government, that the 15-year-old in this case would not have been better off going into his father's business?

Doing Their Thing

Prime Minister Trudeau adopted just the right attitude to the protesters out in Vancouver. It was "really beautiful," he said, "to see them doing their own thing," and expressing themselves. Humoring them of course is one thing, but we hope the Vancouver police took due action against those who tore Canadian and B.C. flags from flag poles at the court house and replaced them with Maoist and Che Guevara flags. If these people are so stuck on Red China and Cuba why don't they go there?

Shades of Winter

Regarding those patches of snow still clinging tenaciously to parts of the countryside, we are reminded of some dialogue from the Mary Tyler Moore show. Minneapolis is the setting for this engaging series and M.T.M. makes the point that one thing about living in Minnesota is that they always get a White Christmas. To which M.T.M.'s irrepressible friend Rhoda, from the apartment upstairs, replies: "It's the White Easters that get me!"

In and Out Job for Some

Spectre of Unemployment Haunts Parliamentarians Too

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Ever wonder why the Honorable Members of the House of Commons sometimes wonder why the taxpayers wonder about all their pleas selfpreservation of public service?

Some of the MP concern has to be based on the nagging worry that the politician may be reaping over their shoulders while they are busy looking after their own private instead of the public interest.

This is not to say that a great many, in fact, most parliamentarians, are not genuinely concerned with their public responsibilities of representing their constituents and doing the best they can for them, their region and their country.

But there are others who betray a lack of unconcern — as who does not — about their own welfare.

Being human, they all must give a thought to the well-being of No. 1, but some manage to submerge self-interest better than others.

Case in point . . . the slightly preposterous proposition proposed by an MP that parliamentarians should be covered by unemployment insurance.

The proposal was that of West Ottawa Liberal MP Lloyd Francis, Government Whip in the Commons.

Listen to him as he pleads the plight of the poor MP, haunted by the fear of unemployment, and be prepared to shed a tear:

The House was busy chewing over the new Unemployment Insurance Bill which imposes the principle of universality — everyone into the insurance pool except the self-employed — and increases both the rate of payments in and benefits out.

. . . how to cover Members of Parliament," said Lloyd Francis, was "a problem . . . not that I am worried about large scale unemployment in this area", . . . but.

There was a chuckle when he added that personally he had not found being an MP "very hazardous employment" himself.

It was to grin, because if for Lloyd Francis it has been something of an in and out job . . . and if being defeated is not a "hazard" for an MP what is?

He ran first in the 1962 general election and lost.

He tried in the '63 vote and won.

He took a run at re-election in the '65 race and lost.

He campaigned for a comeback in the '68 polling and made it.

By the time the next election rolls around — probably next Spring — he will have served just over six years in the Commons, the key minimum of service entitling an MP to a pension for the rest of his natural life starting at the basic annual $2,150.

It escalates to an annual $13,500 for life for a 25-year MP who, after a losing election, finds himself unemployed and in need of insurance Mr. Francis thinks he requires.

Oddly, Lloyd Francis is one of only two six-year MPs in the Commons for whom the minimum pension service requirement was conveniently coincidental.

But back to the plight of the poor jobless MP.

While the spectre of parliamentary unemployment was not haunting him, Lloyd Francis insisted: "there are some (in the Commons) who may be getting a little on in years and for whom interruption of service in this House would create problems of readjustment."

Here Lloyd Francis seemed to underline that he was still thinking as he put it, "in terms of the 30 Honorable Members (Beriah the thought) but in terms of the principle of universality."

What troubled him too had been a confrontation, not apparent until after the vote, between parliamentarians and teachers.

Teachers have been protesting that they should not have to pay into an unemployment insurance plan they are sure they will never need or use.

"I number of teacher groups," stated Lloyd Francis, "have thrown this in our face, saying 'you are not covering Members of Parliament, so why should Members of Parliament cover us?'"

On that basis, argued Lloyd Francis, "I think we should, at least for the sake of moral example, consider covering parliamentarians."

To give him his due, Lloyd Francis, while speaking of the "hazardous employment" as he called it, was not trying to speak of the parliamentary pension as a cushion to soften the shock of being tossed out by the taxpayers in an election.

But there was not a whisper of that here with their number . . . just the cushiest in the pay . . . business, softer than any other.

Or, as South Waterloo Conservative MP Ian Scott put it on the Liberal backbench: "Like nobody else in our public service."

Or, as another NDP Member — imagine, New Democrats talking like this about what traditionally have regarded as the almost sacred subject of pensions — Stanley Knowles, M.P. for Winnipeg North Centre, indignation! "Unconscionable."

He had it figured that even now in the Commons there is a young MP who could leave after the next election at the ripe old age of 30 and draw a pension, after only six years in the House, for the rest of his life . . . a total of something involving $250,000.

Pity the poor soot-to-be $25,000-a-year - with - $5,000 - of - it-tax-free - expenses MP on "Unemployment," eh Lloyd? Francis put it, may be all the more blunt a prospect now that parliamentary life is to be all that sweeter.

Bureaucracy's Hollow Victory

Hamilton Spectator

It's unfortunate a man had to submit to the indignity of jail in order to demonstrate the theory absurdity of Ontario's Schools Administration Act. The message to Ontario legislators is clear enough: Reform the wasteful, pointless law.

As it stands, the five-year-old legislation forces parents to keep their children in school until 16; there are no allowances for exceptions.

Hamilton businessman Dennis Douglas went to jail rather than compel his 15-year-old son, making a second unsuccessful stab at grade nine, back to school against his will and his parents'. The boy was at work in the family's store.

Ridiculous though it is, a few of this province insists that students remain in school even when they're wasting time that could be put to productive use, wasting taxpayers' money, and contributing nothing to their classmates or themselves by staying in school.

The Hamilton case is an unpleasant illustration of the unreasonable lengths Ontario has reached in its unquestioning adherence to bureaucracy. The idiot's unyielding mass has begun to crush the public plinth that supports it. The province has been too slow in placing bureaucrats in their proper social perspective.

People don't exist to serve the bureaucratic system, although laws such as the Schools Administration Act would put the system above the citizens. Schools exist to serve people.

When people are better served outside the school — individuals as well as society — then certain individuals should be allowed leeway to leave school before the 16-year age minimum.

Instead of classifying all Ontarians as boys rolling down education's assembly line, the province might begin to consider people as real individuals, each beset by different circumstances, and each requiring individual treatment.

It stands to reason that all 14- or 15-year-olders better off in class than they'd by in jobs. Some provision should be made for exceptions to the rule.

It would be entirely consistent with Ontario traditions of individual freedom and initiative to establish local tribunals to review applications from students who want to leave school before the age of 16.

There's no magic about the age of 16 that justifies waste, alienation and an offence against common sense.

Teenage Smokers

Edmonton Journal

The best way to stop smoking is not to start. The hope of reducing the alarming death rate depends mostly on persuading young people, especially teenagers in junior and senior high school, not to start smoking. The objective is not likely to be aided in Edmonton by the decision of the school board to lift the ban on smoking in schools for all students over 16.

Ability Fund Raised $7,700

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

The Ability Fund Neighbor to Neighbor Campaign was a financial success. Credit for this must be given to the people, blockstarters and all the citizens who were willing to accept the responsibility which this new campaign necessitated.

The Intelligencer and CJBQ gave their editorial co-operation and for this we are grateful.

At the outset of our drive we were assisted by Key Club members of BCVI's and student nurses of the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing.

Thanks are due to both these groups for their help.

The amount raised was 7,700, up $1,000 from last year; this amount does not include the out-of-town coverage was sparse due to lack of kits, but those with had a chance to give have more.

Our new campaign had many bugs, some of which we knew of not. We recalled kits only in find that they had not moved as quickly as they should have sometimes they were most difficult to locate. The weather was responsible for the delay of a great many kits. We admit some people did not like the idea and preferred to send donations directly to the Ability Fund in care of the Toronto Dominion Bank.

To those citizens who are waiting for receipts, I wish to assure you that they will be on the way shortly. All receipts will be mailed from the Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled, Toronto.

Thank you for your support and co-operation.

No Hope Held for Missing

mas likened it to "cold lava"—and authorities ordered workers to stay clear for fear of new slides.

At the Saguenay, workers in steel-hulled rowboats sifted debris floating downstream and found the five bodies recovered Wednesday.

Forced of the landslide caused waves estimated at 35 feet in height, which rushed downriver into the Saguenay where one ripped a concrete bridge cleanly from its foundations.

Rescue workers in driving rain slogged through the muck Wednesday after about 70 persons, many screaming and moaning, had been brought out overnight.

One survivor was Monicalm Laforge, who was asleep with his pregnant wife and three small children in the first house that fell into the chasm. They were awakened by a bus horn and went into the kitchen, where a refrigerator and stove were sliding across the floor.

They went on to the veranda and the house dropped more than 100 feet.

Mr. Laforge fought his way through the mud to the edge of the crater, a relative said. His family was lost.

Also swept away in the slide Tuesday night were a bus and several cars. About 30 men in the bus escaped only seconds before the vehicle toppled into the gorge.

About 60 per cent of the 1,300 residents of this town 115 miles north of Quebec City have been evacuated and are being put up in nearby communities. Supplies were arriving by the truckload Wednesday night.

Eyewitnesses to the disaster Tuesday night told of screams for help in the night air and the helplessness of bystanders as homes disappeared into the blackness.

An engineer on the scene told a reporter the supporting layers of earth would become firm as water from recent heavy rain and spring runoff drained from the ground.

But if rains continue, or water enters the ground from other sources such as the storm sewer, more collapse may be expected, he said.

The weather office predicted cloudy weather with sunny periods and a few afternoon showers for today, with sunny weather Friday.

About 300 local and provincial police and civil defence workers were involved in the rescue operation and the Canadian Forces sent about 40 soldiers and a helicopter to help.

Ratepayers Split on Urban Renewal Plan

Bert Kenny, planning director for Belleville, last night addressed members of the Eastbill Ratepayers' Association. Opposition and agreement with the concepts of the proposed facelift for downtown Belleville were about equal, with comments registered for both points of view. Speaking with Mr. Kenny, left, following the meeting, are left to right, Gordon Elmy, Ken Peoples, John Empey and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Boyce.

Ratepayers Divided on Plan

Members of the East Hill Ratepayers Association last night condemned present by-laws which allow contractors to erect apartments in residential districts.

Bert Kenny, Principal Planner for the city, addressing the ratepayers last night at St. Joseph's separate school, agreed that "the bylaws are bad and should be changed. . . they're wrong and were passed without a plan when the type of building now going up wasn't thought of."

Mr. Kenny was replying to vehement proposals that the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board freeze properties so that further development would be halted and, as one lady put it, "we could keep the value of our properties that we've paid good money for and paid taxes on."

"You can't freeze property," the planner told the less than 30 ratepayers, "there is no power under the act."

He also said there would be "little point" in passing new bylaws to restrict development, "without an official plan, you'd run into other problems in the future," he said.

Zdenek Kvarda, chairman of the planning board and chairman of the Eastbill Ratepayers Association, said "we are governed by laws and we recognize the rights of both parties. This is a case of the developer taking advantage of laws that are on the books."

Mr. Kenny, invited to explain the new urban renewal plan tabled earlier this year, said if he had his way, "I would like to handle it (the plan) in one fell swoop; handle all rezoning with an overall plan, but this is, of course impossible."

"You have to keep planning moving, you can never get ahead of it," he said.

The new urban renewal plan which hasn't received final approval from council, is being shown to the public in order to receive their suggestions and reactions.

"It is the aim of the report and plan to outline the concept of land use and transportation," Mr. Kenny briefly outlined the report, indicating several artists' conceptions for downtown Belleville.

Areas of the downtown district which will require rehabilitation and reconstruction were explained to the ratepayers. "The plan was started following a confusion by council that something was wrong with the downtown area, before the proposed new shopping centres were introduced."

Mr. Kenny said "this is not necessarily the plan he would have produced if (the mall) had not emerged." He said that the plan outlined a heavy land use in the downtown area, with apartments surrounded by a rebuilt shopping district.

"You don't want peacemeal development all over the place."

The urban renewal plan forms part of a township - wide urban and rural development concept for a growth pattern over the next 30 years.

With such reactions from the public, the contractors will join city planners and council, in a feasibility study to insure, before development is undertaken, that the plan can be put into effect.

And Mr. Kenny assured those present, in reply to a question from the floor, "I don't think one contractor has more rights than 10, or any number of ratepayers."

A spokesman for the East Hill Ratepayers Association thanked the planner and concluded, "with more meetings like this, we can pressure the municipality into making changes, and we can do it at the polls."

Clinic Worker Sees Perils of Drug Abuse

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You've printed many letters about kids who use drugs. Here's what I read last year, and, "I hope to God somebody out there is listening." I do volunteer work at a drug abuse clinic — from 7 'till midnight, after eight hours at my regular job.

Last week a 15-year-old boy died at my feet of all overdoses of heroin. His buddies carried him in. He was a handsome kid with gorgeous brown eyes like a doe. His hair was golden and curly like a small child's. We had to call his parents to come to the clinic and claim his body. It was a scene I will never forget.

ANN LANDERS

Every day dozens of teen-agers show up sick as dogs with hepatitis from dirty needles. Yesterday I saw a girl with so many needle marks in her arms she looked like a pin cushion. Some kids come in with serious stomach disorders. When they get spaced, they forget to eat.

I keep reading articles about "soft" drugs versus "hard" drugs, "right" drugs versus "wrong" drugs. Please keep telling your readers to stay away from all drugs, including pot. Unless a kid is a chemist he can't tell what he's getting and one day he might get more than he can handle. — RIGHT-ON-THE-SPOT WITNESS.

DEAR WITNESS: Right on. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My mother who is a world traveler picks up "souvenirs" along the way for friends and relatives. Among her souvenirs are silver, jewels, ashtrays, salt and pepper shakers, candlesticks — in brief, anything that isn't nailed down.

Mother is completely honest in every other way and does not consider this stealing. She insists the hotels and restaurants want people to take things because it's good advertising.

What is your opinion? — HONEST EMILY.

* * *

DEAR EM: Never mind my opinion. Here's what Earl McCormick, general manager of the Washington Hilton says: "Ninety-five per cent of the stealing done in hotels is 'internal' — and not done by guests. Most guests are honest."

Surprised? So was I. Your light-fingered mother should not take comfort in the thought that everybody does it — because most people don't.

Charles Carey, manager of the St. Regis-Sheraton in New York said this: "We expect a certain amount of shrinkage. Oyster forks and demi-tasse spoons disappear. In great numbers, and we don't mind. But when guests walk out with blankets and pictures, we feel they are taking advantage."

Elderly Must Be Helped to Stand on Own Feet

By DORIS CLARE

Most elderly patients have suffered the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" they need understanding and encouragement, not sentimentality. They are tougher, have more comeback when really challenged, than was formerly thought.

They must be helped to stand on their own feet; to put forth real effort, simply because they are capable of doing so. What I am trying to say here is that people are never too old, barring extreme brain damage, to learn, to adjust, to make improvements in some direction.

Members of the healing art should not be interested simply in keeping the elderly patient alive a little longer.

I can think of no greater disservice to any man than to enable him to be a more exacting vegetable in the midst of a world beginning to himself, of infinite possibilities for vital, dynamic life! — Professor H. Lee Jacobs in The Journal of the Ontario Dental Association

Dear Doris: After I refused to go all the way with this guy he got mad. Three weeks later he came down to straighten things out and explained that he liked me but he won't sure if he was in love with me.

This guy still wants to see me once in a while. I still care for him but it seems every time I really love one boy it doesn't work out.

If you don't give in to them then they don't love you any more. — Depressed.

Dear Depressed: It's the style today — to confuse love with sex, which is what your boy friend is doing. Sex is important but by itself it becomes quite shabby. The love you want to base a marriage on is bigger. It is unselfish, considerate, concerned. It does not wear thin after a few months or years, but grows deeper.

Congratulations to you for holding out on him. You will know when right one comes along — even without experimenting with sex.

Many Vegetables Suitable for Baking

By MARY MOORE

For the last three days I have been flying pretty high with my parents and party recipes and had better get down to earth in a hurry. So I am. Vegetables that can be baked instead of boiled are at a premium. Those that come to my mind at once are potatoes and squash and those that we roast around the meat.

The recipes I have for you today include parsnips, carrots, turnip and sweet potatoes — all earthy root vegetables that are available in all stores right now at reasonable prices. These are yellow vegetables that are high in Vitamin A. Vitamin A helps keep mucous membranes firm and resistant to infection and the skin smooth and soft.

BAKED MIXED VEGETABLES
(parsnips, carrots and turnip serves 4 or 5)

2 med. parsnips cut in chunks
2 med. carrots, cut in chunks
½ med. turnip cut in chunks
1 cup boiling water
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper

Scrub vegetables and pare as thinly as possible. Cut into large bite-size pieces into baking dish — preferably one that has a snug-fitting lid. Pour water over, dot with butter, salt and pepper, cover with lid or foil tightly and bake at 300 deg. F.ahr. 1½ hrs. By this time all water has evaporated and vegetables are tender and delicious.

LEMON-GLAZED SWEET POTATOES (serves 6)

6 med. sweet potatoes
¼ cup light brown sugar
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. paprika
Grated rind of 1 large lemon
1½ tbsps. lemon juice
2 tbsps. butter

Scrub and pare sweet potatoes thinly. Cut in halves and cook in minimum of boiling water, covered, until nearly tender. Drain and cut each half in three slices, arranging them in very large deep pie plate or shallow baking dish. Sprinkle evenly with brown sugar then with salt and paprika. Sprinkle lemon and orange juice. Drizzle with lemon juice. Dot with butter and bake 20 min. at 350 deg. F.ahr. This is one of the best combos of sweet potatoes' recipes I have ever tasted.

Points for Parents
by MARY BRYSON

The average child has 11 missing, decayed or filled teeth by the time he is 15 years old, a dental survey reveals. A good deal of this trouble is caused by neglect, say the experts.

Though you cannot be sure your child always will have good, strong teeth, you can start him on habits that will keep his teeth as healthy as possible.

Start when your youngsters are tiny and emphasize toothbrushing after every meal. The brushing also is important after older children have consumed sweets or soft drinks.

Capacity Crowd Enjoys Gospel Singers' Program

MARMORA — The Switzer Brothers of Frankford, attracted a capacity crowd to St. Andrew's United Church on Sunday evening, May 2. A two - hour program of songs, musical numbers and Christian messages was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present.

The four Switzer brothers form the quartet of singers, while the remaining three of the seven man group, supply the instrumental numbers.

The group has travelled throughout Canada and the United States using a converted bus as their headquarters. They have made three records, which were available, and have appeared on TV and radio in both countries.

They have given up their jobs and are devoting full time to the presentation of musical programs.

By the enthusiasm of the crowd, it would seem that more entertainment such as this, would be welcome in Marmora.

Organizational Meeting Held

MADOC — An organizational meeting of the Madoc 4-H Potato Club was held recently in the Queensboro WI Hall. The slate of officers was installed as follows: President, Sandara Stein; vice president, Duane Foley; secretary, David Devolin; press reporter, Greg Williams.

Eight members were present for this, the first meeting of the season, and all signed up for the project.

At this meeting the discussion was on how to handle and manage the projects. The members were briefed on what work would be done for the project.

For more interesting meetings, it was suggested by the members that the members be shown films on some of the following subjects: crops, soils, management, diseases, sprays and insecticides. The members will be expected to keep complete record books.

An open house meeting was discussed, as were educational trips through the year.

Engagement Notice

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Vesterfelt, Belleville, are pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter Mary Darlene, to Mr. Norman David Crawford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Crawford, Belleville. The marriage will take place at Christ Church, Belleville, on Saturday, June 5, 1971, at 4 p.m.

Special Mass Marks 40th Wedding Anniversary

FRANKFORD—St. Francis of Assisi Church in Frankford was decorated with red and white 'mums when an Anniversary Mass was said at 2 p.m. on Saturday, May 1, 1971, for Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Carter of Frankford. It was in the same church 40 years ago, that the honored guests took their wedding vows and they again repeated the same vow, (renewal of vows). This was the first time for a renewal of vows in the church. The mass was celebrated by Father McGarvey and assisted by Father Dumphey. The organist and guest soloist was William Long of Trenton.

A reception was held in the Parish Hall where family, friends and neighbors gathered. The hall was beautifully decorated with streamers and wedding bells. The table was centred by a wedding cake and flanked by tall candles. Lunch was served by the members of the Catholic Women's League.

After the reception, the family gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carter for a family dinner. Later in the evening, the guests attended the May Ball in Batawa, sponsored by the Knights of Columbus, of which Mr. Carter is a member.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Carter who attended the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Santo Amodeo (Sarah) of Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Nulty (Margaret) and Diana of Ottawa, Mr. Jim Carter and Kim of Toronto, Jeanetta, Mrs. Glen Hyslop (Kathleen) and Debbie, Mr. and Mrs. William Carter, Billy and Michelle.

Time to Make Home Inventory

WINNIPEG (CP) — As you do the spring cleaning this year, it's a good idea to make a room-by-room inventory, says Susan Gadd, consumer information specialist for the Manitoba agriculture department.

"Most of us would have a great deal of difficulty in recalling all our household contents were we to be hit by disaster," she says.

An inventory helps you to decide on the proper type of insurance coverage as well as aiding in claim settlements after fire or theft, she says. It also is a useful tool to help the family decide on household needs.

Miss Gadd suggests a room-by-room list, giving such information as article, date of purchase, description, cost and, where applicable, serial numbers. The information can be kept on file cards or in notebooks—but she recommends two copies, with one kept outside the home in a safe place, such as a safety deposit box.

Make sure the list is complete, she adds, and don't forget articles stored in closets, trunks or the garage.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Church Groups

ST. PAUL'S ACW

MARMORA — St. Paul's ACW met at the Rectory as guests of Rev. J. Lombard and Mrs. Lombard, for the April meeting. Sixteen members were present as Mrs. William Lavender conducted the meeting.

Mrs. Lombard announced that Bishop Neville Clark of the Diocese of Moosonee has accepted his invitation to speak in Marmora during his visit in May to the Diocese of Ontario but was unable to set a definite date at this time.

The secretary, Mrs. Ira Edwards, read a "thank you" letter from the Marmora Branch IODE for a donation towards the purchase of children's underwear, a project which the IODE has undertaken for their adopted school at Davis Inlet in Labrador.

Mrs. Lavender reported that a bale is to be packed and sent from this deanery to Rev. E. W. Cole in Easterville, Man. Gifts of clothing for all ages, layettes, bedding, household articles, wool and craft supplies would be appreciated and should be turned in during the next month. The clothing must be new or in excellent condition to be acceptable.

Mrs. R. E. Bonter, card convener, reported that she had sent three sympathy, two get-well and 11 Easter cards to church members during the month.

An estimate of $400 to repair the stained glass windows in the church was brought to the attention of the members. It was decided that the ACW would attempt to raise the money necessary to have the job done. A card party in the church hall held Friday, April 16 has been the first money raising event.

Rev. Lombard reminded the members that St. Paul's Church would celebrate its 100th anniversary in 1974 and asked that members search for old pictures or anything pertaining to the history of the church so that it could be compiled.

Mrs. Roy Frost and Mrs. Lavender assisted Mrs. Lombard with lunch.

OMSA Convention in Toronto

The April meeting of the Quinte Medical Secretaries' Association was held in Education Hall, Bell and chaired by president Mrs. Diana Maxwell.

The association will be holding its annual potluck supper June 8 at 7 p.m. in Education Hall. Everyone is to bring a favorite dish and two place settings.

Almost all the members will attend the OMSA convention in Toronto on May 18 and 19. Congratulations were extended to Diana Maxwell who has successfully completed her Ophthalmic Assistants' course of Ontario.

A short business meeting was followed by the guest speaker, Mrs. Elizabeth McLeod, teacher from Loyalist College. Mrs. McLeod introduced the medical secretarial program now available at Loyalist College with a display of books that are in use for the course. A question-naire completed by the secretaries gave the teacher an exchange of ideas. Discussion was held re the pros and cons of shorthand for medical secretaries and it was decided that while useful the dictaphone has certainly taken over in most offices.

Mrs. McLeod was thanked by Diana Maxwell.

The luncheon was served by Merridy Bowman and Barbara Lewis.

The next meeting will be held on May 12 at the home of Mrs. Mae Cathcart when the guest speaker will be Mrs. Jean Ryan, PHN.

Doctors Do Well Financially Under Medicare

"It's getting so I have to work harder and harder to get me to look like myself."

OTTAWA (CP) — Doctors have thrived before financially and their numbers have grown steadily under the federal medical care insurance program, earnings and manpower studies show.

Substantial increases in average net professional income will be reported in detail later this year after full analysis of the figures, federal health department sources said Wednesday.

Newfoundland, whose doctors ranked third in average net professional income in 1968, climbed to first place after the province joined the plan in 1969.

A similar but less spectacular rise occurred for net average income of doctors in Nova Scotia and Manitoba, which also joined the program in 1969.

Data on this and other aspects of earnings is just becoming available for 1968 as a result of computer analysis of income tax returns.

The data is used by medical associations in negotiating fee schedules with provincial governments.

Less modest rise in average net income followed Alberta's

Stirling

and Ontario's joining of the federal medical care program July 1 and Oct. 1, 1969, respectively. The other three provinces joined April 1, 1968.

Visions of a flight of doctors from the country in the face of "state" medicine failed to fit the reality, federal authorities say.

The annual net increase of doctors from immigration has continued steadily and Canadian medical schools are beginning to turn out more home-grown doctors.

The shortages of doctors are in terms of distribution and function. That is they tend to set up practice in larger centres of population and the specialists outnumber family physicians as the primary care doctors.

The ratio of doctors to population has risen steadily for the past two or three years—it now is about one doctor per 720 persons—as a result of a net increase in practising doctors, allowing for deaths and retirements, of about 1,000 a year.

Manpower projections of the federal government predict continued improvement in the doctor-population ratio through to 1981. The studies have just been made public.

They show that with a continued immigration rate of 1,200 doctors a year the doctor-population ratio will hit one per 709 this year, one per 626 by 1976 and one per cent 602 in 1981.

This dependence on immigration of doctors has caused concern among medical educationists. Dr. John McCreary, dean of medicine at University of British Columbia, warned publicly earlier this year that it cannot be expected to continue indefinitely.

Civil Servants 'Burn' McKeough

NORTH BAY (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Darcy Mc-Keough was burned in effigy Wednesday night by a group of angry civil servants attending a protest rally.

About 200 members of the Civil Service Association of Ontario attended the rally to express anger over the five-per-cent limit on wage increases for provincial civil servants announced in Mr. McKeough's budget speech last week.

Speakers at the rally said they were most disturbed by the provincial treasurer's statement that the government would not implement arbitration awards in excess of the guideline.

Mel Gareau, Northern director of the CSAO, said the association is seeking three concessions from the government:

—Abolition of the five-per-cent ceiling;

—Implementation of possible arbitration awards;

—A guarantee of free collective bargaining.

At the meeting at a local motel was ending, the crowd moved outside to burn a straw figure on a makeshift scaffold.

One placard read: "Five per cent stinks."

Merger of Two Courts Is Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — Sittings of the Ontario Supreme Court trial division should be scheduled by a special provincial administrator to end the inconvenience of the litigants and witnesses called by the present long delays in the hearing of cases, says Ontario's county and district court judges.

In a 36-page brief to the Ontario Law Reform Commission, the county and District Court Judges' Association of Ontario also proposes that the Ontario county court system be merged with the Ontario Supreme Court trial division to form a province-wide Superior Court of Ontario.

The Law Reform Commission is reviewing the administration of Ontario courts to recommend to the Ontario government reforms for the more convenient, economic and efficient disposal of the civil and criminal business dealt with by the courts.

The judges say that under the present system of scheduling, by which sittings of the Supreme Court in county towns are set months in advance, time for the various centres is "all allocated long before the workload is known."

Persons charged with criminal offences that can be tried only by the Supreme Court may have to wait several months until the court arrives in the county town, the brief says.

"The cumulative result of the shortcomings of the court system contributes to bring the whole administration of justice into disrepute."

In proposing a new Superior Court through a merger of the county and Supreme Courts, the brief says the Criminal Code puts the trial of "professional criminals" accused of "armed robbery, breaking and entering, fraud, drugs, and so on" in the hands of county courts while "amateur criminals" accused of "murder and rape which are crimes of passion," must be tried by the Supreme Court.

However, says the brief, the maximum sentence that can be imposed by the Supreme Court is life imprisonment for non-capital murder, the same term that can be imposed by a county court judge for armed robbery or housebreaking.

The association, which represents Ontario's 94 county and district court judges, also recommends:

—Abolition of the grand jury;

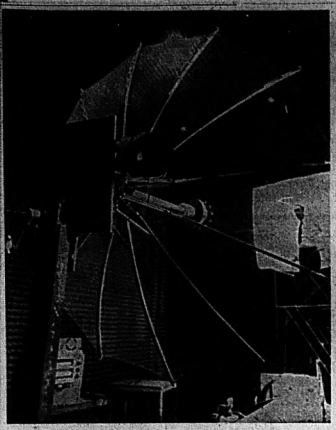
—Drastic reduction in the use of civil juries, or even abolition of them;

—Complete overhaul in the structure and organization of the small claims court;

—Gradual reduction of the two-month long vacation when the high courts close down, except for emergency matters;

—Better payment for witnesses and jurors;

—Removal of many non-judicial duties judges are called on to perform but which could be equally well performed by others.



Seminars Held

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro's public relations department has been holding seminars with high-school teachers to present a "positively-oriented" view of urban pollution problems.

A public relations department memorandum on the new program says its objectives are to present factual information about pollution to the teachers and to "present an overview of Ontario Hydro as a corporate citizen."

Commons Approves Residences

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons procedure and organization committee approved Wednesday a government bill establishing rent-free official residences for the prime minister, Opposition leader and Commons Speaker.

The committee also agreed to a motion by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) urging that the government consider establishing a permanent residence for the Speaker in the Ottawa area.

Mr. Lambert, himself a former Commons Speaker, said the present residence, in Quebec's nearby Gatineau Hills, is too far from Ottawa to make travelling reliable during the winter months.

Andre Fortin (Creditiste-Lotbinier) was the only member of the committee to object to approval of the bill dealing with official residences.

The bill dealing with official residences replaces a system under which the prime minister pays $5,000 a year rent at his 24 Sussex Drive home.

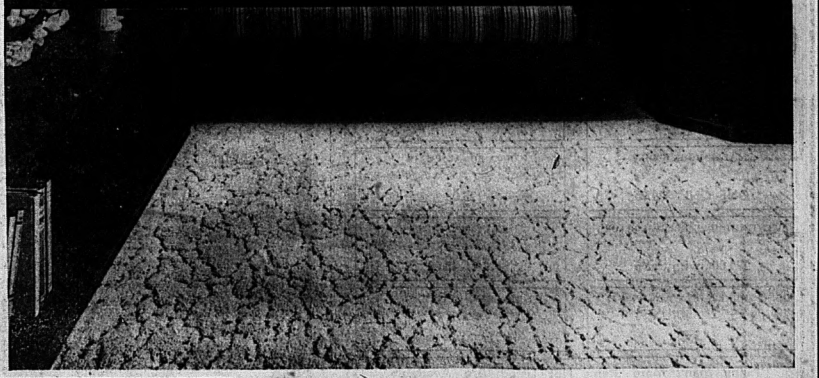
The residence of the Opposition leader has been provided since 1951 by a group of citizens from all parties and provinces.

The Speaker's residence, known as The Farm, was bequeathed to Canada by former prime minister Mackenzie King.

The bill also covers the prime ministerial summer residence at Lake Harrington in the Gatineau.

U.S. Firms Keep Money In Canada

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The idea that U.S. capital finances corporate development in Canada is false, the research director of the Canadian Economic Policy Committee said here Wednesday.



Ray Matthews estimated that 92 per cent of the corporate development in this country is financed by Canadian money.

"In a very real sense most Canadian development is being financed by Canadian capital in the control of American hands," he said.

This fact abrogates the myth that American firms suck profits away from Canada, sending them back to U.S. head offices, he stated, adding that American companies pour profits earned by Canadian subsidiaries into further capital development in Canada.

Quebec Will Consult Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec and Ottawa presumably will be discussing the financing of the projected power development on Quebec rivers flowing into James Bay, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Wednesday.

They would also discuss the affect of the planned multi-billion-dollar project on the Canadian economy, he added in a Commons reply to New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis.

There had been no discussions yet with Quebec about the development. All he knew about it was what he had seen in the newspapers.

Prime Minister Trudeau said there has been some "involvement" between Quebec officials and the National Energy Board.

There was no reply from the government when Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked whether the Commons environmental protection committee will investigate the project.

The government has refused to permit the committee to hold hearings on the West coast into the danger of oil spill from a proposed tanker route from Alaska to Washington State.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) asked what steps Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien is taking to protect the rights of Indians who would be affected by the project.

Mr. Chretien said the James Bay question hadn't been raised yet and since the project would take some time to develop the matter could be considered in the meantime.

Doctors Have Clue To Children's Strokes

TORONTO (CP) — Doctors at the Hospital for Sick Children say they have a clue to the cause of childhood strokes.

They strokes, which occur suddenly, just as in adulthood, may be related to previous illnesses accompanied by fever, usually within the preceding three months.

Dr. Derk C. Harwood-Nash, Dr. Peter McDonald and Willa Argest arrived at their theory after studies on 61 children.

Dr. Harwood Nash said all the children were quite well at the time of their strokes, but had suffered severe infectious illness, with high fever, in the three months preceding the attacks.

One sacrifice Wayne St. John wasn't willing to make after the Toronto production of the rock musical Hair closed was to let a barber shear his massive puff of black curls. The only way to save the curls was to stay in show business and the result is a bahd, fronted by St. John and two female graduates of Hair called Hairafter. The band's repertoire is middle-of-the-road rock standards.

Government Undecided About Bilingualism

OTTAWA (CP) — Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier said Wednesday the government is reserving its judgment till a report recommending proclamation of 20 bilingual districts across Canada.

In particular, Mr. Pelletier told reporters, he has questions about the wisdom of declaring all of Quebec and New Brunswick as bilingual districts.

"There is a good amount of work to be done by the government before any districts can be proclaimed," he said.

The report prepared by the Bilingual Districts Advisory Board, was tabled in the Commons Tuesday. It was based on 1961 census findings.

The board recommended creation of at least one bilingual district, in which federal services must be available in both French and English, in every province.

Under the terms of the Official Languages Act, the board was to determine districts in which a French, or, English-language minority constituted more than 10 per cent of the population.

The act also provides for proclamation of districts in which smaller minorities—such as the English-language community in Quebec City—have been able traditionally to deal at government offices in their own language.

Mr. Pelletier said pressure from provincial governments would have to be taken into account by the federal government, although it remained free to make its own decision.

He agreed that proclamation of the bilingual districts would inevitably put pressure on provincial governments to extend their services in both French and English.

He also indicated that the government intends to exercise its option under the languages act to provide bilingual services in cities outside Quebec which have sizeable French-language minorities but do not qualify as bilingual districts.

He suggested it made sense to provide such services for the growing French community in Toronto, estimated to be close to 50,000—when they would be available to such smaller groups in rural areas.

Calls for Caution Greet Plan

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Skepticism, some outright opposition and calls for caution have greeted a federal plan for 37 bilingual districts across Canada, with only New Brunswick's political and French-Canadian leaders voicing general acceptance.

A Quebec labor leader called the plan a threat and Ontario spokesmen called it unnecessary.

There was skepticism that the plan, recommended in a report tabled Tuesday in the Commons, would ever be implemented.

And leaders in affected areas expressed reservations about the future of non-bilingual federal civil servants, about the danger of creating French-speaking ghettos, and, in Quebec, about a bilingual status for that province opening the door to an English-language takeover.

Recommended is the designation of all of Quebec and New Brunswick as bilingual districts, with at least one bilingual district in each of the other provinces.

Twelve districts are proposed for Ontario, eight for Manitoba, seven for Saskatchewan, three for Alberta, two for Nova Scotia, and one each for Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia.

The report, prepared under terms of the Official Languages Act of 1969 by a 15-member advisory board, may be proclaimed as law any time after Aug. 1.

The federal government would have to provide bilingual services in the 37 districts if the bill is passed.

If the recommendations are adopted for Quebec, said Jean Gerin-Lajoie, Quebec head of the United Steelworkers of America, Quebecers will either have to speak English or promote independence for Quebec.

He said the plan would give a particular status to his province for the first time, but "it will be a unique particular status for Quebecers of transitional bilingualism while preparing for the disappearance of their mother-language."

Francois Cloutier, Quebec's cultural affairs minister, said Quebec's point of view was not taken into account in the preparation of the report, so the federal government should not take a definite stand on the matter until after the federal-provincial conference in Victoria next month.

Ontario Premier William Davis had outlined his government's stand on bilingualism in the legislature Monday, the day before the federal report was tabled.

He announced plans to provide bilingual services through provincial agencies in areas with large French-speaking populations, but said the province does not need to set up formal bilingual districts because services can be provided without them.

He also offered assurances to provincial civil servants that bilingualism will not be a requirement for either hiring or promotion.

Drug Education Ineffective

TORONTO (CP) — Extensive drug education programs in schools have had no impact on illicit drug use by students, Reginald Smart of the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation said Wednesday.

He said studies in Halifax and Montreal confirm results of his own research in Toronto schools last year: That drug use is doubling and in some cases nearly tripling among students despite educational efforts.

Dr. Smart said all three studies found that both drug-users and non-users got the bulk of their knowledge about drugs from the media — more than from all other sources combined.

Steel Prices Raised in U.S.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. has announced increases of 6¼ per cent prices on products used to make a wide variety of consumer items, including automobiles and appliances.

There was no immediate adoption of the new price scales by other major producers. As has been customary, however, some said they were reviewing the U.S. Steel move. U.S. Steel is an industry price pacesetter.

The increases, called "corrective action" by the company, affected four general categories involving carbon and high strength sheet and strip products.

World War I Fliers Gather

LONDON (CP) — Airmen out of another era, the days of First World War flying crates, got together Wednesday night to sail the skies of France in retrospect.

Mostly Canadian members of the old Royal Flying Corps, with a sprinkling of Canadian-enlisted Americans, they are here on a reunion of the World War I Fliers, an organization of Canadian-connected airmen of the early days of combat aviation.

Canadian High Commissioner Charles Ritchie held a reception for them Wednesday night, and the 112 veterans, many with wives, will be received by the Queen at Buckingham Palace May 12.

Most of these men of the 1914-18 sky fights now are in their sprightly 70s, but they range in age up to 84-year-old John Hopkins of Victoria, B.C., a retired lawyer. Hopkins, now sporting a tiny trifle white beard, joined the Royal Canadian Dragoons at Swift Current, Sask., in 1914, but transferred overseas to the RFC and became an artillery observation flyer.

Among the high-scoring Canadians was A. W. (Nick) Carter of Vancouver, who said he got "about 30-odd" enemy planes while he and Raymond Collishaw of Vancouver commanded companion squadrons. Collishaw, who had 60 kills, was unable to make the trip because of eye trouble.

Carter and Russell Frost of Hamilton, Ont., both of whom played a leading part in establishing the Air Cadet League of Canada had met only once since the First World War.

Hornets' Dietrich Never Had A Week Like This

GALT (CP) — Howie Dietrich of Galt Hornets has always scored a lot of goals, but shouts he's never had a week quite like this one.

The 23-year-old right winger has scored two sudden-death overtime goals this week to help the Hornets to a 3-0 lead over Calgary Stampeders in the best-of-seven series for the Allan Cup.

The next game is here tonight.

Dietrich, a left-handed shooter member of Galt's Allan Cup who plays right wing, was winners two years ago. He also played on a pair of Eastern Hockey League champions in Clinton and QHA winners with the Junior B Waterloo Siskins and the Junior A Niagara Falls Tyees.

Dietrich, however, has been reluctant to talk about his overtime heroics or admit he's made a habit of collecting big goals.

"I've never really kept track of them," says the employee of Waterloo Community Services who works as a swimming pool and arena supervisor.

"I'm just happy they're going in and we're winning," he adds.

"Guys like Cec Hoekstra, Ron Smith and John Beechey are doing all the work."

Hoekstra, a 36-year-old former pro, won't be in the lineup for the fourth game of the series. He suffered a broken toe Tuesday when struck on the right foot by a shot from the stick of teammate Doug Kelcher and then, perhaps favoring that injury, pulled a groin muscle.

Smith took Hoekstra's place at centre late in the third game and helped to set up Dietrich's game winner.

If Hornets can win the senior title, it would give Hoekstra a share in most of the major North American hockey championships. He was on a Memorial Cup winner in St. Catharines, a Western League champ in Winnipeg and an American League title-holder with Cleveland Barons.

In addition, he was summoned to the National Hockey League by Montreal Canadiens on three occasions when that club won the Stanley Cup but wasn't called on to play.

Hornets will give veteran goalie Bost Burley a rest in Thursday's fourth game. The 41-year-old was a standout Tuesday, controlling rebounds expertly and making 34 saves including a penalty shot by George Hill.

Hurley, who has played 56 of the 81 Galt games, will be replaced by Ken Broderick.

Cory Overcomes Thorns in Side to Win Colling

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

"A stitch in time" helped give Prince Edward Collegiate's Paul Cory permanent possession of the Ken Colling Memorial Trophy, Wednesday.

Cory had to rid himself of a painful 'stitch' in his side to complete what he described as the most difficult of his three Ken Colling victories. "It first began to bother me in the Belleville - Trenton relay race and it kept coming back in practice," he explained. "It was pretty bad throughout the early stages of the race. I thought at one point that I might not be able to make it, but I finally got rid of it near the YMCA."

Another "pain in the side" of the Picton runner was Quinte Secondary School's Gerard Farrell who led the race until the Victoria Avenue back stretch and dogged Cory's footsteps for much of the 4½-mile distance.

Despite the push by Farrell, Cory's winning time was only 22:02.5, 34 seconds slower than his record - setting pace of last year. "I think that the tension of trying to win it for the third time helped slow me down a little," offered the Picton champion.

The second - place finish by Farrell was one of a number of unexpectedly strong showings by some of the younger runners in the race. The grade 11 Quinte runner finished 40 yards back of the winner with a time of 22:36.8, but was 20 yards ahead of last year's runner-up Larry Ferguson of Picton.

Tom DaSilva, a grade 11 student from Napanee finished in fourth spot, while Farrell's classmates Ron Bell and Roger Ray held down the fifth and sixth positions.

Perhaps the greatest surprise of the race was King George grade eight student, John Shepherd who finished in 11th spot. A week ago, Shepherd was a member of a King George team that finished a creditable tenth in the annual Belleville to Trenton relay.

Veteran Bay of Quinte track performer Dave Grant of Moira wound up seventh, while 1970 third place finisher Chris Conder of Picton slipped to eighth place and Quinte's Jim Farrell tumbled from fourth to tenth.

Dave Robbins of Campbellford held the ninth spot to round out the top ten runners in the race.

A total of 61 competitors from the Belleville secondary schools, Napanee, Picton, OSD and Campbellford took part in the race.

The triple win by Cory was only the third time in the 27-year history of the event that the feat has been accomplished. Jim Green and Bill Yerex were the only other runners to match Cory's feat.

Next year a new trophy will be offered with Cory maintaining permanent possession of the current award.

The long distance race for local secondary school distance runners commemorates former Intelligencer sports editor Ken Colling.

And Then There Was One

A crowd of 62 runners charged the starting line at the 27th annual Ken Colling Memorial Run yesterday, but the traffic jam quickly thinned out until most of the field was straggling far behind Paul Cory as he crossed the finish line in 22:02.5 minutes later to become only the third triple winner in the history of the event. The grade 13 Prince Edward Collegiate student, who hopes to attend an American university on a track scholarship next year will get to maintain permanent possession of the trophy.

Lacrosse Officials in Demand

Belleville minor lacrosse, which has sticks in the ready" for the upcoming season still has one major setback towards a successful season facing them — not enough referees.

The group currently has about six officials willing to donate their time, but since all but one of these are already involved with coaching or in an executive capacity there is an acute need for at least six more full time refs.

"We had about a dozen minor hockey referees turn out to a meeting and indicated that they were interested in helping out, but when we held a clinic only one showed up," stated Belleville Minor lacrosse president Roy Payne. "It's a shame that more of them didn't follow through. With that many people involved it would have meant that each one would have only had to work about one night a week."

The minor body, which has about 270 boys and 18 teams involved in its program operates on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and occasionally Thursday nights. Last season a total of ten referees were on hand to work the various contests.

Instructions and rule books will be made available to anyone interested in officiating minor lacrosse, and as Payne points out, "referees who show they're qualified will get a chance to work some Quinte Junior League contests, which is a fairly well-paying proposition."

Coaching is an extremely straightforward profession; all one has to do to retain his position is win.

So it follows that a hockey league like, say, Chicago Black Hawks, with only Stanley Cup wins to their credit in their 35 years of existence, might frequently be in the market for unfamiliar faces.

No less than 21 different countenances have appeared behind the Chicago bench since the club's inception. The number is in direct proportion to a team's success.

Toronto Maple Leafs, for example, have used a mere ten pilots over the same period, but the Leafs have won 11 Stanley Cups. Similarly, Montreal Canadiens have employed only a dozen different coaches in collecting the big mug 14 times.

Detroit Red Wings had the most enviable track record, winning seven Stanley Cups with their first five coaches from 1926-56. But the merry-go-round is about to begin, now that the Wings have been out of the playoffs in four of the last five seasons, and knocked off in the first round in their 1969-70 appearance.

Detroit management is currently operating on a "one season-one coach" basis, with Bill Gadsby, Sid Abel and Ned Harkness employed in the past three seasons. Lloyd's of London would not sell Mr. Harkness life insurance.

An offer to coach Chicago Black Hawks used to carry as much prestige as a date with a box constrictor. But those were the bleak days when, during one stretch, Chicago made the playoff grade only once in 12 seasons.

The Hawks have only missed the playoffs once in their last eight terms, or since they came under the tutorship of Billy Reay. Ironically, Chicago is now making the other 13 NHL entries look like flyweight opponents. Reay's eight year tenure makes him the most permanent league coaching fixture.

Unlike the Harknesses, Imlachs and Bowmans, Mr. Reay has had no trouble obtaining job insurance. His premiums are known as R. Hull, S. Mikita, T. Esposito . . .

Midget Draft May 19

Coaching can also be an impermanent pastime below the big-time level. But you couldn't tell by Roger Neilson's record.

Wednesday, Neilson signed on for his fifth term as coach of the OHA Junior A Peterborough Petes

At first glance, Neilson's credentials seem impressive. He guided the Petes to an eighth-place playoff berth after joining the club midway through the 1967-68 season. The team jumped to third spot in the tough ten-team group the following year, second in 1969-70, and won the regular season championship this past season.

Unfortunately, "playoff" has been a four-letter word in the Litlock City of late. Always among the league front-runners in the regular schedule, the Petes have been the Junior A counterpart of the New York Rangers, bowing out in the first round of postseason play in four of the last five spring-ups.

Nevertheless, Neilson has signed a one-year contract which reportedly will bring him closer to the $10,000 average earnings of the OHA Junior A coaching fraternity. Peterborough management has been paying less than the norm for Neilson's services, partly because the club is a publicly-owned entity. Many of the league entries thrive on the support of well-heeled patrons.

Neilson's first chance to keep Peterborough in the league driver's seat comes May 19, when he sits down with other OHA A talent scouts at the annual junior draft of over-age midgets and juveniles.

The player selection, traditionally staged in the home of the league's regular season champions, will be held at Peterborough's I ock Haven Motor Hotel.

Garrett Went South

Many Junior A watchers must have been surprised that OHA champion St. Catharines Black Hawks didn't pick up flashy John Garrett from Peterborough when they advanced against Quebec Remparts; the Hawks actually DID name the Trenton hockey grad as one of the two goalkeepers they are allowed to pick up, but round 3 of the draft malaise they didn't notify Garrett in time and when they got around to it, found that Garrett had left for sunny Florida after finishing his year at Trent University. Garrett, who has been the top junior goalkeeper in Canada in his two years with the Petes, is a good bet to be among the first half-dozen players chosen in June's annual National Hockey League draft. That popular theory going around last year that Montreal's Amerkoal League Voyageurs were good enough to join NHL ranks wasn't far from the truth; the 1969-70 AHL champions graduated coach Al MacNeil and players Rejean Houle, Jack Norris, Dennis Hextall, Jude Drouin, Bob Sheehan, Phil Roberto, Marc Tardif, Guy Charron, Guy Lapointe and Pierre Bouchard to NHL action this season. One of the most revered scoring records in hockey could fall within the week; Jean Beliveau's 76 goals in Stanley Cup playoff competition leave him within striking distance of the all-time record total of 82 held by "Rocket" Richard; Doc Rocket scored his in 133 playoff games, Jean 18 of them were game-winners, including six in overtime; Beliveau has played in 156 playoff games, been credited with a record 94 assists, and has compiled a record total of 172 playoff points. The Habs' John Ferguson, currently sitting out a back injury, holds playoff penalty record, having logged 232 minutes in 77 post-season appearances.

Foley Grew On Hawk Fans

CHICAGO (C) — Rick Foley's name didn't ring familiar to 20,000 partisan Chicago hockey fans Tuesday night as the Black Hawks went through a pre-game warmup before opening the Stanley Cup final against Montreal.

But they were destined to know the likeable, 25-year-old native of Niagara Falls, Ont., much better before the evening was over.

For one thing, at six-foot-four and more than 220 pounds, he's hard to overlook.

And when the Hawks went on to take a 2-1 overtime win, Foley played a significant role after taking over Doug Jarrett's spot on defence after the second period.

The two teams continue their best-of-seven National Hockey League round here tonight at 8:35 p.m., EDT with CBC-TV providing coverage on the national network before moving to Montreal for games Sunday afternoon and Tuesday night.

But whether Foley has another opportunity to prove himself depends on whether centre Pit Martin, who aggravated a knee injury in Chicago's semi-final game with New York Rangers last Tuesday, can play.

Martin didn't dress Tuesday, giving the young defenceman from Port Colborne, Ont., a chance to break the Chicago lineup, and coach Billy Reay listed the veteran centre as "doubtful" for tonight's game.

Reay said he had no hesitation throwing the rugged Western Hockey League all-star defenceman into the game after he benched Jarrett in the third period. The veteran Chicago blueliner had allowed Montreal's Jacques Lemaire to go around him in the second period for Montreal's lone goal.

"My legs felt like they weighed 300 pounds apiece," Foley recalled Wednesday of Reay's sudden decision to use him in a crucial situation with Montreal holding a 1-0 lead.

"He moves the puck real well, surprisingly well for a big man," said Reay, while admitting the gamble could just as easily have backfired. "Yes, he could have cost us the only mistake, but he didn't."

Foley logged a record "208 or 210 minutes" by his own count in WHL penalty boxes this season but denies the intimidation mark against him is his biggest asset.

"My main function is getting the puck out of our end. Sure I like to use the body. . . But I think the fact that I can move the puck is why I'm here at all."

Foley played junior A hockey with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association series but "got fed up" with the game at 17 and quit for a professional baseball career in the Philadelphia Phillies system.

He tired of that sport after a year and returned to Canada, joining St. Thomas, Ont., Junior Bs.

Then followed three years at Charlotte, N.C., in the Eastern League before Portland took him from Toronto in 1966 for $15,000 in the reverse draft.

Whitey Biggest Helper

CHICAGO (CP) — Pat Stapleton's assist Tuesday night in Chicago Black Hawks' 2-1 Stanley Cup win over Montreal Canadiens tied a National Hockey League playoff mark—most assists, 13, in one playoff.

Whitey, as his team-mates call him, collected his 13th assist of this year's post-season play and tied the playoff mark for defencemen set by Tim Horton in 1962, when Horton was with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Stapleton, should he continue his present pace, is almost certain to surpass the 18 assists recorded by team-mate Stan Mikita in 1965.

Montreal established three of the team marks: Most goals by both clubs in a seven-game series, 34, when they eliminated Boston Bruins in the quarter-final this season; most goals by a club in a seven-game series, 23, against Boston; and most goals by both teams in a six-game series, 46, when the Habs put out Minnesota North Stars.

Canadiens captain Jean Beliveau, with 18 points in the playoffs, extended his post-season career records total to 172 points and most assists (94) while extending his power-play goal production to 35.

Other team records broken or extended during the current playoffs:

—Most losses by home teams in one playoff year: 16 in 36 games.

—Most players in playoffs: 41, Montreal.

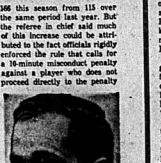
—Most years in final series: 21, Montreal.

Referees' Consistency Satisfies Morrison

CHICAGO (CP) — Ian (Scotty) Morrison, the National Hockey League's referee in chief, said Wednesday he is satisfied with the "consistency" shown by his officials this season.

Morrison has been conducting a survey of the number of penalties called by referees this season in comparison with last. He will present the results to the NHL board of governors at their annual meeting in June at Montreal.

"To put the thing in focus, you must take it on the basis of 456 games played last season and the first 456 of this schedule," Morrison said.



This season's schedule called for the 14 clubs to play 546 games.

The only alarming factor in all the figures was the sharp increase in major penalties, with 524 five-minute sentences being handed out in 456 games this season in comparison with 340 over the same number of games last season.

Of the 524 major's this season, 807 were called for fighting.

However, comparing last year's figures we show we've down about a 100 minor penalties over the 456 game span," he said, explaining that there were 4,209 minor infractions recorded this season as compared with 4,308 during 1969-70.

Misconduct penalties rose to 166 this season from 115 over the same period last year. But the referee in chief said much of this increase could be attributed to the fact officials rigidly enforced the rule that calls for a 10-minute misconduct penalty against a player who does not proceed directly to the penalty box after a minor infraction has been called against him.

Morrison said an average of 10.1 minor and major penalties were called in last season's schedule while this season the per-game average was 10.3.

"This shows consistency and figures on several officials are about the same which makes me happy," he said.

George Chuvalo (left), Canadian heavyweight title-holder, and Jimmy Ellis, former world champion from Louisville, Ky., compare fist sizes in Toronto Wednesday. Both fighters worked out Wednesday in Toronto for May 10 fight and each claimed to be in better condition than they've ever been for any fight. (CP Wirephoto)

Loser First to Get Tired?

TORONTO (CP) — Few can agree on who will win Monday's heavyweight encounter between Jimmy Ellis and George Chuvalo but both camps are united in predicting a superb contest between two well-conditioned boxers.

Both fighters are working out at the Lansdowne Athletic Club and each claims to be in better condition than he has ever been for any fight.

The claims were backed up by the men who climbed into the ring to spar with Ellis, former world champion from Louisville, Ky., and Chuvalo, Canadian title-holder.

"I remember sparring with Ernie Terrell," said light-heavyweight Frankie Bullard who went two rounds with Ellis. "This guy is a lot faster and tougher now than Terrell."

Terrell, also a former world champ, retained that title in a 15-round match against Chuvalo here six years ago.

Asked if he thought Ellis would have the speed to stay away from a pounding by Chuvalo, Bullard nodded and said:

"He's a former world champ. You can take it from there."

Charlie Chase of Montreal, who has been sparring two rounds a day for the last three weeks with Chuvalo, said he's got the bruises to prove that the Toronto fighter is ready.

"I've got a banged-up shoulder and a bruised hip," said Chase. "He's worked me over all right. I don't think George has ever been in this kind of shape for a fight."

Ellis, 30, also went two rounds with Canadian welterweight champion Clyde Gray before sitting down at a news conference with Chuvalo.

The two fighters sat on either side of Billy Conn, who had dropped in hoping to meet Joe Louis who stopped here briefly Tuesday night. Conn twice fought Louis for the heavyweight title in the 1940s.

The Pittsburgh Kid was asked for his prediction of the Monday fight winner.

"It's just a matter of who gets tired first," Conn said.

But neither fighter was worried about tiring.

"I'm in as good a shape as I've ever been in," said Ellis.

"You want to believe I'm ready," said Chuvalo.

The Canadian champ said he has sparred at least 125 rounds in the last five weeks besides his usual road work and other training exercises.

Chuvalo, 33, said he expects to weigh about 214 pounds. Angelo Dundee, Ellis' manager, said his fighter will enter the ring at about 192.

Dundee was particularly pleased with the condition of both fighters.

"Both of these guys are in great shape and I think this is what's going to make this the best of the three fights Monday night."

Irv Ungerman, Chuvalo's manager, said both fighters here are being guaranteed $15,000 each against 20 per cent of the gate at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Ungerman said the biggest prize for the winner, however, could be a match against former champion Muhammad Ali.

Stoneman Kept Getting Stronger

MONTREAL (CP) — Bill Stoneman said that he got stronger as he went along in Wednesday night's 5-1 Montreal Expos' National League win over Houston Astros at Jarry Park.

The right-hander chalked up his third win in four decisions.

"Instead of firing out in the late innings, I threw stronger with better control," he said. "I don't understand it but I'm not complaining."

Stoneman pitched his third complete game of the season, limiting Houston batters to six hits while striking out seven and walking five.

He got a big boost in the runs department with Ron Hunt's four-for-five hitting and Rusty Staub's alert baserunning.

Hunt led off the game for the Expos by sending a Wade Blasingame pitch over the left field fence for his first circuit blast of the year.

With two out, Staub on second and Bob Bailey on first, Hunt caught John Edwards and third baseman Denis Menke trotted to the ground to talk to Blasingame. Staub promptly stole third but was sent back when plate umpire Doug Harvey ruled that time had been called.

Blasingame's next pitch, a third strike to John Boccabella, got past Edwards and Staub raced all the way home on the catcher's late throw to first.

Hunt's single, two wild pitches by Astros' reliever Jim Ray, and Staub's sacrifice fly to deep left field increased the Expos' lead to 3-0 in the second.

Third baseman Bob Bailey's defensive heroics in the third inning got Stoneman out of his only jam in the ball game.

Cesar Cedeno and Edwards led the inning off with back-to-back walks and pinch-hitter Cesar Geronimo followed with a single to left field. Bailey scooped up the ball and nailed Cedeno at home with a perfect strike.

Roger Metzger followed with another single down the left field line and this time it was Edwards who was thrown out at home, Bailey to Bobby Wine to catcher John Bateman.

The win was the Expos' seventh straight against West Division teams in as many games this season and fourth consecutive win against Houston. It was also Stoneman's second straight decision over Blasingame, 2-2.

Tonight, a battle of undefeated pitchers looms as Larry Dierker 4-0, faces Expos' Steve Renko 3-0.

Montreal announced earlier that they had sent pitcher Mike Wegener to Winnipeg, Whips, their affiliate in the International League, to make room on their 25-man roster for Jim Gosger, a versatile outfielder who had been on the injury reserve list.

Wegener, a six-foot, four inch right-hander, was the Expos' eighth selection in the 1968 expansion draft.

In 1969, Wegener had a record of 5-14 and last year recorded three wins in nine decisions. He underwent elbow surgery in the off season between the two years and did not report until the 1970 season was well under way.

Gosger, 26, is a valuable utility player obtained from San Francisco Giants last season. He batted .263 in 1970 with five home runs for Montreal while seeing action in all outfield positions and at first base.

Hoerner's Timing Less Than Ideal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joe Hoerner, Philadelphia's ace reliever, picked a bad time to lose his mastery over former team-mate Lou Brock.

Hoerner's first pitch in relief Wednesday night was belted into the stands by Brock, breaking a 1-1 tie and leading the Louis Cardinals to a 5-1 triumph over the Phillies.

In the other National League games, San Francisco Giants turned back Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1; Chicago Cubs stopped New York Mets 5-4; Montreal Expos ripped Houston Astros 5-1; Cincinnati Reds banged Los Angeles Dodgers 8-4, and San Diego and Atlanta split a double-header, the Padres winning the opener, 5-1 and the Braves the second game, 3-1.

The Brock sendoff must have upset Hoerner's composure. The star fireman, who had carried a 1.36 earned-run-average into the game, served up another home run to Matty Alou, then walked Louis Melendes before taking a shower.

Brock couldn't remember the last time he managed a hit off Hoerner, a lifetime team-mate for four years.

"Except for a bunt in 1962, when Joe was pitching for Houston and I was with Chicago, that was the first time I ever hit the wood on the ball against him," said Brock. "He has struck me out every other time I faced him."

Juan Marichal tossed a three-hitter and Ken Henderson knocked in both runs for San Francisco. After Bob Robertson gave the Pirates a 1-0 lead in the first with his fifth homer of the year, Henderson tied it with a fifth-inning single and drove in the winning run with a seventh-inning roller.

Ron Santo and Danny Breeden ripped two-run singles in the fifth inning and Chicago ace Ferguson Jenkins settled down after a rocky start to tame New York.

Jenkins, a Chatham, Ont., native, struck out 12 and poised his fifth victory after New York reached him for three runs in the first inning.

Bristol Bounced

Dave Bristol, Milwaukee Brewers manager, got thrown out of the game Wednesday night for his vigorous attempts to keep one of his own players, Andy Kosco, from pitch-hitting.

Bristol's efforts failed but he gained some satisfaction as Kosco banged out a two-run single that gave the Brewers a 4-3 victory over Danny McLain and Washington Senators.

Elsewhere in the American League, Vida Blue fired a four-hitter for his seventh victory of the young season as Oakland Athletics trimmed Detroit Tigers 5-0; Leo Cardenas drove in three as Minnesota Twins runs in a 5-3 verdict over New York Yankees and Amos Otis' four-run homer helped Kansas City Royals top Cleveland Indians 4-2.

At Milwaukee, Johnny Briggs was due to bat for the Brewers with two out in the seventh, the bases loaded and Washington clinging to a 3-2 lead. When Kosco stepped into the on-deck circle instead, the Senators made a pitching change, replacing southpaw Joe Grzenda with right-hander Jerry Ganeski.

Bristol then sent Briggs, a left-handed hitter, to the plate, but was stopped short by the umpire.

Bet Messengers Claim New System Hurts

TORONTO (CP) — Messenger betting shops have suffered sharply since the Jockey Club Ltd. instituted a new betting system March 22 which eliminates show betting if there are eight or fewer entries in a race.

"The consensus has it that our business has dropped about 30 per cent", said Earl Timmons, chairman of Racing Course Messenger Association. "Business is down because our customers don't like the new system."

Timmons said his association, which has 60 member shops throughout Ontario, has been handling about $5 million in bets yearly. He said just as much is handled by independent off-track shops.

"A recent survey shows shops are handling about 19 per cent of the potential business," said Timmons. "Messenger betting could be a $100 million a year business if we had the co-operation of the Jockey Club."

Timmons said the survey indicates the public is reluctant to do business because of the "illegal stigma attached to messenger shops."

Turner Advocates Entrenched Rights Bill

TORONTO (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner called Wednesday for an entrenched bill of rights binding on federal and provincial governments alike, which will not be subject to appeal or amendment by a simple act of a successor Parliament.

Mr. Turner also proposed establishment of a Canadian justice commission to enforce the bill of rights, which would be a human rights tribunal, and called for development of a human rights convention for North and South America modelled on the European Convention of Human Rights.

Mr. Turner made his remarks as he accepted the Beth Sholom Brotherhood's 31st Annual Award.

The 1960 Bill of Rights introduced by former prime minister John Diefenbaker was ambiguous in language and latent, he said, and was given the "kiss of death" by academics. He also blamed the courts for not realizing the bill's potential.

The federal justice minister called it "a sad commentary on Canadian human rights consciousness" that the Diefenbaker bill did not become the viable instrument it might have been because it applies only to federal legislation.

Mr. Turner said his department now is considering establishment of a commission, which would have seven members, to explore policies "and above all act as educator in making Canadians aware of their rights and responsibilities in the field of human rights."

Children Said to Need Experience of Day Care

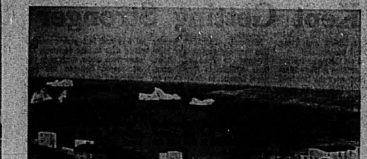
TORONTO (CP) — A case for more day-care facilities and expanded services within the present system was put to the Ontario legislature's human resources committee Wednesday.

Barbara Chisholm, a social worker and teaching consultant to three education institutions, said children need to be exposed to day-care programs but the need has been resisted by parents and municipalities.

Under the program, the province now pays 80 per cent of day-care centre costs but the programs must be initiated by municipalities.

This year the province has budgeted $4.7 million for day-care services, half of which will be provided by Ottawa under the Canada - Assistance Program. About 27,000 Ontario children are in day-care programs.

Miss Chisholm said the province is adequately providing programs for children of needy parents but the department of social and family services should broaden its terms of reference.



She said Ontario is not taking full advantage of the CPSA-Assistance Program to give parents counselling on raising children.

Tim Reid (L—Scarborough East) said he believed 30 per cent of needy parents whose children are in day-care centres would benefit by counselling, especially where one parent is sole supporter of the child.

James Tretter (L—Toronto Parkdale) said that by giving more support to day care programs the province would be protecting taxpayers because the programs could reduce costly rehabilitative measures that may be needed late in a child's life.

Rev. A. W. Downer (PC—Dufferin Simcoe) suggested two types of day care—a "baby-sitting service" and a service for disturbed children.

A Sign of Spring

Icebergs, believe it or not, are a sign of spring in Newfoundland. In early May coastal residents look for the familiar sight of the huge icebergs drifting near the shoreline and coming to rest in a cove or harbor as they ground in the shallow waters. (CP Photo)

Divorce Is Sought

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Film star Donald Sutherland, 35, filed for divorce Wednesday from his estranged wife Shirley, 27, on grounds of "irreconcilable differences."

Both Sutherland, star of MASH, and his wife were born in Canada.

Mrs. Sutherland, a supporter of radical causes, was charged in 1969 with supplying funds to buy 10 hand grenades for the Black Panthers but the charges were later dismissed in court.

Her father, T. C. Douglas, former head of Canada's New Democratic Party, flew to Los Angels to support his daughter soon after federal charges were laid against her.

Investigation Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. justice department is calling a grand jury investigation that may put at least two of the Chicago Seven defendants back on the block for conspiracy charges resulting from anti - war demonstrations in the capital.

Three of the seven who were tried and acquitted on conspiracy charges that grew out of violence at the 1968 Democratic national convention in Chicago have been arrested.

They include Rennie C. Davis, 30, chief organizer of this week's demonstrations, and John R. Froines, 32.

Ceramics Will Be Screened

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer affairs department Wednesday announced new regulations under the Hazardous Products Act setting a lead safety standard for all glazed ceramic articles used for food.

Some glazes release soluble lead compounds when in prolonged contact with acidic foods such as fruit juices.

Glazed ceramic tableware or kitchenware must not release more than seven parts per million of lead in a 24-hour period when allowed to stand at room temperature filled with a solution equivalent in strength to common vinegar.

Consumers were urged to use glass or plastic containers for the storage of acidic foods.

Farmers Reluctant To Gamble

OTTAWA (CP) — Uncertain economic conditions have caused farmers to shy away from taking out long-term mortgages, the federal agriculture department said Wednesday.

The department reported in a statement that in the fiscal year ending March 31, there were 4,117 loans taken out under the Farm Credit Act for a total value of $115,313,000. In the previous fiscal year the figures were 5,326 and $160,466,000.

The greatest decline was in loans for the purchase of land. The department attributed this to unwillingness of farmers to expand their business during a period of uncertainty in the agricultural industry and to lack of alternative employment for farmers who might otherwise sell their land.

Ottawa Puts Question To Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — The city government has decided to toss the beach pollution hot potato to Ontario Premier William Davis.

Mayor Kenneth Fogarty is to see the premier next Tuesday, while in Toronto with other municipal representatives for a series of meetings.

Dr. L. H. Douglas, medical officer of health for the Ottawa region, has said city beaches on the Rideau and Ottawa rivers should be closed because of the high incidence of coliform bacteria due to human waste pollution.

But the Ontario Water Resources Commission, using water test samples from last year, said Tuesday that four of the six city beaches on both rivers should be fit for swimming this summer.

Mayor Fogarty said the city will ask Mr. Davis to come up with uniform standards on pollution "acceptable to all departments."

Quebec May Establish Border Posts

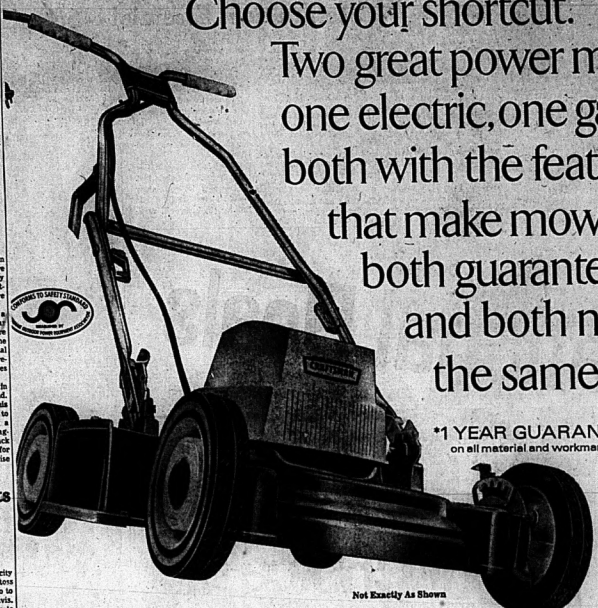
QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec may build border stations to regulate the influx of agricultural products here.

An agriculture department spokesman said in an interview with the Montreal Star the idea is being "seriously considered" at the moment as experts try to find necessary funds to finance the construction and manning of such checkpoints.

Such stations would probably first be established along the Ontario-Quebec border, but the spokesman indicated similar steps would be taken along the New Brunswick-Quebec frontier.

Legislation was introduced last Wednesday in the national assembly to empower the Quebec agricultural products bureau to seize products that have entered the province illegally.

The prime target of the bill is Ontario eggs which Quebec claims are being black marketed here, thus cutting deeply into profits of domestic producers.



Ontario claims that Quebec chicken raisers are doing the same thing there with broiler chickens.

'Don't Eat Swordfish', Says Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration advised the public today to stop eating swordfish because 25 per cent of all samples purchased were contaminated with poisonous mercury.

Government officials acknowledged the warning probably would destroy the U.S. swordfish industry.

It is "particularly important" that children and women of child-bearing age refrain from consumption of the seafood, the FDA said following completion of a three-month government testing program for mercury in swordfish. A group of Canadian and American medical experts endorsed its findings.

"People extensive recalls by major distribution chains, despite FDA seizures totalling 232,000 pounds," and despite overall co-operation of swordfish hunters in withholding up to four million pounds from the market, the agency is still "eating swordfish available to the public at or over the guideline," said FDA Chief Charles C. Edwards.

"On this basis and in view of full evaluation of test data by FDA and by outside experts, the FDA has no choice but to recommend at this time that the public not eat swordfish," Edwards said in a statement.

Of 923 swordfish samples examined by the U.S. government, five per cent contained mercury below the FDA's safety guideline of 0.5 parts a million. The FDA said the average mercury level was twice the limit with eight per cent of samples containing mercury higher than 1.5 parts a million.

Approximately 26 million pounds of the fish was consumed by Americans last year, with all but four million pounds imported from Japan and Canada. The remainder is caught in coastal waters off the northeastern United States and California.

The U.S. Small Business Administration last week declared swordfish ship owners, processors and distributors eligible for economic disaster loans.

The FDA said limited amounts of swordfish might return to stores if the industry works out an "effective program to certify for marketing the five to eight per cent of each catch likely to meet mercury guidelines."

Edwards emphasized that except for swordfish there is no substantial mercury problem in edible ocean fish. The FDA recently cleared as safe all retail tuna stocks.

Mercury is a metallic poison particularly injurious to the brain, nervous system and kidneys. It has been found polluting the waters of 31 states.

Sterilization Essential - - Scientist

OTTAWA (CP) — The world may gradually accept sterilization as the means to cope with the impending threat of overpopulation, says a Nobel Prize-winning biochemist.

Sir Hans Krebs, in an interview, said western society might do well to make a start now with sterilization of persons convicted of repeated violent crime.

"What I wonder is if the importance of genetic factors are sufficiently appreciated by those who make the laws," he said.

In Communist countries there was far less crime, especially violent crime, than in the Western world because Communist states were extremely ruthless in punishing crime.

"Locked up in prisons or labor camps for long periods, criminals do not reproduce.

"We are too soft," said the Oxford biochemistry professor.

He lectured here to the federal agriculture department's research branch on food metabolism.

Trained in medicine in Germany, he fled to Britain in 1933. His research in biochemistry brought him a Nobel Prize in 1953 for physiology and medicine.

Sir Hans said he sees far greater danger to the world through over-population than through running out of food.

Birth control programs might be feasible in such countries as North America but in such countries as India and China—where illiteracy was widespread and many were hard to educate—it presented special difficulties.

He also said some sections of the population, such as persons of low intelligence, ought not to reproduce, and they were difficult to influence toward voluntary control.

Police Raid Office Of Denturists' Head

TORONTO (CP) — The office of the president of Ontario's dental technicians, who went to jail rather than testify directly to the public, was raided Wednesday by a provincial police officer and an investigator for the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

The two men, armed with a search warrant granted by a justice of the peace, seized more than 30 dentures, business records and impression trays from the Ken Swet Denture Clinic in Scarborough.

Mr. Sweet is president of the Denturist Society of Ontario, which sent a brief to the Ontario government three weeks ago asking that denturists be permitted to sell dentures directly to the public.

Under existing law, false teeth made by denturists can be sold to the public only by dentists.

Societies similar to the Denturist Society of Ontario operate under provincial legislation in British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba.

In an interview, Gordon Smith, a society spokesman said the college's actions have been to parallel what happened in Manitoba before the laws were changed last year.

Mr. Smith said denturists charge from $300 to $1,800 in Metropolitan Toronto for complete denture work, including the technician's services which usually amount to about $50.

He said Mr. Sweet could do all the work for less than a third of the dentist's price.

"I'm out to make as much trouble for the dentists as I can," Mr. Sweet said.

THE WHEELS WERE MADE OF WOOD?

Yes, when roller skates were invented in the 1860's the wheels were wooden. By the 1880's, ball bearings had replaced the wood. Children the world over love to roller skate . . . just as they did a hundred years ago!
Children do love their toys and games but they seem to outgrow them while the things still have years of use to go. Don't store outgrown toys and equipment . . . sell them all with an Intelligencer Want Ad by dialing 962-9171 pronto!

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear D. Steincrohn: I am at least 50 pounds overweight. I can't seem to diet it off. I have asked my doctor about weight-reducing clubs. He laughs! Says if I can't do it by myself, I don't deserve to lose. Just how do you feel about TOPS or Weightwatchers? I know someone in our office who has lost 25 pounds after joining TOPS. — Mrs. N.

COMMENT: Another instance where doctors have the right to disagree. I have referred many patients who couldn't make the fight against obesity by themselves to Weightwatchers or TOPS. Often these organizations succeeded where I had failed.

I believe it's simply a matter of psychology. It's not shameful, Mrs. N., that "you can't do it by yourself". Many like you, reinforce their will power by being in the company of others with the same goal: loss of excess poundage.

It's certainly better than a lonely, ridiculous course of silly dieting that excludes sufficient amounts of vitamins, minerals, proteins. These "lose fast" formulae are as ineffective and harmful as "get rich quick" plans offered by financial quacks. In the one health, in the other you lose your wealth.

Ideally, of course, the obese patient should be able to lose by himself by just cutting down on excess calories and having a well-balanced diet. But if you're simply companyminded, then don't hesitate to join a reducing club.

Rivalry, reassurance and spirited aggressiveness against excess poundage often produce weight reductions in apparently helpless fat people. Frankly, I don't believe that any weight problem is a laughing matter.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have just discovered that I have diabetes. My doctor wants me to be on a strict diet and take insulin. But a friend of mine has just told me that if I go on a diet of black bread the sugar will disappear and I won't need shots. Do you agree? — Mr. O.

COMMENT: Bosh! Fiddlesaddle! Or, to bring you up to date: Nuts! — as the general said at the Battle of the Bulge.

• • •

Dear Dr. Seincrohhn: Apropos your column remarks of last week and of earlier wives nag their husbands into good health, have you heard this one? "The wife who uses a little horse sense never becomes a nag." — A Reader

• • •

For Mr. P.: I agree that the skin is often overlooked as an important, complicated mechanism which contributes to our well-being as well as to our appearance.

For example, I have just come across this information: Each square inch of skin contains 78 nerves: 650 sweat glands: 19-20 blood vessels: 78 sensory apparatuses for hear; 12 sensory apparatuses for cold; 1,300 nerve endings to record pain; 19,500 sensory cells at the ends of nerve fibres; 180-185 pressure apparatuses for the sense of touch; 95 - 100 sebacious glands; 65 hairs and muscles 19,500,000 cells.

All in one square inch! This should give you an idea Mr. P., that apparently lazy skin is a busy place. But frankly, sometimes I wonder about the absolute infallibility of such statistics. Who does the counting? And how?

Ontario Government Agencies Should Follow Suggestions

TORONTO (CP) — Government departments and agencies should not be allowed to "dumb their noses" at recommendations by the Ontario government's central supply division, the public accounts committe was told Wednesday.

Departments and agencies should be on the defensive to prove they can make this purchase more cheaply, said James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) and Donald Macdonald (NDP—Toronto York South).

They asked why the Ontario Provincial Police and the departments of correctional services and agriculture could decide not to buy vehicles through the department of transport, as central supply recommended.

Sean Kelly, executive director of central supply, said the division can only draw up standards and say where the purchase should be made.

The treasury board, as the government exec, must issue directives to departments and agencies, he said.

Since central supply was set up in 1968, no mandatory directives have been issued, he said.

Mr. Kelly said in the next few months central supply will ask the treasury board to issue directives on purchasing vehicles, furniture, paper, office equipment, photo copying, printing, duplicating and servicing of office equipment.

He predicted 20 or 40 directives by the end of the year.

When then-treasurer Charles MacNaughton announced the division in 1967, he claimed it could save $10 million, although he gave no time limit.

In a speech last month in Thunder Bay, James Auld, minister of public works, said central supply has resulted in a $2 million saving so far.

Central supply estimates the government makes $500 million in purchases annually, not counting real estate.

Mr. Kelly said the division is starting with items that account for significant expenditures.

Mr. Macdonald asked whether Robin Clarke, the former executive director who resigned late last year, left central supply because he thought too many exceptions were being made to purchasing recommendations.

T. R. Hilliard, deputy minister of public works, said Mr. Clarke started his own business 18 months before his resignation and if he had stayed, it would have mant a conflict of interest.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Rebels Don't Cause Revolt

One of the main reasons people think so poorly (and therefore draw such mistaken conclusions from their thinking) is that they fail to understand the nature of "opposites".

Most of us reason something like this: wet and dry are opposites. Therefore, the more wet you are, the less dry you are, and vice versa. This is impeccable logic, and is also true.

We then proceed from there to abstract qualities, like freedom and security. In one sense freedom and security are opposites; and so we reason: the more freedom we have, the less security, and the more security, the less freedom.

But this is utterly false. Freedom and security are polarities along the same axis, and not opposites on the same order as wet and dry. They do not deny or cancel out one another, but sustain each other.

Consider what the idea of "freedom" is rooted in. It is rooted in choice. If you have no choice, you have no freedom. If you are hungry, you must eat what is available, or you will die. If you are hungry, you must satisfy your appetite before anything else; you have no real freedom to choose fisher or higher goals when your stomach is empty.

If freedom is rooted in choice, and if the man who has no choice has no freedom, then the larger the number of choices, the larger the amount of freedom.

And what gives us the largest number of choices? The amount of security we enjoy. If many kinds of jobs are available, we have the freedom to choose any; if only one, we must choose that. If we live in a society that will not let us starve, we have more freedom than if we live in a society where we must support certain leaders or parties in order to make sure we get enough food.

In the personal, social and political realms, freedom and security are not opposites like wet and dry; but polarities that work together to sustain the human person at the maximum of his abilities. Without freedom, security is slavery; without security, freedom is an illusion.

Of course, these two may be combined in different measures, and neither must overwhelm the other — freedom must not degenerate into anarchy, nor security into servitude. Each society has the task of finding the just and proper equation for the best operation of its system.

But the point is that freedom and security are not contraries that deny each other; rather they are as essential to each other as the two blades in a pair of scissors. To fail to understand this is to fail totally in grasping the true needs of the human animal.

Color TV Cost At $50 Added

It's the newest in waterbed nightwear. Pull the string and it inflates!

MONTREAL (CP) — A select group from the Montreal business and financial community Thursday saw a demonstration of a color television converter for black-and-white TV receivers that is expected to revolutionize color television.

The demonstration was put on by Hessel Investments Ltd. of Montreal, which financed development of the invention of Frederick V. Topping of Toronto.

Billy Hessel, president of Hessel Investments, said the converter is designed to bring color to standard black-and-white TV receivers.

However, he added, that the incorporation of the converter during the manufacture of black-and-white TV sets will result in color television "at a price substantially below the current cost of color TV sets."

The converter would eliminate the highly-expensive color TV tubes and produce color pictures with the use of the ordinary black-and-white tube. It therefore would eliminate the radiation hazards resulting from the high-voltage color tubes.

He said he expects the converter to be available to owners of black-and-white sets before the end of this year.

Black-and-white television sets equipped with the converter during the manufacturing stage are expected to cost between $50 and $100 more than standard black-and-white sets.

People with black-and-white sets will be able to buy, for between $50 and $100, the converter units which are placed in front of the conventional sets.

Lawrence Will Inquire

If any Ontario doctors are receiving upwards of $200,000 annually from the provincial government's health care scheme, in all probability a big percentage of the money is going for clinic and staff expenses.

This is the feeling of Dr. Richard T. Potter, MPP for Quinte, following Thursday's announcement that Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence would investigate about 50 doctors who have charged the Ontario Health Services Insurance plan the most.

Outside the Legislature Mr. Lawrence said he was shocked at some of the payments which showed that some doctors are getting more than $200,000 a year from OHSIP.

The health minister said these were gross payments and did not represent personal income, but said the figure did not include what doctors were getting through private insurance companies or through additional billings from patients.

Today from Queen's Park, the Quinte riding representative said he didn't know much about the pending investigation but offered a possible explanation for some of the seemingly high total billings.

Many doctors, he said operate their own X-ray departments and have to employ many consultants.

"I would think it likely that in such cases as much as 65 per cent of the over-all billings would go to pay office overhead, consultants and secretarial help" he said.

At the same time Dr. Potter said the government investigation would be a double check on possible excessive billings by doctors.

He agreed that the figures made it seem that some doctors were making a killing but suggested the OHSIP computers don't break down individual bills from doctors.

Whites in North Complain About Discrimination

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A group organized to fight what it claims is increasing discrimination against white northern residents says support is growing rapidly.

A spokesman said the group, Northerners United for Equality, is gaining support from business, professions and government.

Mike Thomas, vice-president of the group, said that since the territorial government moved to Yellowknife in 1967, "they have done nothing but widen the gap and build a wall between the natives and the white people."

Mr. Thomas said the objectives of the group are "definitely not" racial.

"We are not against the Indian, but against the maladministration by the government."

Mr. Thomas said the territorial government appeared to think that whites do not belong in the North.

"They think we're invading their (the natives') kingdom."

William M. McAvoy, 51, 3rd concession of Thurlow township, died in the wreckage of this pickup truck when it slammed into the side of a CPR diesel engine at Mitchell Sideroad. Truck was rolled 100 feet down the right-of-way and up against telegraph pole.

Truck Hits Diesel

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A 51 - year - old Thurlow township resident lost his life Thursday afternoon in a truck-train crash on Mitchell Sideroad four miles east of the city limits.

Instantly killed when the pickup truck he was driving struck the side of the lead CPR freight diesel was William Mark McAvoy, RR 6, Belleville who lived in the third concession.

Provincial Police said Mr. McAvoy was southbound on his way to work at Point Anne when he apparently failed to see the westbound freight.

The pickup truck was rolled along the side of the railway embankment for about 100 feet and was slammed into a telegraph pole. The truck was completely demolished with parts strewn along the right of way.

The long freight was not brought to a halt until about a half mile west of the accident scene.

Police said the impact of the truck striking the side of the diesel units damaged the diesel's brake mechanism air tanks and ripped off air valves.

The engines had to be taken in to Belleville for repairs before the freight could proced.

Wider Fluctuation Allowance Being Sought for German Mark

BONN (AP) — The West German cabinet met today to draw up proposals it hopes its five Common Market partners will adopt to cope with the monetary crisis brought on by the flood of American dollars into Western Europe.

The Bonn government, a key to the crisis because of its exceptionally strong currency, does not plan to revalue the deutschmark unilaterally, government spokesman Conrad Ahlers reported. He said Bonn also would not seek revaluation of the currencies of all six Common Market countries because all six would never agree on such a move.

Indications are that the West Germans, instead, will seek a wider fluctuation limit for the European currencies than the International Monetary Fund now permits. At present, central banks must buy or sell U.S. dollars to keep the exchange rate of their currency within three quarters of one per cent of its pegged value.

Indications are that if the West Germans don't get their way in Brussels Saturday, Brandt's government will go ahead with its measures alone.

It could, for example, let the mark float in the world's money markets, with the central bank supporting it within limits set by the government rather than by the International Monetary Fund.

Currency Crisis Seen As Threat to NATO

Informed sources here say the main cause of concern is a persistent background of protectionist charges which the United States and the six European Economic Community countries level against each other's trade practices. All seven nations are among the 15 members of NATO.

Survivors of Mudslide

Slide's Survivors Nervous

'Build' Exhorts Town's Mayor

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que. (CP) — Mayor Laurent Lavoie called on the residents of this disaster-stricken community Thursday to "roll up our sleeves and build again."

He said at a meeting to launch a national appeal for financial aid that the northern Quebec village is a proud community, and warned "we will not become a ghost town."

But the mayor admitted that there was a "certain panic" among the residents, many of whom saw their neighbors' homes swept into a quarter-mile-long crater, up to 200 feet deep, late Tuesday night.

Latest official estimates are that 31 persons are missing and feared dead after a landslide of 15 million tons of sand and clay that swallowed up 44 homes, a bus and an undermined number of cars.

The mayor's fear of panic was borne out as many residents voluntarily began to pack their belongings and pull out of the stricken community.

Already, some 130 families of the total 1,300 residents have been evacuated.

Several incidents of looting were reported in the community during the evacuation, but provincial policemen said they knew of no specific incidents.

A QPP spokesman said, however, that 80 men were on duty patrolling the area to respond to any further emergencies.

Many residents vowed never to return to the community, which looks as if a huge crater has been hewn out of the earth at the edge of it.

Jacynthe Riverin, 18, helped her family move their belongings from their home near the edge of the giant pit.

"No matter what happens now, my mother refuses to come back," she said. "She's afraid. Can you blame her?"

A neighbor, Joanne Roy, was in tears as she gathered her possessions and packed them into a car.

"My father suffered a heart attack this morning because of this," she said.

Rene Plourde watched the evacuation procedures from the top of a hill.

"I was in one of my friends' house when all of this happened," he said. "It was terrible. It was unbelievable.

"We were about 300 yards from the area. I saw homes go into the hole and I saw the mud just suck them up. It was all over in 15 minutes."

Leo Bourgeois, who came to the village nine years ago, stood at his front window Tuesday night and watched in horror as his eldest son's house tumbled into the abyss of clay and mud.

"His was the first to go. It was the first to fall," he said. "They'll never find Gilles, not at the bottom of that."

About 10 homes slipped away in one gulp about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday and the remainder slid down later as the earth continued to give way.

Mr. Bourgeois, once an enthusiastic president of a local development organization working to attract young married couples to the community, appealed publicly to Premier Robert Bourassa Thursday to declare the village "uninhabitable, a danger zone."

Slide Could Have Been Prevented

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Toronto scientist said Thursday the geological hazards of the St. Jean Vianney area could have been overcome by preventive engineering.

Dr. Cameron Kenney, chairman of the department of civil engineering, said the clay cliffs along the rivers flowing into the St. Lawrence are among the most landslide-prone formations in the world.

He said preventive engineering action would have been to decrease the angle of the slope by cutting the cliff back and to reduce the water pressure in the soil by installing drains.

"The cost would not be small in terms of dollars, but it would be small in terms of the damage done."

Organizer Emphasizes His Camp No Festival

Reports of a rock festival in Marmora township proved to be unfounded today, as its promoter Ernest Rossi told The Intelligencer that "it's all misunderstood."

Posters, picked up by the Ontario Provincial Police in the Kitchener-Waterloo area and forwarded to Hastings among Marmora township county council, awakened local councillors that a rock festival drawing thousands was in the making.

But Mr. Rossi, history department head at Port Colborne High School, now on sabbatical leave to obtain a master's degree in outdoor education at Michigan State University, says he plans only a cultural - educational camp

The poster that aroused during August, township officials and citizens was released by a Canadian student without Mr. Rossi's permission, he said today in a telephone conversation from East Lansing, Michigan.

The poster, inviting people to a "communal culture camp" on an undisclosed 200-acre site in Marmora township, advertised it as "the biggest happening in Ontario this summer, an experiment in environment-listen-living, a space gathering of musicians, poets artists and YOU living, loving, learning." It urged "a week of hustle, hassle, pollution and police, go to camp." Reservations are unnecessary, but no cost was mentioned.

The poster triggered discussion of the camp at the last meeting of Marmora township council, but officials and a member of the public in attendance refused to disclose details.

As one said, "We don't want too much getting out about this."

Councillors agreed to meet Mr. Rossi again in June to discuss the camp that they feared was merely a cover for a festival, but, said Reeve John Wilkes last night to The Intelligencer: "as far as we're concerned, it's off."

The township, he indicated, would ask the promoter to comply with the stringent provisions in the new festival bylaw passed recently by Marmora township. It is the same bylaw passed by Madoc township in an effort to thwart the Rock Acres Peace Festival slated for July 3, 4 and 5 at the James Quinlan farm near Queensboro.

Mr. Wilkes refused to disclose when the bylaw was passed.

He said that Mr. Rossi, in his first representation to council, had described the camp as an educational-cultural event, drawing no more than 200 people during the month of August.

"It was misrepresented to us," said Reeve Wilkes last night. "He probably had good intentions in the beginning, but these things get out of hand. Either he was lied astray or had pressure put on him."

Not so, said Mr. Rossi this morning .

"It's all a misunderstanding and I'm coming back here in June to explain my plans all over again," he said. "Those people misled me because of the rock festival in Madoc. If it's that bad up there I don't want anything to do with it."

A teacher for 11 years, who "loves teaching and doesn't want to get out of it", Mr. Rossi said he would be fired if he were involved in anything immoral or illegal. He said he had made this clear to township council.

His purpose in holding the camp, he said, was to put into practice some of the theories he had been learning while pursuing his interest in outdoor education at Michigan State.

"I'm worried about Canada," he said, "about preserving its culture."

The camp would draw senior high school and university students to talk with writers, poets and other experts about things young people are interested in. Some of the subjects: organic agriculture, landscape development, homesteading in Canada, pollution, as well as literature and art.

Dismayed by the poster that went out over his name without his knowledge, Mr. Rossi said he would make one more attempt to persuade the township of his good intentions. He said the CBC was interested in giving coverage to his pilot project in combining outdoor education with attempts to outline and preserve a distinctively Canadian culture.

Bike Safety Posters

The Belleville Bicycle Safety Committee yesterday announced that Linda Johnson, 11, of 34 Robertson Lane, and Tom Stather, 13, of 80 Rollins Drive, have won grand prizes for their school posters advertising Bicycle Safety Week ,May 10 - 15. Both will receive b icycles donated by local merchants. Here, city police inspector Ralph Blatchford, left, and safety officer, Corporal Robert Hall, right, help Bob Burnett, vice-principal of Sir John A. Macdonald School display the posters at the police station.

Rock Acres Festival Could Face Test Case

Madoc township moved this week to ban the Rock Acres Peace Festival slated for July 3, 4, and 5 on the James Quinlan farm near Queensboro.

It refused a request from Leon Quinlan, 27, and his brother James Jr. 32, for a seven-day extension in order to meet the requirements of the township's rival bylaw.

The decision of council was unanimous.

Because the Quinlans have no telephone, they could not be reached for comment on the decision.

However, a spokesman for the family said before the Wenesday night council meeting that the festival was still on.

The festival on the Quinlan's 200-acre farm near Queensboro has been in the planning stages since last September and Madoc township council's Wednesday night that 11,000 tickets have been sold from Montreal west to London, Ont.

When tickets and posters were first turned up by the OPP in Stirling, the township went to county council for restrictive legislation. The county, unable to pass bylaws of this nature, sought advice from Quinte MPP, now minister without portfolio, Dr. R. T. Potter, and Hastings MPP Clarke Rollins.

A Feb. 24 letter from the deputy minister of municipal affairs to Dr. Potter said that action could be taken by the townships under two provincial acts: the Municipal Act and the act restricting land use in the province. A bylaw passed some years ago by Modoute township had stood up in the courts and effectively prevented the holding of the Mariposa folk festival near Orillia.

A similar bylaw, the deputy minister indicated, would serve the needs of Hastings county townships wanting to curb the holding of rock festivals.

"Our government has no intention of banning festivals as such," Dr. Potter repeated from Toronto this morning.

"Some townships want them. The attorney-general is trying to draw up regulations under which these things can be controlled, but they won't be ready for this summer."

After receipt of the letter from the department of municipal affairs, the county drew up the bylaw subsequently passed by Marmora and Madoc townships.

It requires promoters to meet the provisions of the bylaw 60 days before the event and imposes a maximum fine of $300 for failure to comply.

The bylaw calls for: a licence fee of $500 and posting of a $200,000 insurance bond for public liability and property damage; advance payment of an amount estimated by the OPP as necessary to cover cost of extra policing; deposit with the township clerk of written assurance from the medical officer of health that public health provisions are adequate; posting with the township clerk of a sum estimated in advance as adequate to cover the cost of cleanup of public sites and buildings.

It was to comply with these restrictions that the Quinlans Wednesday night asked for a seven - day extension, refused unanimously by council. Reeve Cecil Woods of Madoc township refused to discuss the merits or the motivation of Leon and James Quinlan jr. to the turndown.

If LEJJ Enterprises continues with its plans, next step is believed to be the taking out of an injunction by municipal authorities to stop the festival. It is the possibility of injunction that puts real teeth into the bylaw.

Picton's Royal Changes Hands

PICTON (Staff) — Construction magnate and former Picton mayor Harvey J. McFarland has transferred his sale of the Royal Hotel.

"I didn't want to say anything before it was signed on the dotted line," said Mr. McFarland, discussing the sale of the town building located centrally on Picton's Main Street. New owners of the hotel are J. Steinberg and Len Kordy, both of Kingston.

Mr. McFarland, who has owned and operated the Royal Hotel for approximately 20 years, said he understands the new proprietors will invest approximately $50,000 to $60,000 in improvements.

"They will set it up as I would have liked to do," predicted the former owner.

A press release announcing this sale was made yesterday morning by Mr. McFarland jr., manager of the Royal Hotel for the past few months. He said that the new owners presumably will apply for a liquor licence for the beverage room. Mr. McFarland jr., thanked Royal hotel patrons on his father's behalf and added that he hoped these persons will enjoy the facilities of the hotel under its new management.

Bus Drivers Get Awards

On Jan. 1, 1970, the Belleville Transit Commission established an incentive award program for their bus drivers.

This program is calculated from the date of the driver's last accident. For a one to five - year period of safe driving, the driver receives $10. Upon completion of a five - year period and over, the bonus is $25. Should he have an accident, his bonus period would be restarted at year one.

Lewis McMullin, manager of the Belleville Transit Commission, said the commission "is very proud of the accident - free record of its drivers."

Construction Produces Parking Problem

The current varied expansion program at Belleville General Hospital is posing an equally varied parking problem at the east end institution. Here (at left) is seen construction underway for the new Edith Cavell School of Nursing, while, above, a security guard struggles with the hospital parking problem. Sign in background says parking is prohibited on ambulance and fire truck route but motorists can't read or completely disregard notices.

Parking Problem Is Byproduct of Hospital Construction

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Hospital construction programs and parking problems go hand in hand.

And with the continuing construction at Belleville General Hospital, there is no exception.

Currently under way at the Belleville hospital are a number of separate projects including construction of the new Edith Cavell Nursing School; an underground pedestrian tunnel leading from the nurses' residence; demolition of the old east hospital wing and preparations for construction of the new administration building.

And somehow, somewhere, hospital authorities and the general contractor, M. Sullivan and Sons of Kingston and Armorior, are doing their best and co-operating to the fullest in providing all the parking space possible.

"You think there are parking problems here at Belleville," said a Sullivan official yesterday. "You should see the problem they have at Kingston."

The Sullivan official said he had been involved in the current Queen's University expansion program as well as hospital construction going on at the same time.

"You are lucky at Belleville," commented the construction official.

A severe winter delayed work on the new Edith Cavell nursing school at Belleville but the Sullivan official said that every effort would be made to complete the building by early in the fall.

Yesterday, the contractor commenced what was termed struct the pedestrian tunnel a "crash program" to coo-leading from the nurses' residence to the new hospital wing.

The new tunnel will intersect with the present tunnel leading from the heating plant area to the hospital.

A "cut and cover" technique will be employed in the tunnel construction.

But this means the doctor's parking area will have to be dug up. In the meantime, the doctors are using a roped off section of the public parking area to the west of the hospital.

At the east end of the hospital, the old central and east wings are being prepared for demolition to make way for the new administration building which will connect the two hospital structures.

Currently the contractor is working on installation of additional elevator equipment in the new $8-million wing opened in late February, 1969. In the meantime, the elevator in the old wing is being kept in service.

But the soon - to - be - demolished wing is now completely vacated and interior demolition is now under way.

In a couple of weeks, exterior demolition will commence to make way for the new administration building.

The new administration structure will cover slightly more ground area than the wing to be demolished and will be the entrance for administration purposes.

The administration wing will blend in with the exterior appearance of the new hospital addition.

Completion date for the administration wing has not been set by the contractor but it is still a year or more away.

The contractor hopes to have exterior work far enough ahead by fall to get on with interior work during the coming winter.

Dock Ready for First Arrival

A few eager beaver pleasure craft owners have had their boats in the water for a week or more, but the first commercial boat of the season into Belleville is expected to arrive this weekend.

Harbor Master Donald Barrett said that Imperial Oil had called to check on water depths and was expected to confirm the arrival of its first oil boat sometime during the weekend.

However, the harbormaster said that a Liquifuels boat may actually be the first commercial craft to arrive.

The Department of Transport buoy tender Kenoki still has not made its way up the bay to replace the flashing light buoys picked up last fall.

In former years, the government dock at Belleville was normally used as winter storage for the flashing light buoys but during the past winter the dock was left bare.

Mr. Barrett said this year was the second time in the past five years that lighted buoys from the Bay of Quinte were winter stored elsewhere.

"It depends which way the buoy tender is travelling when it picks up the buoys," said the harbormaster.

Also, the department is gradually changing its policy and is centralizing the winter storage of buoys.

"The department is finding that winter maintenance, such as painting of the buoys, can be better carried out at central locations," Mr. Barrett said.

Tax Rate Lower, But May Pay More

Stirling property owners will enjoy a slightly lower tax rate this year, but in all probability will wind up actually paying more into the municipal coffers.

This year's residential rate is 22.5 mills as compared to 22.7 mills last year. The commercial and industrial rate is 24.6 mills, down from 25 mills in 1970.

The reason that residential property owners may have to pay more taxes despite the decrease in rates is that the basic shelter exemption paid by the province will be decreased.

Clerk W. L. Pollock noted that the basic shelter exemption this year will be $51.92 instead of $56.92 paid last year.

Key factor in council's ability to lower the mill rate this year was a surplus in the school account. This resulted in a decrease in the school rate from 8 to 7 mills for residential properties and from 9 to 7.7 mills for commercial properties.

The county rate also went down this year from 6.3 mills to 6.1 mills.

As result of the decreases in the school and county rate, council was able to slightly increase the village rate and still end up with a lower overall rate than last year.

P.M. Digresses

Prime Minister Trudeau was in a poetic frame of mind at the recent Liberal fund-raising banquet in Vancouver. He had been speaking in rather abstruse fashion about politics, noting that the Government would not protect efficiency at the cost of pollution, or manufacturers' freedom at the cost of hazardous or fraudulent products when he suddenly went on to speak of some of the intangibles which recall the late President Eisenhower spoke of as the "real treasures of men."

Canadians, he said, must harness technology to serve a culture rooted in tolerance, friendship, love, laughter, privacy and the beauty of the Canadian environment. Such qualities are indeed rare enough in our materialist society and no one can be blamed if they have difficulty linking them up with the harnessing of technology. Still, if Mr. Trudeau was being a little frothy and lapsed into clichés the thought nevertheless was a good one.

The essential point is that mankind must ensure its own physical and spiritual survival. To do this we must take seriously the warnings about over-population and the increasing strain on food and other vital resources. The irony of this is that things like friendship, love and laughter, of which the Prime Minister spoke, tend to flourish more readily in societies where there is want. And yet, even those peoples must have the necessities of life to survive.

Which leads us to ask just how well are we harnessing the fruits of the earth? Few Canadians lack for such essentials, but we wonder at times, while driving in the countryside, if all the available land is being used to advantage.

At the same time we need those intangibles. What about privacy? Well, a man may still enjoy it. And the beauty of the environment? That of course is closely tied in with this pollution headache, and it will not be ensured until every Canadian learns to respect the environment. It will not be ensured by a landscape ravaged, for instance, by litter, like that Nova Scotia beach owned by an American who this year is closing it to the public because of the problems of tourists.

Let us strive to protect the tangible and preserve the intangible in Canada today, for this and future generations.

Royal Visit

The Queen looks fit and youthful as ever as the Royal tour of British Columbia progresses. It does not seem possible that it is nearly 20 years since she ascended the Throne. The welcome accorded the monarch, Prince Philip and Princess Anne in Vancouver and in the interior has been in true western tradition and attests to the warmth of feeling toward the Royal family not only there but throughout Canada.

If there have been rumblings of republicanism in Canada it is as nothing compared with the strength of Canada's Royal links and Commonwealth membership. If in the future such links weaken then will be the time to end, and Prince Philip when he was last here indicated Canada would have to be the arbiter of any change in this regard. Certainly such a time has not yet arrived. Indeed, it may never arrive, certainly not in the near future.

An unhappy coincidence which the Royal family must have noted is that disaster has come to another part of Canada while they have been here. We refer to the collapse of homes in a Quebec community, with considerable loss of life. We recall that when the Royal family was visiting Canada's northland last summer there was that other disaster, an air crash at Toronto airport. But these aside, Royal memories of this visit should be as happy as any in the past.

Repairs Needed

Potholes are not the only signs of damage one observes these Spring days. Roadside signs are also taking a beating, either by natural forces or by vandalism. On the Bay Bridge, for instance, a Highlands of Hastings sign has been severed about in half, while a similar fate has overcome the Massassaga sign at the intersection of the Old Picton Road and Highway 14 past Fenwood Gardens. And speaking of potholes, the new Dundas Bridge route, in the vicinity of Mary Street, is still pretty rough.

MPs No Different

PEI's David MacDonald Set Straight on Security Issue

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Good to hear it officially — not it is about as official as it could get when it comes from the federal Solicitor General Jean-Pierre Goyer, and House of Commons Speaker, the respected Lucien Lamoureux — that every member-$36,000 - a - year Members of Parliament are not special.

Some of them only think they are.

And all of them have contrived, in a collective self-seeking way, to give themselves special economic status through special tax privileges.

A goodly portion of their parliamentary pay is tax - free — under the heading of expenses — and while other Canadians, too, may enjoy tax deductions for some out - of - pocket business costs, the parliamentarians' deal is something else.

They enjoy the same expense allowances in taxation as their electors PLUS the rather extraordinary arrangement of still something more after income tax . . . more than ever before.

Better, far, far better to have raised their pay — the need was real and urgent, and it should have been the substantial increase it is to be — but it should all have been taxable.

The way it is with their special tax deal, the Honorable Members simply do not know how rough they have allowed taxation to get — mainly because they have not felt the full slicing of its cutting edge.

But apart from that not inconsequential fact of serving piece of favoritism, parliamentarians are no different than the rest of us, although many of them have been trying to tell each other they are.

Parliamentarians like ordinary people seem to come and go in generations, only more quickly.

And the younger generation does not remember some things because it never knew them in the first place and did not take the trouble to enquire.

As happened the other day when young (35) Prince Edward Island Conservative David MacDonald got all uptight in the Commons with indignation over the RCMP compiling dossiers on some — but not all, by any means — parliamentarians.

David MacDonald sits as a Tory, but at heart he is a small "l" liberal to the extent that some of his own Conservative colleagues have accused him of being constitutionally a New Democrat.

What Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau would describe as a "bleeding heart," David MacDonald has bled for many causes including Biafra and the liberties of Quebec terrorists.

During his hemorrhaging for the East African rebels, he was bidded a financial pittance without justification — for taking a parliamentary posture which seemed to say: "Sure there is poverty in PEI, but what about Biafra?"

David MacDonald has spilled his blood, sweat and tears in many lost causes, but he distinguished himself as an MP like no other in the Commons, when alone in the House he voted against the Government's anti-terrorist bill during the Quebec FLQ terror crisis.

"Our democracy is a veneer," he told a post-crisis rally of the Emergency Committee for the Restoration of Civil Liberties. "We are a very intolerant people. Our liberalism is superficial at best."

So it had to be David MacDonald who would bleed over the horrendous prospect of the RCMP keeping a running file on some parliamentarians.

Was it the practice of the RCMP "to photograph and in other ways cover meetings in which MPs participate?" he asked in the Commons.

It was a breach of parliamentary privileges, he charged, and accepted a motion saying just that, since such practices of the RCMP could imply "some form of intimidation."

David MacDonald was all upset that Prince Edward Island Premier Alex Campbell's legislature had banned hippies from mass - invading the seafirst province and polluting its beaches.

It was a breach of civil liberties, he felt, "vanity for suggesting that it was at a hippie haven in Gaspe — which ruined the hotel trade — that Paul and Jacques Rose and others convicted or accused of FLQ kidnap-murder terrorism did their summer "training".

Premier Campbell had let drop word that he was going to keep an eye on some parliamentarians, and David MacDonald, all indignation, was in hot civil libertarian pursuit of the facts.

Tough no - nonsense Solicitor General Goyer set him straight on them.

The RCMP "should treat all Canadians alike," he said. "It does not rest with the RCMP to say that because a citizen is a professor, a corporation president or even an MP he enjoys a certain freedom.

"There is no provision in the law that MPs are not also citizens, that they enjoy the immunity to do anything."

Then later, Jean-Pierre Goyer came right out and said it. Yes, although he personally had not seen one, he was "sure the RCMP has dossiers on some MPs."

For example, like former civil servants, and there are some now MPs — who had access to top secret material and requisite clearance by Security and Intelligence Division of the RCMP.

Speaker Lamoureux nailed it down: parliamentarians had known as far back as 1945 — perhaps even long before them — that they were not immune from security surveillance, so why the fuss?

Remember Gerda Munsinger and Prime Minister Pearson calling for the RCMP dossiers of all MPs?

And Secret spy Fred Rose, Member of Parliament for Montreal-Cartier?

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

25 YEARS AGO

May 7, 1951

Over the weekend Belleville had the honor of entertaining the Regional Conference of University Women's Clubs, with delegates from Quebec City to Oshawa. All meetings, dinner on Friday, and luncheon on Saturday were held at St. Thomas' Parish House.

Dr. Alfred Wilkes, of the Dominion Entomological Laboratories here, has been named secretary of the Rotary Club, succeeding Rotarian Carl Crosby.

A meeting of the junior branch of the Hastings and Prince Edward Law Association was held at the home of its president, Alderman William Argue on Charles St.

The stars and bars of the Star Spangled Banner floated with the bright colors of the Union Jack in the Royal York Hotel when 1,500 Rotarians from the United States and Canada mingled for the annual Inter-District three-day convention. Some 45 members of the Belleville Rotary Club, held the convention spotlight at the opening day luncheon. Living up to its reputation of being the b e s t 'singing club' in the far-flung district to which it belongs, the local clubmen received a fine ovation from their fellow American and Canadian Rotarians.

Life's Awkward Decisions

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Life is so full of tantalizing choices that it can sometimes get pretty confusing.

I have just finished reading Weekend Magazine and I am torn in three. I can't decide whether to arrange right now for a cheap but dignified funeral by joining the Memorial Society (P. 4); make myself "sweet and feminine" by juggling a dollar (yes, only one dollar!) for a Beauty Kit worth at least $12 (P.13); or improve my mind by sending in my "winning card" and receiving a set of classical books (back page).

The books have a slight edge, because I might just win a "Weekend in Paris & Dinner in South of France." Of course, if I did win that Villa, (or $20,000 in cash), I wouldn't have to worry about a cheap funeral. And, come to think of it my funeral won't be my worry anyway.

On the other hand, it costs only $5 to join the Memorial Society. I gather that for this modest fee, they will arrange, when my time comes, to just tuck me quietly away with a minimum of fuss and flourishes. And this is fine with me. And think what fun I could have right now with that $500 I had set aside for my final disposal!

But, if I opt for the Beauty Kit, part of the deal is that they will keep sending me these kits every few months at an "incredibly low price," and this would give me a lovely cache of ready - at - hand gifts for teachers (they always like perfume, Mum), sons' girl friends and kind hostesses. And I really could use a few beauty aids myself after this last winter.

If only it were the Memorial Society that was giving you (or me) a chance at that Villa, instead of the Book Club. Once I was installed in my Villa, I could buy all my beauty aids at cheap French prices, and continue to get my culture from paperbacks as I have always done. And not have to worry about my funeral either.

But things just don't work out that way, do they?

Canada and the Monarchy

This is Child Safety Week and Health Minister John Munro has issued the following message in connection with the need to protect children from accidents, in the home and outside.

* * *

These are troubles times for our children. Not only parents but all adults are charged with the responsibility to protect them. They must be allowed to grow to manhood and womanhood with the abilities and tendencies they will need to combat the ills life will bring. Some of those perils need not, or can foresee.

But first we must permit them to grow into adults. The appalling toll of our young people through avoidable accidents is a problem for every Canadian. The automobile takes most of these young lives. Drownings rate next in the list of accident killers of children and youths, followed closely by fire and explosion.

For the very young, those under one year of age, a significant number of accidental deaths each year are attributable to the inhalation or ingestion of food causing obstruction and suffocation, and a further number are related to suffocation in the bed and cradle.

The incidence of poisonings in Canada, as reported to Poison Control Centres, is greatest on those five years of age or all, though most do not result in death. After drugs, household substances are predominant on the list of specific poisoning agents concerned.

All children, but especially the very young, need our protection, through training, education and simply being alert to us for that protection. We must give it to them without hesitation or relaxation.

Let National Child Safety Week be the time to remind us of our responsibilities.

* * *

Canada Safety Council

In 1969, according to the latest figures available, a total of 1,304 Canadian children died from accidents and over half a million were injured before they reached their 15th birthday.

Of the 5,576 traffic deaths, 721 were children under the age of 15. Of 1,358 pedestrian fatalities 527 or 38.8 per cent were children under 15 years of age.

Bicycle fatalities took the lives of 564 of which 265 or 47.0 per cent were among infants, generally due to regurgitation of food or smothering in beds or cradles.

Of 1,186 drownings, 376 or 31.2 per cent were children under the age of 15. Males outnumbered females about 5 to 1.

There were 636 fire fatalities and 141 (22.2 per cent) were children under the age of 10.

Accidental poisoning took the lives of 56 children under 15 years of age: 38 of these happened to children under five.

Every 15 minutes in this nation, a child is accidentally poisoned. Every five minutes, a child is needlessly injured.

More children died from accidents than from the next three causes of child deaths put together — congenital malformations, pneumonia, and cancer.

The most dangerous ages of child accidents are at two and three and the worst times of the day are the late afternoon and the evening hours.

Canada leads the developed countries in the accident rate for children under one year and for children under 15, according to the World Health Organization.

Vancouver Prospect

Mayor Campbell Edgy

Vancouver Sun

While sophisticates can spend their time and money in Hawaii or Fiji, Vancouver's sands are Shangri-la to thousands of the restless youth. Like it or not, they are coming, and they are probably coming in greater numbers this year.

But the view from the beach, at least the beach that he was on this month, is ugly for Mayor Tom Campbell. And upon his return to Vancouver the mayor expressed his view in terms hardly calculated to encourage the tourist trade.

Mr. Campbell's summer holiday invitation, in fact, was for trouble. He predicted it — "We're going to have confrontations, protests, perhaps even violence" — and he is asking for it.

The mayor's retention span is short. It was this sort of talk, his sort of talk, that exacerbated a tight situation last summer. Lessons should have been well-learned from that debacle. Perhaps many people in civic government did learn them. But the mayor is only where he was ever was: cool and good will cooler heads have prepared.

Probe Likely to Show Bills Okay--Potter

Computer records just show that so much money was paid to a certain doctor, Dr. Potter commented. He observed that many patients through OHSIP were "over-utilizing" doctors' services but said if the doctors provided the service they should be paid.

The Quinte riding member was confident that in the vast majority of cases the seemingly high OHSIP payments to some doctors would be found to be legitimate.

"We'll know in a couple of weeks," he said.

The Ontario health minister promised that he would bring in tough legislation that would enable the Health Minister and the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons to discipline any doctors who submit fraudulent bills or improper charges, or give patients poorer service than they need.

Such disciplining would include fines and removing of the doctor's licence to practice.

Mr. Lawrence was replying to charges made by Dr. Morris Shulman, (NDP, High Park) who claimed some doctors were fleecing the government of $100 million annually.

Dr. Bette Stephenson, president of the Ontario Medical Association, said Dr. Shulman's charges were totally inaccurate.

She said only 40 Ontario doctors received more than $100,000 in fees from the government last year and the Association itself has been investigating them. While all investigations are still incomplete "no instances of fraud have been uncovered."

Dr. Shulman charged that some doctors had received more than $200,000 from the 37 private insurance companies participating in the scheme.

The Toronto NDP member said examination of such bills "has revealed practices which are shocking and charges which can only be described as theft from the public purse."

One Toronto physician, he said, was billing the government for seeing 50 patients 25 times a month for treatment of overweight, while another physician was billing the government for seeing more than 150 patients daily.

Dr. Shulman said that five times the number of tonsilectomy operations were done last year were done two years ago, while in the same period procedures such as laboratory tests have increased 16 times.

Doctors, he said, were able to get away with such practices because there is "no practical spot-checking system."

A year ago, he said, he had visited OHSIP headquarters and found one clerical clerk was randomly checking the $500 million in annual bills submitted by the province's 11,000 doctors.

"At the rate she was going it would have taken her 20 years to check every doctor in the province.

"When I complained about this to the previous Minister of Health (Thomas Wells) he did nothing.

"Now the chickens have come home to roost," he said.

Mr. Lawrence conceded that since the plan was instituted on Oct. 1, 1969, there had been no adequate or proper system of checking bills submitted by doctors, but noted the problem has been simplified now that all private medical insurance is ended.

"We couldn't have done it unless we had 2,000 civil servants working full time on it," he said, adding that he didn't even know if one civil servant had worked full time on spot checks.

Consequently it was impossible to determine at present whether Dr. Shulman's charges that $100 million in doctors' bills could be saved annually were accurate.

"We are just not capable of assessing it right now or telling any figure on it," he said.

Mr. Lawrence added that the capacity of the computer being used to handle doctors' bills would be increased and within six months an adequate system of spot checking would be in effect.

Meanwhile the computer had already uncovered cases involving "irregular or strange amounts of billing" such as doctors charging for and found one clerical clerk was randomly checking the $500 million in annual bills submitted by the province's 11,000 doctors.

Mr. Lawrence said there were three purposes of the investigation which he will launch into the 50 doctors receiving the most money from the government.

He wants to find out if there were any cases of outright fraud — instances in which doctors charged for work they didn't perform.

He also wants to know if doctors charged for more work than was actually done and if some doctors saw patients more often than was medically necessary.

After the 50 top doctors are investigated similar checks "will be made all the way down the line," Mr. Lawrence promised.

However, he emphasized the investigation was "not a witch hunt and I am not accusing anybody of anything right now."

Meanwhile Dr. Maurice LeClair, federal deputy health minister, has called for a reassessment of "unreasonably high" doctors' incomes across Canada.

Urging a medical system relevant to the needs of people rather than doctors, Dr. LeClair writes in the current issue of Medical Post that the profession is simply making too much money.

Dr. LeClair, 43, who has held the deputy minister's job for a year, suggested that other provinces might follow Newfoundland's lead in getting doctors to lower their fees.

Since medical specialists often share offices and receptionists and don't make house calls, the profession's claim that expenses account for 30 or 40 per cent of gross income are not true, he said.

OPP Nab Suspects

TRENTON (Staff) — Co-operation of the Trenton Police department, Ontario Provincial Police and a private individual led to the arrest of three theft suspects this morning.

A phone call from a Highway 37 resident alerted Trenton police to a break and enter occurrence at the PX furniture store, just north of the town limits at 12:30 a.m.

Constable Fred oakes in his own car, speeding to the scene found a car leaving the PX parking lot as it arrived.

The Trenton Police officer pursued the car north, overtaking it near Bairds and a car from Brighton detachment of the OPP arrived soon after.

A front window had been smashed to gain access to the furniture store and a $300 stereo record player with accompanying speakers was found in the car stopped by police.

Taken into custody by the OPP were George J. Cannon, 28, of Trenton; Richard Chouinard, 47, of Oshawa and Phillip J. Wallih, 22, of RR4, Trenton.

The incident is still under investigation by the Brighton detachment of the OPP and charges are pending.

Nutrition Ahead of Additives

WINNIPEG (CP) — Homemakers should be less concerned with food additives and more concerned with good nutrition, says Susan Gadd, specialist in consumer information for the Manitoba agriculture department.

"It is unfortunate that food additives, which are not harmful, have received considerable publicity in recent months," she said. "Food additives in Canada must be tested and cleared by the federal food and drug directorate before being used."

She said the additives generally are used in small amounts to improve the keeping qualities, the nutritional value and the general acceptability of foods.

Good, basic information on nutrition and food additives tends to be unsensational and is often overlooked, Miss Gadd said.

Miss Anna Kelimbet, staff physiotherapist, accepts an up-to-date wheel chair for arthritic or rheumatic patients on behalf of the Quinte Chapter, Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society. Adjusting the foot rest is Joseph Craig, vice-president of the CN Yardmen Benefit Fund, who presented the gift.

CARS Quinte Chapter Receives Wheelchair

Again through the efforts of the Belleville CN Yardmen another local organization will benefit from funds raised by them through their legal lottery, known as the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund.

The most recent benefactor is the Quinte Area Chapter of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society which on behalf of the Yardmen was presented with an up - to - date wheelchair especially beneficial in the care of severe arthritic cases.

During 1970, CARS physiotherapists provided 20,793 treatments to patients and rheumatic disease units at university teaching hospitals supported by the society and admitted 1,661 patients.

The Belleville Clinic operated at the Belleville General Hospital is open for arthritic and rheumatic patients on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8 p.m. Kathryn Brown is the physiotherapist.

Since the establishment of the clinic committee, the clinic has been extremely busy and almost at capacity level. During the past year, 874 patients were seen at the clinic, 313 treated at home and 220 patients were referred to the rheumatic disease units.

Volunteers and nurses help exercise the patients with the special equipment available at the hospital including the wax treatments to help relieve afflicted muscles. There is also a CARS physiotherapist Anna Kelimbet servicing Hastings and Prince Edward Counties visiting patients in their homes.

The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society has a committee in Belleville, chaired by Ian W. Brady, responsible for raising money for the society to provide funds for research. They are particularly busy around this time in preparation for the campaign in September which is arthritis month.

The CN Yardmen through their fund raising campaign have also contributed to many other community endeavors.

That First Kiss Worries Teen-ager

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a fifteen-year-old high school boy who lives in Dubuque, Iowa. Dubuque isn't exactly New York City so high school kids here don't know a lot of sophisticated stuff.

I have never kissed a girl but I am planning on doing it soon. In fact, I have the girl picked out already. Don't laugh, Ann, I really need help.

Please tell me — when a guy kisses a girl where does his nose belong? I don't want anything to go wrong. Thanks a lot. — PLANNING AHEAD.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR HEAD: The nose goes right along with the rest of the face and it belongs wherever it lands. Please let me know how you did, I worry about kids like you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 48 years of age and feel foolish writing to a paper for help, but I am terribly confused.

My husband died when our son was fouar. I raised the boy myself and he is very close to me. Jerry is now 14. Last year I met a widower who brought real happiness into my life. After 10 years of loneliness it was like a miracle. I am sure we could have been very content together. Financial security was no problem. We are both comfortable.

When I told my son I was considering marrying again he became angry at first and later sullen. Finally he told be I had to choose between him and the man. So I stopped seeing my friend.

I am very depressed. I feel that perhaps I have made the wrong choice. Yet the mother in me says my first responsibility is to my son. Please give me your views. — SHELBY MRS.

DEAR SHELBY: And how long has this kid been dictating to you? My guess is from the time he learned to talk. Run, don't walk, to the nearest phone. Get the man back. If you can. It would be a healthy move for both you and your son — unless, of course, the kid plans to spend the rest if his life bossing you around instead of marrying some girl he can tyranize. In which case, my condolences to you both.

*

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a married man and a father who needs help with a problem. My wife was spending money like it grew on trees and we had many arguments about it. Finally I became so desperate that I ran an ad in the newspaper saying I would not be responsible for her debts.

I live in Indiana and work in Chicago so I get home only on weekends. The Saturday after I ran the ad in the newspaper I went home and discovered that my wife had taken all the furniture and left with our two children. I'm sure she went to her mother's.

I don't care about the furniture but my children mean the world to me. Please tell me what to do. — TROUBLED MAN.

DEAR MAN: You should have written to me before you ran that ad, Bub, but what's done is done, so let's go from here.

Contact your wife and ask her to sit down with you and a counselor or a clergyman and settle the differences. Each of you has a legitimate beef. It might be that your wife spends money like crazy to get even with you for leaving her alone five days a week. The solution might be for you to work in Indiana or move your family to Chicago.

Third Co-owner of Company May Be A Little Shy

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: This firm where I work is owned by three brothers who hold the top positions. Two of them will always have a "Hello" for me if the opportunity arises. The third man is my problem.

The first thing I do when entering the building in the morning is put my lunch in the cupboard in the lunchroom. Sometimes the third brother is in there making a pot of coffee.

Who should say "Good morning" first? Of the nine girls working in my department my foreman considers me one of the better workers, but even so, my position is minor to that of a co-owner. Should I wait to speak until I'm spoken to? — G.S.

Dear G.S.: It might just be that Brother Number Three is shy. Had you thought of it? Even if I'm wrong and he is just plain standoffish, he isn't likely to fire you for throwing a cheerful "Good morning" his way.

If you go by the etiquette books, you speak first.

Dear Doris: We are holding our high school graduation exercises next month. It will be a small but formal affair.

1. I asked my cousin to be my escort. Does he buy my corsage or do I?

2. Is it expected of him to pay my way to the dance?

3. Do I buy my parents corsages?

4. Do I buy my escort a boutonniere, or does he wear one at all?

5. Is it appropriate for me to wear a tiara? — Girl Graduate

Dear Graduate: 1. He buys it.

2. Buy dance tickets in advance yourself and give them to him to hand in at the door.

3. No.

4. No. You are the one that is being honored.

5. No. Too sophisticated. If you aren't wearing a mortar-board, a white bow or hairband to keep your hair in place during the dance would be more suitable — if you need anything at all.

*

Dear Doris: I was wondering if you could tell me where to send a person's name, who is 100 years old in May, so he would get messages from the prime minister and the Queen. A Fan of Yours.

Dear Fan: Isn't it wonderful that in the 20th century we are getting an increasing number of over 100's? Such is the triumph of medicine and public health. We have classifications now of young old, middle-aged old, old old, and now, the fellows who lived before 1871 get classified as the very old old. I'm not sure what the top of that range is!

Anyway you can get royal congratulations for your friend by writing to the Secretary of State, Parliament Buildings, Ottawa. Give details of birth; and at the same time ask for a greeting from the Prime Minister.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

An Authentic Recipe for Chowder

By MARY MOORE

One of my friends returned from a visit to Newfoundland and because I am a Neetie asked me for a recipe for fish chowder. She says she thinks the fish in here was haddock. This is an e.e.s. Can you give a recipe for fish chowder in your column? — Annie Q.

ANSWER: Sure I can and I love it. This recipe came from Carol E. and is only slightly tampered with by me.

ATLANTIC FISH CHOWDER
(Serves 7 to 8)

2 tbsps. butter or margarine
1-3 cup chopped onion
2 cups diced raw potatoes
2 cups hot water
1½ tsps. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
1 lb. fresh frozen haddock fillets thawed and cut into ¾" pieces (or boned and fresh fish fillets)
2 cups milk
In your soup pot melt the butter or margarine and add onions and saute until limp, but not one bit brown. Add potatoes, hot water, salt and pepper and simmer, covered, until potatoes are almost tender — about 15 min. Add fish and cook gently 3 min. Taste one piece of fish to be sure it is cooked. Add the milk and bring to just below boiling point. Do not boil after milk is added.

We used this as a main course and served it with hot cheese bread and a separate course of asparagus. It was a different kind of a meal but rib-sticking too. In Newfoundland restaurants this would be served with ships' biscuits or oyster crackers.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Mrs. Smith says Susie always understands what the teacher says and never has any trouble with her schoolwork. Why can't you settle down and bring home a good report card the way Susie does?"

Mother: "Let's read your textbook together and we can discuss the subject that way you'll remember the facts better. Tests should not bother you if you really have the information in your head."

It doesn't help a poor student to be compared to a more achieving friend. It will be better to guide her into better study habits and encourage her to learn and understand the subject matter.

U.C.W. Meetings

BRIDGE STREET UCW

The spring thankoffering meeting of the United Church Women of Bridge Street Unlited Church was recently emphasized the meaning of Easter. After a brief business meeting with the president, Mrs. R. E. Berry, in the chair, an impressive worship service, with the theme, "Darkness and Light of Easter" — was conducted by Mrs. D. G. Williams, assisted by Mrs. J. S. Loynes and Miss Grace Kenny. Mrs. R. Riedel rendered a beautiful spiritual selection.

A not of ecumenicy was felt in the meeting as Mrs. Berry introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Thora Fuller. Mrs. Fuller is the widow of an Anglican minister and herself holds a degree in theology.

Mrs. Fuller remarked that the worship service was appropriate as the theme of her Easter message was based on the three verses of "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?"

Mrs. J. R. Reynolds thanked the speaker for her inspirational address.

A variety of delicious deserts, tea and coffee were served prior to the meeting by Evening Unit 2.

Bradshaw; secretary - treasurer, Mrs. E. Ross; district director, Mrs. R. Ritz; assistant director, Mrs. H. Elliott; Institute directors, Mrs. D. Martin and Mrs. A. Whitmore; pianist, Mrs. F. News Specials Now Staggered

NEW YORK (AP) — A big break for many viewers is the shifting of CBS's weekly news hour and NBC's monthly First Tuesday so they will be seen at different times next season.

This month the NBC two-hour program covered a lot of territory—from Vietnam to a trip down the concrete-lined Los Angeles River.

It started promisingly with a story about plane hijackers and their opponents the sky marshals.

Psychiatrists and law enforcement officials said most of the "take me to Cuba," travellers are sick people. The program found two returned hijackers and interviewed one.

A Georgia man said he hijacked a plane to further an idea to kill Fidel Castro.

It was a good segment on a subject of concern to travellers.

Most impressive portion was film showing a number of young narcotic addicts. Some were shown taking the drugs. All talked about their habits, some dreamily and obviously under their influence, others spoke of the horrors of withdrawal.

One moving segment focused on puzzled, unhappy parents of one young addict.

Another feature centred on the Joseph Colombo family, father and sons, and their organization the Italian-American Civil Rights League. Colombo, alleged head of a Mafia family denied the existence now of an American Mafia. "They were Robin Hoods," said his son Anthony.

Hornets Sweep Calgary for Third Allan Cup Victory

GALT, Ont. (CP) — Dave Cressman scored with less than three minutes remaining in the third period Thursday night to give Galt Hornets a 4-3 win over Calgary Stampeders and their second Canadian senior hockey title in three years.

In a repeat of the 1969 Allan Cup final against the Stampeders at Galt, the Hornets swept the best-of-seven round in four games.

The triumph marked the third time a Galt senior club earned the right to have its name engraved on the Allan Cup in the last 11 years. In 1961 as the Terriers, Galt ousted Winnipeg Maroons four games to one.

It was the third national title for Galt coach Bill (Wizzy) Wylie and netminder Harold (Bud) Hurley, and the second for captain Vance Millar.

Wylie, who took over the coaching reins with 15 in the playoffs when coach Norm Defelice suffered a heart attack, coached the 1969 squad that played with the 1961 championship Galt club.

The first time is always the best," Wylie said: "Once you do win it once and you get the taste, you always want more."

Cressman's winning goal with 1:47 seconds left to play climaxed a freak play.

Galt defenceman Doug Kelcher lifted the puck down the boards from outside the Calgary blue line. It bounded in front of the net where netminder Russ Gillow made a save on Pete Panagakos. Cressman pounced on the rebound.

It was lying there right beside the goaltender's leg," Cressman said.

"I swiped at it twice and missed it, then I got it the third time. I was afraid the ref would blow the whistle at any time on it, because it was so close to being covered."

The final seconds required five minutes to play as an ecstatic Galt crowd of 2,535 applauded the Hornets with a three-minute standing ovation.

The goal by Cressman wrecked a third successive Calgary comeback. The Stampeders had third-period rallies in the second and third games to force overtime action and had overhauled a 3-1 Galt lead in the final period of Thursday's clincher.

Norm Belanger, Millar and Kelcher scored once each for Galt with Dale Conrad, Scott Watson and Dennis Olduck replying for the Stampeders.

The Hornets, playing their ninth game in 14 days, appeared weary in the opening period. Ken Broderick, a playoff addition from Oakville Oaks, also of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, made big saves off Len Haley and Conrad in early Calgary power plays. Gid Wylie praised the Calgary efforts.

"When you play a series on the road," the Galt coach said, "you must be 20 or 25 per cent stronger to win. We got the breaks."

Wylie telephoned the good news to St. Catharines, where coach Defelice is resting in hospital. Defelice said he was "happy as a pig" in a wallow, Wylie reported.

Millar said he thought the Hornets had the power to take three Allan Cup titles in succession. Last year, Galt lost out to Orillia Terriers in the OHA Senior A playoffs.

"The only thing which prevented us from winning three Allan Cups in a row," the team captain said, "was last year's trip to Europe. We played an extra eight or nine games in Europe and came back here too tired in the OHA final against Orillia."

Broderick, a former member of the Canadian national team, replaced Hurley in goal for the final game. Wylie said Hurley, 41, was overdue for a rest.

Broderick went to the world championships three times and was beaten by the Russians each time, including the 1964 and 1968 Olympics.

"Now, it's nice to be on the winning side for a change," Broderick said.

Angotti Counts Two in 5-3 Win

Habs 'Lou'-se Second to Hawks

CHICAGO (CP) — Super sub prefers to let his actions speak.

Lou Angotti, Chicago reserve forward, scored two unassisted goals in the third period Thursday night, propelling the Black Hawks to a 5-3 Stanley Cup win over Montreal Canadiens.

The victory was Chicago's second straight at home to open the best-of-seven National Hockey League final with the series now moving to Montreal for the next two games, Sunday at 2 p.m. EDT and Tuesday at 8 p.m. EDT.

"I don't really know how I got either one," said the 33-year old Toronto native whose ability to play any forward slot has been an added bonus to the Black Hawks efforts this year.

He wasn't even aware he had capitalized on mistakes by usually reliable Montreal defenceman J. C. Tremblay to score the winning and insurance counters of the game.

"I better not say anything," he decided, "It could be me the next time."

Tremblay, coming off one of his best seasons, earlier in the game assisted on Montreal goals by Jacques Lemaire and Peter Mahovlich to set a playoff record (14) for defencemen.

On Angotti's first goal, Tremblay's attempted clearing shot came off the backboards to Angotti, who rifled it past Montreal goalie Ken Dryden.

The score sent Chicago into a 4-2 lead and after Frank Mahovlich's 11th playoff goal had narrowed the gap, Angotti took the puck from Tremblay near the Canadiens' blueline and moved unmolested on Dryden.

Angotti drew two assists—on Bobby Hull's power-play goal to open the game and on Chico Maki's tying score early in the second period. Jim Pappin, who scored the winner in the second and play like that. . . . The guys played hard and contributed to this win."

The game may have cost Chicago the services of Pat Stapleton. The stocky defenceman suffered a gashed right cheek when he and Montreal's Rejean Houle collided near the Chicago goal during the second period.

Stapleton returned to the stadium after the game and did not appear the worse for his experience. He was talking normally with reporters.

Outside the Montreal dressing room, Montreal coach Al MacNeil didn't appear overly distraught by the setback although his players were in a far more subdued mood beside their lockers.

"That's his style," said MacNeil of Tremblay's two costly errors. "When he makes a bad play, it's more glaring. But he makes a lot more good ones than bad."

J. C. took the blame for both miscues that set up Angotti's unassisted scores.

"I've made mistakes before. I don't brood over them. I have no excuse. . . . We must beat them at home, that's all."

goal, needed four stitches to close the wound on his chin. The shot had bounced off his chest protector to his chin, almost tearing the goalie mask from his head.

Western Juniors Want Playoff

EDMONTON (CP) — The Western Canada Hockey League champions, Edmonton Oil Kings, have challenged the winner of the eastern series between St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association and the Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Junior League to a national final for the Memorial Cup.

Bill Hunter, general manager of the Oil Kings, told a news conference Thursday he has proposed a best-of-seven final to open in eastern Canada on the weekend of May 15, with the second and third games in Edmonton May 18 and 20, returning to the east for the last games.

The Edmonton Exhibition Association and the Oil Kings jointly are prepared to offer a guarantee of $5,000 a game plus all expenses to the eastern champions for the Edmonton games, he said.

Hunter said his club, if necessary, is prepared to play a single game for the national championship, or would play all games of a series in the east. He expected meetings would be held today with Ontario and Quebec hockey officials to work out details.

CALGARY (CP) — The president of the Western Canada Hockey League says he will seek a Canadian junior final this year with either St. Catharines Black Hawks or Quebec Remparts.

Ron Butlin said in a release Thursday he plans to meet today with officials of the Ontario Hockey Association, Quebec Junior Hockey League and owners of the Remparts and Black Hawks.

He want, the Richardson Trophy winner to play Edmonton Oil Kings, WCHL champions, for the Memorial Cup and national supremacy in first-level junior hockey.

"We don't care where the series is played," he said.

Sport Briefs

WINNIPEG (CP) — Veteran flanker Bob McCarthy has been obtained by Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference from Montreal Alouettes. In return for the 26-year-old pass-catcher, Winnipeg gave the Alouettes their first Canadian college draft choice in 1972. The trade was announced Thursday.

LONDON (Reuter) — Joe Bugner, British, Commonwealth and European heavyweight boxing champion, said Thursday that a bout against former world champion Muhammad Ali (Cassius Clay) in July or August is a distinct possibility. Hungarian-born Bugner, 21, is preparing for a European title fight against West German Jurgen Blin here Tuesday.

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadian lightweight champion Al Ford is to box British Empire champion Percy Hayles in a title fight June 26 in Kingston, Jamaica, it was announced Wednesday. Edmonton promoter Mitch Klimove and Albert Superstein said: "We wanted the fight here in Edmonton, but the price tag was too steep for us, so we agreed to Ford fighting away from home."

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Del Insko, one of the foremost harness racing drivers in the United States, suffered chest injuries in a five-horse accident in the third race at Roosevelt Raceway Thursday night. He was taken to Nassau General Hospital for X-rays. Sun Dance Kid, driven by Insko, went down after 10 Karen, driven by Frank Targariello, went off stride, causing the pileup. Fannie Flirt, driven by Ken McNutt, and Tillon Hanover, reined by George Sholty, also went down while Tagariello and Olympic Jewel, handled by Toronto-born John Chapman, pulled up. Only Insko was sent to the hospital. Sir Peppino Star, driven by Ben Webster, won the race and paid $66. It set up an 8-1 exact with second place A. Q. Perfecta that paid $456.60.

NEW YORK (AP) — Some United States champions will not compete in the Pan-American Games in Cali, Colombia, in August, but the United States "still is sending quite a team," the executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee said Thursday. Arthur Lentz made his statement in answer to a criticism by Col. Antonio Haro Oliva, president of the Mexican Sports Confederation that he heard U.S. athletes are not willing to compete in the Pan-Am Games because they would not meet real competition.

Plastic Surgery For Pat

CHICAGO (CP) — The only thing amiss in the jubilant Chicago Black Hawks' dressing room after their 5-3 Stanley Cup win over Montreal Canadiens Thursday night was the absence of Pat Stapleton.

The all-star Chicago defenceman fell with Montreal's Rejean Houle in the second period and the blade of a skate cut his right cheek. Blood from the gaping wound wasn't noticed immediately, and it was first believed he was cut by Houle's stick.

PAT STAPLETON

"The skate went through his cheek and we had to send him to hospital for plastic surgery," said Coach Billy Reay in a post-game interview.

It was Lou Angotti, the little reserve centre who has played key roles in recent Chicago playoff wins, who held fort in the Hawk dressing room.

"Jeez, I don't really know how I got either one," the Toronto native said of his two third-period goals that proved the winner and insurance markers.

McNally May Believe He's Vida But Angels Just Feeling 'Blue'

Baltimore pitcher Dave McNally followed his wife's advice Thursday night and wound up with his fifth victory this season against one loss.

"My wife said 'Pretend you're Vida Blue'," McNally said after he restricted California Angels to four hits as the Orioles swept a two-night doubleheader by identical 3-1 scores.

Vida Blue, the young southpaw of Oakland Athletics, has jumped off to a 7-1 record this season.

In other American League action, Minnesota Twins toppled New York Yankees 5-3 and Boston Red Sox routed Chicago White Sox 11-1.

In the National League, Houston Astros tripped Montreal Expos 5-3 and, Los Angeles Dodgers downed Cincinnati Reds 5-2. Chicago Cubs at New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals at Philadelphia Phillies were called off by rain.

Pat Dobson evened his record at 3-3 in the nightcap, scattering nine hits as the Orioles came to within one-half point of East Division leader Boston Red Sox.

McNally got all the support he needed in the fifth inning when run-scoring singles by Brooks Robinson and Dave Johnson snapped a 1-1 tie. The only run McNally gave up was in the fifth on doubles by Tony Conigliaro and Ken McMullen.

Dobson was staked to a 1-0 edge in the opener of the second game on Frank Robinson's run-batted-in single and a sacrifice fly by Elrod Hendricks.

The six-foot, three-inch righthander had a three-hit shutout until McMullen homered in the eighth.

Rookie Steve Braun bounced a two-out, two-run infield single in the eighth inning, giving the Twins their victory over the Yankees and a three-game sweep of the series.

Braun's hit off Mel Stottlemyre, 3-1, was grabbed by Horace Clarke, but the second baseman couldn't make a play as Cesar Tovar and Tony Oliva scored. Earlier Tovar had driven in the tying run with a single.

The Red Sox took advantage of six Chicago errors and left-hander Gary Peters tamed the White Sox on seven hits.

Rico Petrocelli and Luis Aparicio drove in two runs apiece for the Red Sox while George Scott cracked a solo home run for the winners.

DAVE McNALLY

Larry Dierker captured his fifth straight victory without a loss but the right-hander needed eighth-inning relief help in the Astros victory.

The Astros won the game in the opening inning, scoring three runs off loser Steve Renko, 5-1. A walk and singles by Roger Metzger, Jim Wynn and Jesus Alou got in two runs and another scored on John Ostemau's throwing error.

The Dodgers jumped on lefty Jim Merritt, 4-3, and reliever Tony Cloninger for four runs on five hits in the third inning and rolled to their victory.

Wes Parker, Jim Lefebvre and Billy Grabarkewitz had run-scoring hits in the inning and winner Claude Osteen, 3-2, added a sacrifice fly.

Lefebvre later cracked a solo homer in backing Osteen while Johnny Bench slammed his 10th of the year, a two-run shot in the eighth for the Reds.

Dierker Stymies Expos

MONTREAL (CP) — Larry Dierker, with late-inning relief help, swept to his fifth consecutive triumph Thursday night, helping Houston Astros to a 5-2 victory over Montreal Expos.

The big right-hander, 5-0, went seven innings and scattered six hits while walking two and striking out four. He was replaced by Denny Lemaster after Rusty Staub opened the Expos' eighth with a single.

Houston swept its 4-3-0 lead in the opening inning off loser Steve Renko, 3-1. The Astros got singles by Roger Metzger, Jim Wynn and Jesus Alou, a walk and an error in the rally. Wynn and Alou drove in two of the runs, with another scoring on John Bateman's error.

The Astros added a run in the third on Wynn's run-scoring double and made it 5-1 in the fifth on a Joe Morgan double, an error and wild pitch.

The Expos scored in the opening inning on a bases-loaded passed ball and got another in the seventh on Ron Swoboda's run-scoring pinch single.

Sports on All Fronts

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A new coach, general manager and assistant general manager were expected to be announced today by St. Louis Blues of National Hockey League.

It was reported Thursday the club would name former Detroit Red Wings coach and general manager Sid Abel to replace Scotty Bowman as coach.

Bowman resigned about a week ago in a power struggle involving Blues' officials.

Blues' vice-president Lynn Patrick would be named general manager and defenceman Al'Arbour would become Patrick's assistant, reports said.

Blues management, however, had no comment on the possible changes. The club called a late-afternoon press conference.

"The conference will concern organizational changes for the coming National Hockey League season," an announcement said.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Earl Ingarfield, 36, a 14-year veteran of the National Hockey League, announced his retirement Thursday.

Ingarfield, a centre, said recurring injuries in recent years have prevented him from making an adequate contribution to his team—California Golden Seals.

He moved to the NHL in the 1958-59 season and except for a brief 46-game stint with Cleveland of the American Hockey League in 1959-60 spent the next nine years with New York Rangers.

TORONTO (CP) — A nervous mistake by mutuel clerk Isabel Emsley at Greenwood Raceway Thursday night was worth $874.80 to her.

"I knew as soon as I punched the ticket for the daily double I had hit the wrong key," said Mrs. Emsley. "The gentlemen asked for 7 and 4 and I accidentally pushed 6 and 4. I tried to sell it but no one wanted to buy it."

McLaren Team In Gear

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Clint Brawner, who built cars that won six United States racing championships, admitted Thursday, "the McLarens have shaken us up."

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway was closed by heavy rain most of the day but Gasoline Alley garages echoed as mechanics hunted horsepower.

Brawner was talking about three new Mark 16s in which Mark Donohue, Denis Hulme and Peter Revson had been driving practice laps at speeds higher than most drivers expected to reach in flat-out time trials for the 55th Indy 500.

Donohue drives for Roger Penske, and Hulme and Revson for the McLaren factory team.

"We've tried to make the Mark 16 as comfortable and efficient that a driver can go fast without getting his teeth," said Ted Ayer, general manager of the McLaren works.

Hulme, former wors road-racing champion, drove one of the team McLarens this week at unofficial speeds well over the official speedway record of 171.953 miles per hour. Donohue was even faster. Revson was running near record speed when he burned a piston Tuesday.

"There was no sensation of great speed," Hulme said.

The wedge-shaped Mark 16 is one of the smallest cars ever built for the $1 million Indy race, weighing barely over the 1,300-pound minimum. It has a four-cylinder, turbocharged, 700-horsepower American Offenhauser engine available to anybody with $22,500.

Northern Juniors Move To Block Flyers Transfer

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Four of the five teams in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league have ordered legal moves to prevent the possible transfer of the Niagara Falls junior team to Sudbury.

North Bay Trappers, Chelmsford Canadiens, Espanola Eagles and Sault Greyhounds have authorized a Sault legal firm to seek an injunction to prevent the switch of Hap Emms' Ontario Hockey Association first-level club.

Sudbury was represented in the second-level NOHA series last season by the Wolves, which applied a month ago for entry next season in the OHA series where Niagara Falls Flyers now play.

The NOHA gave permission to the Wolves to apply for a switch on condition that the Sudbury entry in the OHA be Sudbury owned and operated.

Emms, suffering from attendance problems at Niagara Falls, has indicated a willingness to switch to Sudbury, but wants $1 per-cent control, a stipulation viewed by the NOHA as contrary to its local-ownership stand.

That view leaves the Wolves at least temporarily without a league.

The Wolves appear to have been stalled on their bid to move up to the OHA, which does not intend to expand next year. To play in the NOHA next year, they would have to re-apply for admission.

The injunction is to be sought against the OHA and the national parent body, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Moira, BCI Stage Swinging Lacrosse Bout

The Belleville Memorial Arena proved to be a "swinging" place Thursday afternoon as Moira and BCI battled out a high school lacrosse slugfest.

The Trojans came out ahead on the scoreboard tallying an 8-3 verdict from BCI to move into a first place tie with North Addington in the league standings. Both teams now have a win and a tie in two outings, while the Collegians and Quinte are deadlocked with a point apiece in two games.

The losers were hit with 18 of the game's 27 penalties in the course of the bruising contest. Included in BCI's penalty total were a match misconduct, a misconduct, three fighting majors and six high sticking penalties. Moira picked up two fighting, one misconduct and four high sticking infractions during the course of the contest.

Jim Lennox proved to be the offensive star for Moira belting three goals and an assist, while Joe Clarke added a pair of tallies. Dan Coulson contributed a goal and two assists to the Trojan cause with Dan Payne and Dan Nuttall adding single goals.

For BCI, Ted McBride, Rob Richardson and Andy Ricketts each fired one goal in a losing effort.

The next game in the league schedule is slated for 4 p.m. Monday when Quinte tackles Moira at the Belleville Memorial Arena.

Booth Rollers In the Groove

The Men's Commercial "B" bowling league proved to be right down the Booth TV team's alley as they picked up the lions share of awards.

The Booth TV team captured the league championship and the "A" division playoffs, while Doug's Food won the "B" playoffs.

George Hammett captain of the Booth TV rollers accepted the Brunswick Bowl trophy on behalf of teammates Pete Calbury, Charlie Baker, Elmer Scott, Cec Hardwick, Larry Towns, Jack Calnan and Harry Ridley.

The final team standings were Booth TV, Sherriffs Potato Chips, Burke's of Belleville, Thrashers, Doug's Food, Haines, Blys and Blues.

Jack Calnan took the high average honors with a 240 mark, while Ron Saylor's 927 was the high triple and Ernie Green's 629 the top single game.

The new executive for the 1971 season included Cam McKenna, president; Ernie Green, vice - president; Ron Elliott, treasurer and Russ Jones, Secretary.

Centennial Girl Nets Honors

Centennial badminton player Marina Taylor managed to get a number of honors among secondary school competitors in girls singles this season.

The grade 12 student pickedup a first place finish at Bay of Quinte, added a second at COSSA and completed her performance by placing fifth at the all - Ontario meet in Brantford.

Hot and Heavy

Lacrosse action was hot and heavy indeed at the Belleville Memorial Arena yesterday as Moira and BCI squared off in an inter-city battle. Referee Mike Dollack had his hands full assessing 27 penalties including one to BCI's Mark Walmsley (top). Moira's Paul Hart was the victim of a solid check by Steve Cowan of BCI (bottom left) but perhaps the most beleaguered player in the rink was Collegian goalie Pete Cox (bottom right), who appears to be praying for some support from his teammates. Moira took an 8-3 verdict to move into a first place tie in the four team league.

Olympic Standards Tougher

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

The new Olympic Games qualifying standards are so tough that some of the great times, heights and distances of the past wouldn't be good enough even to win a place on a 1972 team.

The standards established for the Munich Games are such that no Olympic gold-medal time up to 1956 in the distance events—1,500, 5,000 and 10,000 metres—would even get a runner into the stadium.

Had he been forced to observe the new times, Emil Zatopek of Czechoslovakia would not have been allowed to compete—much less would he have taken the gold medals in the 10,000 metres in 1948 and 1952 and in the 5,000 in 1952.

Paavo Nurmi, the flying Finn, wouldn't flave had a prayer in the 10,000, which he won in 1928.

Don Bragg of the United States, who won the 1960 pole vault gold medal with a height of 15-feet-5, would have to go 15 inches higher merely to make it to Munich.

And look at the 100-metre dash. Eddie Tolan of the U.S. won it in 10.3 in 1932. The same speed was good enough to win it for his countrymen —Jesse Owens in 1936 and Harrison Dillard in 1948.

In 1952, the gold-medal time was a slow 10.4 when Lindy Remigino of the U.S. won. Bobby Morrow of the U.S. put it back to 10.3 in 1956.

It wasn't until 1960 that Armin Harry of Germany lowered the Olympic gold medal time to 10.2.

Just to qualify for the 1972 event, it will be necessary for a sprinter to match the 10.3 that was good enough to win up to 1960.

Caddie Gives Lee Bum Steer

DALLAS (AP) — Lee Trevino was particularly miffed at his caddy Thursday in the opening round of the Dean Nelson Golf Classic in which he fired a two-under par 68, placing the Dallas native two strokes behind leader Jerry McGee.

McGee, 27, is a five-year tour veteran who has never won a tournament. He made $22,000 last year and has pocketed over $26,000 this season, playing without an exemption.

"My caddy, who has been with me 2½ years, has been making too many mistakes," Trevino said. "It's getting where I have to walk the yardage off."

Trevino said his caddy, Neal Walker, told him it was 195-yards to the pin on his second shot on the 432-yard par four No. 9.

"It turned out to be only 175 yrds." Trevino said.

Trevino, who has never won here, was in a group with five others at 68 on the wind-swept, 7,031-yard Preston Trail Golf Course—Ted Hayes, Bob Stone, John Schlee, Ed Sneed and Gay Brewer.

Bailey Cooper Says:
Golf's Million Dollar Winner
ARCH LEFT WRIST

You can never obtain maximum power by using your hands and wrists too much at impact. However, this doesn't keep many club golfers from trying. The result is that they "flick" the clubhead at the ball, allowing the left wrist to collapse and the right hand to take over.

Make it a point to more or less ignore your hands and wrists at impact. Let the natural impetus of your downswing provide the power without an over action of the hands. The best players will have the left wrist arched slightly toward the target at impact, a sure sign that the left side is in control. Practice this until it becomes natural. Your power will certainly increase.

Temper! Temper!

World's Auto-makers Doubtful They Can Meet Pollution Rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's auto makers doubt they can produce a 1976-model car that will meet all the stringent U.S. air pollution laws now on the books.

"At this point in time we have no way of controlling oxides of nitrogen to the extremely low levels which could be required by the Clean Air amendments of 1970," Edward N. Cole, president of General Motors, said today in a prepared statement.

"Based on current technology and results we have achieved to date—and assuming modification in the test procedure—we are hopeful that the average exhaust levels from 1975 model General Motors cars can meet the standards for hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide," Cole added.

Cole made his statements at an Environmental Protection Agency hearing on industry efforts to reduce the discharge of pollutants into the air.

Law requires manufacturers to cut hydrocarbon, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxide emissions by 90, to 96 per cent by 1975.

The law permits EPA Administrator William Ruckelshaus to extend the deadline for one year if he is convinced the individual car makers have made "good faith" efforts to comply with the regulations.

Cole's statements were echoed by spokesmen for Ford and Chrysler, and for foreign auto-makers such as Volkswagen and Toyota.

Cole also said the Clean Air Act passed by Congress last year calling for the reduction of exhaust pollutants poses "one of the most formidable technical assignments our company has ever faced."

"More than 2,200 technical employees are involved in all of these activities and this does not include the hundreds of additional people working for supplier companies," he said.

Hiring Policy Generates Heat

Earlier recommendations by the personnel committee of the Quinte Planing Board to advertise nationally and locally for planning staff met with emphatic opposition by some members of the board, including personnel committee chairman, Belleville Alderman Arnold Orr.

The original report, presented last night at the second regular meeting of the area board, called for national advertising to fill the positions of planning director, assistant planners and technical personnel plus local advertising for a secretary-treasurer and clerical staff.

Following more than an hour's heated debate, the board approved an amendment stipulating that "when a basic staff is required . . . competent staff members now existing in the Quinte area be assured of employment."

The position taken by Mr. Orr, Dr. J. Percival Scott, mayor of Belleville and fellow aldermen was that present employees should be given first consideration.

In order to determine what size staff is required, the board will consider a submission by Phillips Planning and Engineering, Ltd. of Burlington, to appraise the area as to planning needs and staff requirements.

Four area consultant firms were invited to submit accounts and background information for consideration. The Burlington firm, recent consultants in Stirling, offered a plan within three weeks for a cost of $1,250.

A basic staff will be hired on the basis of recommendations of the consultant firm.

Bridge Rails Not Usual

Railings to separate pedestrian and vehicular traffic on bridges and overpasses are not the general rule in municipalities across Ontario.

This is indicated in replies received from other cities by the city traffic committee, following request for railings on the North Front Street bridge over the CN railway.

The request for a protective railing was received by the committee after a young boy slipped off the sidewalk on the bridge and into the side of a passing bus.

Four cities — North Bay, Brantford, Barrie and Woodstock — replied that they did not provide protective railings on bridges in situations similar to that at the Belleville railway bridge.

City officials at North Bay suggested such a railing would cause winter maintenance problems.

Brantford felt the installation of bridge railings would be an unwarranted expense initially and would also involve costly maintenance.

City officials here stated there appeared to be little difference in the safety of bridge walks and other walks throughout the city where traffic passed immediately adjacent to the curb.

Woodstock city officials took the same view and said they did not have any practice of installing railings on bridges.

Barrie city officials said they had no railway overpass in their city but they did have a number of overpass bridges over Highway 400 with sidewalks not protected by railings.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Stitch in Side Not Heart Pain

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it possible for a girl my age (I am 15) to have some kind of heart condition? At least once a day I get sharp pains on my left side over my heart. I have to keep still and can't breathe. Sometimes the pains last only a few seconds, but at other times for as long as five minutes. This has been going on for about two weeks. I had a physical examination. Our doctor found me to be in perfect condition. What can be the cause of the pains? Is heart disease possible? Miss A.

• • •

COMMENT: Possible, but not likely. I say this because a "stitch in the side" is a common pain in youngsters. And because your own doctor has recently found that your heart is all right.

I've often said that if people didn't know the difference between right and left there'd be less unnecessary fear of heart isn't way over on the left; it lies more to the midline of the chest.

Typical heart pain (all over the chest and quite severe) is usually due to coronary artery disease. Disease of the heart valves is not a common cause of chest pain.

I suggest, Miss A., that you believe your doctor. The type of left chest pain you describe is not usually associated with heart disease. Play, run, have fun. Don't let unnecessary anxiety about your heart take the joy out of life.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My cousin tells me that hepatitis can be contracted through kissing. Is this possible? — Miss G.

COMMENT: A common name for mononucleosis is "kissing disease". (However, this may be overstated in other ways.) We do know that the virus of this disease sometimes causes hepatitis. Therefore, in a roundabout way your cousin is correct: kissing may cause hepatitis. But I wouldn't advise you to go through life burdened with this fear. As it is, people tend to worry too much about the possible causes of illness.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: A few women friends and I were talking about the after-effects of hysterectomy. It is true that the woman no longer has any sexual desires after the operation? And that it decreases the enjoyment of the sexual act? — Mrs. M.

Your birthday today: This is a year of vigorous, experimental changes in your approach to career and daily routine. Occasionally you take on more than you can handle. Getting disentangled offers valuable experience. Today's natives have great sensitivity to vibrations, musical pitch, rhythmic motions, and may specialize in arts using or studying such phenomena.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The heavier the push, the more complex the results. Ride along the easy way with an absolute minimum effort, dealing ably with settled routines or unavoidable crisis.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Now come the results, the repercussions of what you have been doing for quite a while back. Wait for the fuss to quiet down.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Strive to focus on one single channel of expression at a given moment. Only relatively limited number of things have to be done or let happen.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Whatever you feel is the problem, get an objective, second expert's opinion on it before you try to force through any arbitrary solution. Today's astral moves defeat themselves in almost any field of activity.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Ideas bubble plentifully, and many of them burst just when they are shining brightest. Enjoy playing with possibilities, but give serious plans a time for maturing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Much that you thought valid shows flaws in the light of today's questions. Leaping to conclusions is the least likely method of successful action.

COMMENT: There is no blanket rule that will cover all postoperative reactions. Call it psychological. One woman becomes depressed because she believes that her "womanhood" is gone. But another says, "I've never been happier. Now that we've been freed of the constant fear of having more children (we already have six) we find that our sexual relations are even better and more enjoyable than they were during our honeymoon many years ago."

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it ture that eating commercial yogurt can cause blindness? — Miss S.

COMMENT: In spite of what you may have been hearing lately, I do not believe there is sufficient evidence to prove that yogurt is a threat. Occasionally, I take some myself.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am in my 60s and take a sleeping pill about once every week or two. My doctor has prescribed it. He says it won't hurt, as long as I don't increase the frequency of the dose. How do You feel about it? — Mr. V.

COMMENT: I go along with your doctor. When indicated, an occasional sleeping pill is a harmless way of getting a needed good night's sleep. You won't get into the habit if you follow your doctor's directions.

Small Business Loans Announced by Grossman

TORONTO (CP) — Small businesses across Ontario will be eligible today for loans of up to $50,000 on terms of up to 10 years, Allan Grossman, minister of trade and development, announced Thursday.

A small business will be defined as one in which the owner's investment does not exceed $300,000, he said. Funds will be available for companies that want to expand, replace imports, establish or increase exports.

Manufacturing and service industries such as food processing, canning, machine shops and printing will be eligible.

Mr. Grossman also outlined expansion of the Equitable Share of Opportunity (ESO) program for slow-growth areas and a venture-capital fund which will provide loans of up to $100,000 to businesses that want to try a new venture.

All three programs were announced in the throne speech.

Mr. Grossman said $7½ million has been budgeted for the three loan programs.

Canadian industries in slow-growth areas, mostly in Northern and eastern Ontario, will be eligible under the ESO plan for forgiveable loans of up to 50 per cent of the cost of new plants and equipment.

Previously, loans under ESO provided 33 1-3 per cent of the first $250,000 and 25 per cent of the balance. U.S.-owned companies in Ontario will continue to be eligible for loans on that basis.

Mr. Grossman told Jack Stokes (NDP—Thunder Bay) funds will be available through the Northwestern Ontario Development Corp. on the same basis as through the Eastern Development Corp., but the list of eligible businesses will not be expanded to include mining and forestry.

The venture-capital fund will provide loans up to $100,000 for businesses who have trouble getting risk money elsewhere in Canada, he said.

In other business Thursday:

—The legislature gave second reading, approval in principle, to the government's bill allowing a five-per-cent corporation tax deduction for machinery purchases.

—Agriculture Minister William Stewart said he was unaware of legislation before the Quebec house to control the import of agricultural products from other provinces. He had Opposition leader Robert Nixon he had not heard of a Quebec plan to establish agricultural checkpoints along the Quebec-Ontario and Quebec-New Brunswick borders.

—Allan Grossman, minister of trade and development told the house that a senior official of Arva Lift Systems, near London, Ont., had threatened to lay off 40 employees or sell the company to United States interests if the Ontario Development Corporation does not grant it a loan.

—Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said that the provincial health department was drafting legislation to define the scope all health disciplines should have. He was replying to Mr. Nixon who had asked about the Ontario Provincial Police raid on the laboratory of a denture manufacturer.

Modesty Truth's Brand Mark

Thoughts at Large:

It is worth keeping in mind that what is called "the conquest of nature" by science did not begin until men ceased manipulating nature for profitable results and began to seek for basic understanding. It was the theoretical quest for "truth" and not the practical search for "fruit" or mistresses that (paradoxically) provided the greatest fruits.

What establishments can never see is that revolutions are not "caused" by subversives, who only take the credit for overthrowing a structure after the establishment itself has eroded the foundation by neglecting to make necessary reforms in time. It's strange that we do our best to weed out the unfit in service of the state during war, but make no efforts to weed out the unfit who offer their service of state during war, in time of peace; which is absurd, since such men are likely to lead us into an ill-considered war.

Our way of distinguishing truth from all its counterfeits is by modesty: truth demands only to be heard among others while its counterfeits demand that others be silenced.

How long it takes us to accept, and act upon, even a commonplace maxim of intelligence about our society is expressed in a quote from W. E. B. Du Bois' book, "The Souls of Black Folk," written 70 years ago, which plainly told us: "The chief problem in any community cursed with crime is not the punishment of the criminals, but the preventing of the young from being trained to crime." (A warning almost totally neglected in the intervening seven decades of mounting slum crime.)

Chicken-and-egg War Enters Commons Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The so-called chicken-and-egg war swept over provincial boundaries Thursday and into the Commons, and there are indications it will become a burning political issue before a settlement is reached.

It comes at a time when the Conservative party is bracing itself for a strong, last-ditch stand against federal legislation to create national farm marketing boards. And Prime Minister Trudeau says these are the boards that will end the chicken-and-egg war.

Despite the increasing heat of battle, Liberal sources say Mr. Trudeau has no intention of plans to step into the fray which is being fought largely with chickens from one province against eggs from another province.

By pointing to the federal farm marketing legislation as the potential armistice, the sources say, the government expects to make it more difficult for Conservative MPs to hold up the bill.

Conservative MPs have charged that the marketing boards would result in eastern domination, lower livestock production, bring on greater corporate controls and generally hurt the Canadian agriculture industry.

But in the meantime, the provinces have been establishing their own restrictions. Quebec first acted by restricting the entry of lower-priced Ontario eggs, then Ontario took similar action against Quebec broiler chickens.

British Columbia then placed restrictions on outside chickens and other provinces, including Alberta, Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia, followed suit.

Then there were reports from Quebec City Wednesday that Quebec is considering erecting border stations to control the influx of agriculture products.

Against this background, the government faced a barrage of questions Thursday as opposition MPs tried to find out what Ottawa intends to do about the increasing warfare.

"We're in this mess," said Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin, "because this government was too cowardly to do something some time ago."

The question is to come before the Supreme Court of Canada soon—May 31 is the expected date—when the Manitoba government will set out to prove that interprovincial trade barriers are unconstitutional.

Recreation Expansion Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — Decentralization, more citizen involvement, a wider choice of recreation activities and more government financial support were among recommendations Thursday of the study committee on recreation services in Ontario.

The report was tabled in the Ontario legislature by Arthur Wishart, minister of financial and commercial affairs, on behalf of Education Minister Robert Welch who was releasing it simultaneously at Peterborough to the Ontario Municipal Recreation Association Committee.

The committee recommended as a general policy that action at every government level be based on:

—Planned involvement of citizen groups in the decision-making processes;

—Decentralization of program development and operation;

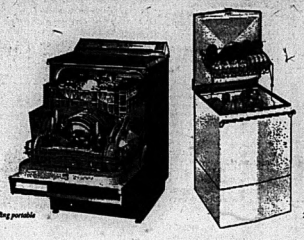
—The preservation and encouragement of a wide range of program choices for individuals in privately and publicly-sponsored activities.

It said that in order to avoid duplication of services, government action is required to establish support machinery at the local, regional and provincial levels.

In order to ensure a wide range of services, some of which will be offered by private agencies, government financial support of non-commercial organizations should be provided.

The council would have a structure and function prescribed by statute, public funds for its operation, and be accountable to the municipal council.

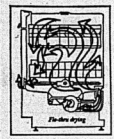
Other recommendations included:



—Consolidation of community recreation services under a single department or a new department;

—More government information concerning community recreation services;

—Boards of education be encouraged and supported by funds to extend the use of school and other facilities;



—Curriculum in leisure activities be developed through the education department so students can acquire leisure skills at an early age.

If the grass looks greener on the other side, your neighbour's probably using:

Weed 'n Feed with Killex doesn't do things by halves. It feeds your lawn with a long-lasting fertilizer that releases UF nitrogen slowly into the soil — for lush green growth. And at the same time Weed 'n Feed applies Killex, the weed killer that gets weeds even 2,4-D misses. Weed 'n Feed with Killex is lightweight, yet concentrated so a 22 lb. bag covers a full 5000 sq. feet. And it flows evenly through your lawn spreader. You can't go wrong with it.

LAWN AND PLANT CARE

Lawns — How many times a year should a lawn be fertilized? For best results, spring, summer and fall. What formula? Soils differ, so requirements differ. But it's generally agreed that a 20-10-5 ratio is the best overall formula. If you use a fertilizer of this type, you can be sure of good results.

Weeds—If the only weeds in your lawn are simple dandelions and plantains, a 2,4-D type of weed killer will clear them up in a hurry. Either spray with Weed-No-More or use Weed 'N Feed 20-10-5 Lightweight Fertilizer with 2,4-D.

However if you have hard-to-kill weeds such as Ground Ivy, Hen-All, Black Medick (Yellow Clover), Chickweed, etc., you'll need something more potent. Use Killex as a spray, or in the form of Weed 'N Feed 20-10-5 Fertilizer with Killex.

Shrubs, Hedges, Evergreens — Control weeds with Green Cross Granular Weed Preventer containing Trifluralin. This chemical prevents weed seeds from germinating in the soil. So if the soil starts clean (after a good hoeing, for instance) it'll stay clean.

Technicians Unite!

Dentists Face Biting Critic

TORONTO (CP) — A public relations specialist hired by a group of Ontario dental technicians is preaching revolution against the provinces dentists.

Gordon M. Smith said in an interview Friday that "there is no law against the violent overthrow of dentistry."

The war between dentists and technicians concerns a section of the Ontario Dentistry Act, which says dental technicians can make false teeth only on a dentist's prescription and cannot sell them directly to the public.

Investigators from the college and the provincial police raided three dental laboratories in Toronto earlier this week and seized records and files. If those whose premises were raided are charged and convicted of illegal practice, each will face a fine of between $50 and $200.

The five-month-old Denturist Society of Ontario has asked Ontario Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence for amendments to the act permitting dental technicians to deal directly with the public. Such laws exist in Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia.

(Earlier this week, Dr. R. T. Potter, minister without portfolio in the Ontario government said greater use must be made of paramedical personnel.

(Speaking to the Ontario Welfare Council's annual conference, he said "medical workers other than doctors must be trained to take over minor procedures now somewhat jealously guarded by doctors."

(In calling for a total health care program, Dr. Potter said more effective use should be made of all medical and paramedical workers, and said appliances and dental care must be included in a total health care program.)

Mr. Smith, 37, a native of Winnipeg, is dividing his time between Ontario and Nova Scotia, where a similar struggle is occuring.

This week, he challenged the Royal College of Dental Surgeons to name a representative for a public debate.

But, he says he will be surprised if such a debate takes place.

"I've never been able to get a dentist on a public platform since the first such debate in Manitoba," he said.

He talked about "tie tough and dirty" battles that ranged in Manitoba and Saskatchewan between dentists and technicians.

He said dental organizations in both those provinces hired "provocateurs" in an effort to trap denturists and gather incriminating evidence.

In Manitoba, two such agents tried to extort money from technicians by offering to warn them of impending raids by dentists' investigators.

He said their conversations were tape-recorded, broadcast on a Winnipeg television station, then handed over the provincial attorney-general. One agent was convicted of extortion while another fled Canada.

"I am disgusted at the tactics used by so-called professionals," said Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith said the 125 members of the Ontario denturist society have pledged $100 each a month to finance the battle "until we win."

Euromart Ministers Meeting

BRUSSELS (AP) — Finance ministers of the six Common Market countries met today in emergency session to try to dam the flood of United States dollars into Europe and keep the monetary crisis from wrecking the beginnings of West European unity.

The finance ministers met as the dollar plummeted to a record low in West Germany. The Brussels meeting is expected to be difficult.

The six ministers have before them proposals from the market's executive commission, representing the joint interests of the six as a whole. They are aimed at preserving the unity of the Common Market and are authoritatively reported to:

—Omit any provision for floating exchange rates—a West German suggestion — outright changes in currency values, or a change in the price of gold.

—Provide the first steps to control the freewheeling market in Eurodollars—an amount of $50,000 million to $60,000 million on deposit outside the United States. Their unrestricted movement back and forth across the Atlantic, reacting to interest rates and prospective changes in currency values, is the immediate cause of the crisis.

These proposals also appeared aimed at spiking in advance rival West German and French proposals.

Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France was recently reported suggesting that the way out of the crisis is for the United States to raise the price of gold—that is, devalue the dollar.

Rail Tank Car Leaks

HAWKESBURY, Ont. (CP) — The stench of choking ammonia gas clung to this eastern Ontario town today, a reminder of a narrowly-averted disaster that forced evacuation of about 3,000 residents Friday and sent 150 people to hospital.

9,000, on the Ottawa River near the Quebec border, when a thick bluish fog of ammonia began leaking from a railway tank car Friday night.

It spread through the town sending residents into the street coughing and vomiting. All but one of the injured were soon released from hospital.

Sgt. Lionel Montpetit of the Hawkesbury police said the accident occurred when liquid ammonia, being transferred under high pressure from the rail car to a storage vat at the Canadian International Paper Co. plant, burst a valve about 9:30 p.m. EDT. It was not closed until 1:30 a.m. today.

Police, fire and civil defence officials urged nearby families to evacuate quickly. Many did not need to be told to move out.

They streamed from the houses vomiting, coughing, staggering and gasping for oxygen.

Hawkesbury is about 55 miles east of Ottawa on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Ammonia is a common commercial chemical, colorless but with a pungent odor reminiscent of ordinary laundry bleach, which is shipped as a liquid under high pressure.

Sgt. Montpetit said oxygen masks and tanks were collected to supply immediate assistance to people overcome by ammonia. Loudspeakers mounted on cars were used to broadcast warnings.

But 150 residents required hospital treatment of some kind before being discharged later in the evening, he said.

Malcolm Dicaire, 62, a Canadian International Paper Co. employee, received superficial burns from close contact with the escaping gas. He was in

Quebec Poultry Seized To Test Ontario Curbs

HAWKESBURY, Ont. (CP) — The sale of about 140 Quebec broiler chickens has been blocked since Thursday night at a supermarket here under powers recently given provincial marketing boards.

"Where do you want your Mother's Day card sent?"

Maurice Rozon, the store's owner, said Friday field staff of the Ontario Broiler Chicken Producers' Marketing Board found the chickens on display in freezer units at his store in this community 50 miles east of Ottawa.

They put detention tags on them, because no permit had been issued for importation of the birds.

Mr. Rozon said he purposely allowed the chickens to be found to test Bill 10, passed in the Ontario legislature three weeks ago.

The bill gives farm marketing boards the power to issue permits to sell produce and detain produce which doesn't have a permit. It was passed in an effort to stop the flooding of the Ontario market with Quebec chickens.

Mr. Rozon said he stopped selling Quebec chickens two months ago after being asked by the marketing board. He then sold only Ontario birds, but had to charge 10 cents a pound more for them and his business suffered.

He said he decided to make a test case of the new legislation, imported more Quebec chickens and waited patiently for investigators to find them.

Village Deserted

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que. (CP) — This tiny village, home to 1,300 persons until Tuesday night's killer landslide, was all but abandoned early today.

Many evacuees have vowed never to return to the community following the disaster which saw 15 million tons of earth sink into the soft terain near the waters of Riviere aux Vases. The slide claimed the lives of members of 17 families, 17 of whom were children.

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson told the House of Commons yesterday government economic data is not stored in computer banks in the United States.

Davis Reaffirms Interest in Telecommunications

HAMILTON — Premier William Davis reaffirmed here the stand he first outlined at the opening of the Bell Canada Training Centre in Belleville April 14 — that Ontario may act to protect its own interests in the control of telecommunications with or without Ottawa's consent.

"Ontario recognizes the potential of this mode of communication and, without entering into dialogue with the federal authorities, has policies that recognize that potential," he told Bell Canada officials at the Belleville Four Seasons hotel.

The threat to override federal jurisdiction, if necessary, in the communications field was repeated Friday in a speech to the annual meeting of the Radio and Television News Directors of Central Canada.

Mr. Davis said Ontario won't challenge federal authority in the communications field "just for the sake of challenge".

But, if Ottawa did not agree to broader-based provincial participation, the province may be forced to "take such action as we deem appropriate in the interest of the people of Ontario".

It was an unusually hard hitting speech for the normally staid premier, who was in the city as part of a two-day meet-the-people tour. He also went to Durham Friday night for a testimonial dinner in honor of his colleague, Revenue Minister Eric Winkler.

The province already has announced plans to create a department of transportation and communication which presumably would seek to exercise more management of federally-controlled telecommunications.

He told the broadcasters that the cabinet would be making a decision soon and "we shall certainly be acting" on that decision.

Ontario's only avenue now in shaping telecommunications policy is as an interested party before such federal tribunals as the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

But Ontario was determined to establish a better vehicle than the CRTC "for continuing dialogue at the policy level".

Areas of concern for the province were radio and television broadcasting, educational television, cable and special-purpose video transmission, telephone, telegraph and the proposed terrestrial communication satellite. Channel 19 already is operating as the province's education television channel, but is dependent on federal transmission lines.

Cable television is a dynamic new community resource which "is quite clearly a legitimate concern of every provincial government".

This speared to be in support of the position taken recently here Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec, although Mr. Davis said later in an interview he had not discussed the issue with the Quebec leader.

He said the federal government had shown uncertainty and permitted prolonged delays in trying to reach a policy on cable television.

Quinte Homebuilders Concerned About Plan

TRENTON (Staff) — The Quinte Homebuilders' Association is preparing a brief for presentation to council Monday containing its views on the town's new official plan.

It is expected Monday, Lowen, the association's president, will ask permission to discuss the builders' assessment of the document during the regular committee-of-the-whole meeting.

The group had asked council at the last regular meeting to hold off approval of the plan until they had opportunity to review it.

For various reasons Trenton homebuilders were unaware that a public meeting had been held to unveil the plan in April but felt their view should be taken into consideration.

In a homebuilders' gathering here last night, association members told of having considerable difficulty trying to gain access to the plan.

Initially, they were given a photocopy of the map in the weighty new plan package, later a copy was borrowed from a member of council — none were available for interested parties such as the Quinte Homebuilders.

It was not until this last Wednesday that the association received sufficient copies for its perusal.

Mr. Lowen expressed regret last night that the planning board had not consulted such organizations as Quinte Homebuilders while it formulated the new plan.

He said builders had trouble dealing with Belleville in the past but now had developed a good liaison with that city.

"What we need is communication," he said.

It was the view of Don Kelier that it is the "builder-developer who has to make the plan work."

The group is in complete agreement that there is much good in the new official plan for Trenton, particularly the projection to turn the Trent River shore into a parkland strip.

However, the Quinte Homebuilders do have their objections. "We want to be constructive," said Trenton builder, Stan Klemencic, a former planning board member.

They feel the plan provides for too much industrial land and an overabundance of parkland.

The group disagrees with the five acres per hundred land use areas on Carrying Place Road. By the plan, property at the foot of Dufferin and along Carrying Place Road will shift from residential to industrial.

Another area of some concern is the industrial use strip around the Cosmos Imperial Cotton mill. The homebuilders feel this would be an ideal site for highrise development — with Mount Pelion in one side, the river to the other.

One source of considerable annoyance is that the R7 strip along Dundas East will never be able to attract highrise buildings as proposed and intended, because it will not be possible for sufficient parcels of land to be assembled in the area to profitably allow such construction.

"The density scale is such that no one could assemble enough land," says Don Kelier.

By the plan's density scale a property under two acres in size may contain no more than 16 units, one between two and three acres, no more than 20, one between three and four no more than 30, one over four no more than 40.

Quinte Homebuilders do not disagree with the per acre densities for larger land parcels but question whether it is possible to put together sufficient blocks of property for highrises in those few places where they will be permitted.

Stan Klemencic expressed the feeling that these densities would work against the small builder. He pointed out that in the 14 unit per acre restriction his 63-apartment highrise tower approved for the west side would not be allowed because the property is less than two acres.

Mr. Lowen stated that Trenton now has 324 acres of parkland. Project Planners indicate 200 are needed for a projected population of 20,000 in the next decade but the plan provides for 400 acres of park.

He added that there are now 182 industrial acres. This will be boosted to 600 in the plan, while only 200 are required.

Trenton builder Wasil Sidor predicted that if developers cannot work with the plan's framework there will be a halt in town. He mentioned that he has already started to build at Bayside.

Data Centre on Loan

Loyalist Manpower students have been loaned the facilities of the Unemployment Insurance Commission to learn key punching. After the two-month course, each of the students will be fully qualified key punch operators. Vern Perry, shown here with two students, is the Regional Director of the UIC.

Loyalist Key Punchers Learn Trade at UIC

Loyalist students, through the Canada Manpower retraining program, are using the facilities in the computer centre of the Unemployment Insurance Commission to learn operation of the key punch machine.

Because of the expense of the equipment it was difficult for Loyalist College to provide this type of training until the UIC offered their facilities.

Noel Stockton, public relations officer for the UIC, mentioned this is the essence of the community college program. Getting into the working situation where much core can be learned is far more rewarding than the simple classroom situation.

Taught by Mrs. Patricia Soutter, the students, after completion of the course, will be fully qualified key punch operators.

Because of the complexities and depth of the course, it has been extended from a one-month program to a two-month program.

Women taking the course are given a salary from Canada Manpower while they are training and the only skill needed to enter the course was that they could each type at least 40 words a minute.

Because of the amount of interest shown in the course, it will be run again during the fall.

Napanee Council Anti Youth Hostel

NAPANEE — Napanee town council rejected a proposal brought to it Monday to turn the old post office building on Dundas St. into a youth hostel.

Toronto businessman Reuban Cappe, who now owns the unused building, sought permission to operate a non-profit hotel under the Canadian Youth Hostels Association, an affiliate of the International Youth Hostel Association that provides accommodation for young people throughout Great Britain and Europe.

He told councillors that three years in the hotel would have to be members of the Canadian or international associations and that fees would be limited to three days.

Mr. Cappe said 230 English lads who are touring Canada this summer had asked for accommodation. He added that each member of the association is carefully scrutinized before being taken into the organization.

Donald Mansbridge, a Napanee youth who attended the council meeting to support the hostel, said there would be more than two million youths travelling the highways of Canada this summer. He asked councillors where they expected the transient youth to stay.

Police chairman Cecil Baker made the motion to "strongly object" to a youth hostel being sited anywhere in Napanee.

His motion was unanimously passed by council.

Mr. Baker said that there are certain undesirable elements using hostels and for that reason he would do anything in his power to keep them out of Napanee. He added that there is sufficient police in the town to maintain order as it is, without having a youth hostel to worry about.

New Jail Is Ready For Use

Ontario's first regional jail, the Quinte Detention Centre, will open in Napanee Saturday, May 15, at 2 p.m.

The detention centre is unique, being the first of its kind in Ontario, and possibly in Canada.

It will serve the four counties of Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Hastings and Prince Edward, replacing old local jails that are now antiques.

Lennox and Addington County Jail in Napanee was built in 1865, Frontenac's in Kingston in 1855, Hastings' in Belleville in 1838 and Prince Edward's in Picton in 1834.

Minister of correctional services, Syd Apps, will be master of ceremonies for the official opening. Public works minister James Auld will present the jail key to former correctional services minister Allan Grossman to mark the ceremonial opening.

Tours will be conducted for the public Saturday afternoon and refreshments will be served.

The regional detention centre will accommodate 104 prisoners who are remanded awaiting trial, awaiting sentence or awaiting transfer to another institution following sentence. The maximum security area will accommodate prisoners serving short sentences, usually 30 days or less.

Lab Technichians Are Graduated

At the graduation exercises last night in education hall of the Belleville General Hospital, all nine students received recognition for completion of the laboratory technology course.

The new director of education, Dr. R. S. Smith, stated in his address that more and more weight would be placed on the technician in the next 10 years because of advances in research.

"Here is a career that will give rewards of immense satisfaction to the responsible technician," commented Dr. Smith.

The gold medal, (Board of Governor's Award) was presented to Miss Donna Closson. It is awarded annually in recognition of highest aggregate marks.

Miss Marlene Berry was presented the silver medal, (Medical Staff Association Award) for outstanding achievement during the apprenticeship phase.

John Pearce, the only male student, received both the Ortho Diagnostics Award for outstanding achievement in blood banking, and the Warner-Chilcott award for outstanding achievement in the field of hemetology.

In her valedictory address, Lynda Aitken said that through the last two years "we have been given the opportunity to do a lot of growing and our greatest thanks must go to Miss Ocdol, our chief instructor. She was always there, both when we were having a problem or when we were creating a problem."

Technicians Graduate

After two years of intensive training, the entire class of Laboratory technicians at Belleville General Hospital graduated last night. Guest speaker for the evening was Dr. R. S. Smith (right) new director for the school of Medical Laboratory Technology. Valedictorian, Miss Lynda Aitken, (centre) said we owe our greatest thanks to our chief instructor Miss E. hospital Tet was expected to be released shortly.

Constable Edgar MacGregor, 36, said he received the first warning from a woman who reported a white cloud hanging low over part of the town. Constable MacGregor said he drove to the area near the paper plant "and decided after a whiff or two it was no ordinary cloud".

Later, he was overcome by the fumes and sent to hospital.

"If someone hadn't helped me, I was finished and that's the story all around here," he said.

Jean Desjardins, 50, a CIP employee, said he was standing about 30 feet from the accident.

"I was blinded. I choked and I had to run. I never did see Dicaire."

Mr. Desjardins said he later went to his home, less than two blocks from the plant, and found his wife had been taken to hospital. Mrs. Desjardins had been returned home earlier today.

"Twenty years I've been working in that place, smelling that stuff, but I've never seen anything like this," said Mr. Desjardins.

H. S. Young, personnel superintendent for CIP, said the firm will be in full operation today. There had been no serious injuries and there was no need to create a major issue out of the situation", he said in a telephone interview.

Addiction Centre Likely for City

Garth Toombes, representative of the Addiction Research Foundation, presented at a meeting Wednesday that Belleville would soon be the site of an addiction research centre.

Mr. Toombes was asked to come to Belleville with members of his organization to discuss with hospital representatives and concerned citizens the likelihood of a centre following the drug seminars conducted last month at Loyalist College.

Isidore Cooperman, director of the United Community Services, had asked while attending the seminars, "What do we do when people leave and the problem is left with us?".

Mr. Toombes showed an interest in the Belleville area because of its potential as a focal point for a large area, making the projected centre usable by the greatest number of people.

Hugh Pepper, faculty member of Loyalist College outlined the needs of the area by saying "we need co-ordination of information, education of people dispensing this information, front line service for the acute case and a counselor in the area to provide help and guidance on a day - to - day basis."

Mr. Pepper complained that information at this time had been from arms length, implying a token service.

Mr. Toombes, in closing, explained this meeting was designed as a probe to determine the extent of the problem, the nature of the problem and how urgent it is.

"I am sure that in the very near future, further steps will be taken to assess the area by "members of the research foundation and if the need is present, a centre will be based in Belleville," concluded Mr. Toombes.

Three Injured In Accident

COBOURG (Staff) — Three area men were admitted to Cobourg General Hospital yesterday following a single vehicle accident at Grafton, seven miles east of here.

The jeep they were driving left the roadway at about 1:25 a.m. and rolled over, bringing a damage total of $2,000.

The driver, Robert E. Martcotte, of 75 N. Front St., sustained severe back injuries in the mishap.

Passengers William A. Bonter of Marmora and Donald J. Laing of Corbyville also received back injuries and lacerations.

Remember When?

Pollution Was No Problem

Air and water pollution is mainly a post-war problem and until at least 1950 was not considered sufficiently serious to mention.

At least there was no mention of pollution in the conservation branch report on the Moira Valley following the Moira River Conservation Authority being established more than 20 years ago.

This was noted last week by Bill Armstrong of Madoc, chairman of the authority pollution control advisory board at its first regular meeting in Canniton.

Mr. Armstrong said there was no mention in the report of pollution or pollution problems, and suggested this was indicative of the changes that have occurred during the past 20 years.

The advisory board chairman suggested that pollution areas in the watershed be systematically examined and, through a well planned public relations program, procurate information about pollution problems and what should be done to solve them.

Committee members discussed the idea of mapping problem pollution areas in the watershed and agreed there was not sufficient staff to deal adequately with air, soil and water pollution problems.

Specific problems encountered by the air and waste management branches, the Ontario Water Resources Commission and health units, as well as building in flood plain land will be topics of discussion for the next board meeting.

This Area 'Forgotten' Says Picton Lawyer

NAPANEE (Staff) — If regional government is established in eastern Ontario residents may discover themselves left with "a few commissions" and also few representatives. Picton lawyer William Lane, who declined nomination for the Liberal candidacy here Wednesday night said he fears government will be taken away from the people. "We may be able to run our fire department, our water works and we may be able to look after where the sewer goes if we abide by the regulations," warned the Picton town councillor. He was speaking during the Prince Edward - Lennox Liberal Association's nomination meeting in Prince Charles School.

Mr. Lane predicted that if regional government is set up there will be possibley "very few representatives", and added that Prince Edward County probably would be combined with Hastings County "in some way." He suggested Napane area residents would be joined with the city of Kingston under the new government plan. "You'll have very few representatives on the local regional government. You won't have a say in your local municipalities, there will not be the interest there is now," he asserted.

The Liberal party member added that it will be difficult to find representatives willing to run. "You're going to have to pay them to do this because it's going to be a full-time, part-time job and there just aren't that many people of the calibre you'd like to see on your council that can afford to do this sort of thing," he remarked.

Mr. Lane stated that he does not feel the governmental system will be appreciably improved through regionalization. "Although it may be necessary in larger centres, I hope in this forgotten area of eastern Ontario they will give it second thoughts before they foist it on us," he commented.

Mr. Lane called the planning policy of the department of municipal affairs "one of the major problems" he encounters in his profession. He referred to farmers' reactions of surprise when lawyers explains to them that they cannot sell portions of their land for building lots. Applications must first be made to Toronto through the Municipal Affairs Department and often they are "lost" among the files creating prolonged delays.

The Conservative government has no planning policy as far as our area is concerned. A few years ago, a former minister of municipal affairs stated that there was to be no further residential development in predominantly rural areas and this is the policy the Conservative government is going by today," he recalled.

Mr. Lane stressed that planning is necessary but said there is no leadership from Toronto showing specific plans for this area. He mentioned a plan presented last fall showing "a hari-kari dream" of a city extending approximately from Cobourg to Toronto with green belts around it. "But even that didn't get to us. I reiterate we are a forgotten area of the province," he said.

Mr. Lane added that many farmers expect to sell lots from their farms "to help out their farms "on help out consideration from the department in Toronto is given to these persons. "the basic problem is a lack of any policy," remarked the lawyer. "They are foisting the same policy on us that they had in the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto and this is not good," he declared.

Mr. Lane addressed fellow Liberals "to get a few things off his chest", then refused his nomination for the Liberal candidacy in the Prince Edward - Lennox riding.

Child's Safety

National Child Safety Week is just about to conclude, but we have to realize that this is only symbolic. In other words child safety must be a continuing concern. That it is not, at the moment, is an unhappy fact of life.

We hear of child beatings, of mental as well as physical cruelty directed toward infants and others of tender years. That these may stem from mental instability makes them no less reprehensible. Injuries to children due to carelessness or accidents are another thing and the statistics in this regard are frightening.

According to the World Health Organization, Canada leads the developing countries in the accident rate for children under one year and for children between 5 and 9 years. For a country which enjoys such a high material standard of living (even though we reportedly have dropped to fourth behind the U.S., Sweden and Switzerland) this is no cause for satisfaction.

The Canada Safety Council lists the major causes of child accidents and offers advice on how to avoid them. They come under such headings as burns, cuts, drownings, electricity, falls, firearms, fire and explosives (leaving children alone in the home has been found to be the major reason for the high incidence of child deaths in fires), machinery, poisons, suffocation, toys and traffic.

Parental responsibility, says the Safety Council, is at the heart of child safety.

On occasions the circumstances of child death can be almost beyond comprehension and yet they serve once again to illustrate that it could have been prevented. For instance, in Hamilton last Sunday a five-year-old Brantford girl was fatally hurt when she was crushed between two cars. As Christine Kurtz was crossing the street with her grandmother, and walking between two parked vehicles, a third car crashed out of control, in reverse, into one of the parked cars ,ramming it into the other one. Christine and her grandmother were caught between them and the little girl died two hours later in the nearby general hospital. The grandmother was admitted with shoulder injuries.

The woman driver of the car told police that her pet dog jumped to the floor of the car and stepped on the accelerator. The car which had been in reverse, went out of control.

For those concerned nothing can erase the agonizing circumstances of this child's death, but it must be said here and now, for the benefit of the living, that neither children nor animals should be permitted to ride in the front seats of cars. Safety must also be the watchword under the other headings mentioned from burns to toys. Prevention is better than cure.

An Unenviable Record

Samuel Butler, in an earlier time, said of the largest French-speaking city outside France, "Oh God Oh Montreal!" We are uncertain of what inspired the remark, something, we understand, to do with the liquor laws of the period, but it could well apply to the city's lamentable record in the field of crime.

The latest incident, one of outright murder and terrorism, at a downtown bank, inspires a sense of incredulity as well as disgust. An elderly Italian businessman and world-traveller, Comrado Festa, was killed in a wild exchange of shots between two bandits and Brinks guards, and his wife was wounded. One bandit died. In New York, incidentally, another Italian visitor died recently from knife wounds after being mugged by hoodlums.

But to get back to Montreal, police admit that the downtown area is a favorite hunting ground of bank robbers. Why then are police or city guards not there in such strong numbers as to discourage this sort of thing? One wonders too if the armored cars and uniforms of the Brinks guards do not act as a magnet for bandits. Some bullion, or whatever, might just as easily, and more securely, have been transferred in unmarked vehicles and with guards in civilian clothes. Rather in the style of the police in Lakewood, a new community of 100,000 in Colorado, where the police wear blazers and slacks, and have their pistols in hidden holsters.

It is no credit to Montreal, an attractive city in most other respects, that its underworld is one of the most brazen and ruthless on the continent. It is getting so that even innocent visitors from overseas are not safe from their depredations. Of all places, the police in Montreal should know by now how best to protect the banks and public from gangsters. That they evidently do not is a matter for concern.

The Checkered Path of Anti-war Protest in U.S.

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — The urban-guerrilla tactics of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators in Washington seem to have fallen well short of two main targets in their initial phases.

Firstly, the bureaucracy has not been seriously disturbed. Secondly, the wider public has shown no inclination to expand its largely passive opposition to the war in Southeast Asia.

Anti-war feeling for most Americans, in short, means telling the public-opinion surveys and their congressmen that they want U.S. troops to get out of Vietnam.

Spokesmen for the loosely-organized activists now making hit-and-run forays against traffic movement in Washington had said they wanted to enlist public support for more "involved" opposition to the war.

But one of the most common scenes in Washington's streets Monday was of determined non-involvement by the public.

Civil servants and other workers travelling to their jobs put on their most neutral faces and kept moving when they came upon activists rolling parked cars into the streets, piling up trash obstacles or running from police tear-gas barrages.

Balmy spring weather has brought a series of protests to the U.S. capital, all of them in opposition to the Vietnam war but each markedly different in character.

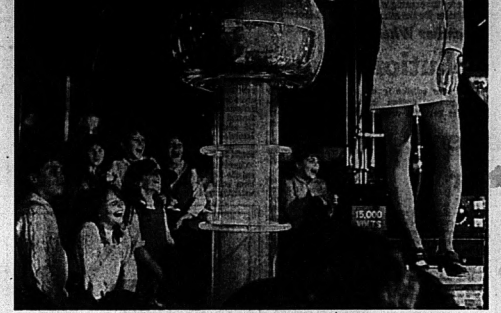
A massive protest march two weeks ago brought out a disparate crowd of young activists, middle-aged and middle-class housewives and workers, and even some elderly and professional people. It was designed to be—and was—peaceful and orderly.

The character of protest shifted the following week, when thousands of veterans of the Vietnam conflict and their supporters staged a series of confrontations with congressional and government leaders, climaxed by a dramatic march at the Capitol where veterans hurled their combat medals onto a heap. That, too, was largely peaceful.

What both the residents and the government in Washington have been most apprehensive about from the beginning has been the escalation into disruption promised for this week by the "Mayday Tribe" and other activists.

Although the week has only begun and any forecasts would be premature, the threatened traffic paralysis and disturbance of the city's normal rhythm have not occurred.

And the arrest of thousands of young people in blue jeans and colored head-bands—whose clothes were sometimes their reason to get them arrested—could put a severe crimp on the activists' plans for prolong their tactics all week.



Government spokesmen have said that obstruction in the bureaucracy was no higher than usual. While there was no reason to accept that statement as gospel, the visual evidence in Washington was of a city only moderately disturbed despite ranks of armed soldiers at crucial intersections and whiffs of tear-gas in the air.

The history of anti-war rioting in the United States, however, may lead the government to be cautious in its optimism.

In recent years, the activists have often served to broaden the range of what the ordinary public considers acceptable anti-war behavior.

The latest wave, from the Mid-west, the white-haired teachers from the suburbs and other respectable elements of the anti-war time never have dreamed of marching on the Capitol. Only two weeks ago they did marches.

If President Nixon were to up-year to slacken the pace of U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, today's neutral citizens could conceivably be pushing parked cars into the streets by the month after tomorrow.

The Age of Aquarius

Wonders will never cease. We are not sure how the young woman can be connected up with the mains as it were, 15,000 volts worth, and suffer nothing worse than having her hair stand on end. Anyway, it is one of the funny things that can happen to you at the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

May 8, 1971 . . .

The Second World War hostilities in Europe ended 26 years ago today—in 1945 —with the unconditional surrender of all German land, sea and air forces. The surrender had been signed the previous day by German envoys representing Allied delegates in a schoolhouse at Rheims, France, the temporary headquarters of Gen. Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander.

1896—130 were drowned when the boat Dandarah capsized in the Nile.

1931—Communist prisoners of war seized control of Koje Island camp, Korea.

1950—Flooding of the Red River valley south of Winnipeg in a flood which did $25 million damage before the crisis ended May 25.

1948—Joseph Atkinson, Toronto newspaper publisher, died.

1947—Harry Gordon Selfridge, English department store pioneer, died.

1884—Former United States president Harry Truman was born.

1905—Alberta, Saskatchewan, Assiniboia and Athabasca were formed as districts of the N.W.T.

1828—Jean Henri Dunant, founder of the Red Cross and YMCA, was born.

1559—Elizabeth I signed the Act of Uniformity.

1429—Joan of Arc raised the siege of Orleans.

MP Salaries Draw Comment

The issue of the proposed increases in the salaries of MPs and senators is turning into a politicians nightmare. To accept or not to accept is the question.

Like most of us, politicians are fond of money but too great a show of enthusiasm to jump on the gravy train could well bring rejection at the polls in any upcoming election.

It is a touchy problem that seems to be producing a number of different attitudes. There is the chin out, stiff upper lip and say nothing brigade — to give it back to the treasury or to charity faction and the "I'll take it and use it for an offset in the riding" group. The majority belong in the first category — but they aren't without so much as "thank you".

It would be lovely citizens do not have the power to vote ourselves raises when we are a little short — we have to rely on our union of the working class a new contract or on the generosity of the boss. Some of the honorable members have been saying that labor ought not to have raises in routine fashion each year, but rather by merit or worth.

Not that is an interesting suggestion. If parliamentary raises were decided by worth or merit most of would present crop of politicians would be penniless or unemployed.

With the country's economy in most hideous state for decades and an employment situation that can only be described as grim, where is the indication that the worth and merit of MPs should be rewarded with a pay raise?

It has been suggested that politicians are overworked and underpaid — that they work long and irregular hours. There are thousands of people in this country who work long and irregular hours, often in very hazardous occupations nor considerably less than our hard-done - by members of parliament. And how many of us mind suffering along with the members of the senate?

Nothing Is New Under The Sun!

Ottawa Journal

The over-30 crowd, especially those over 40, get a lot of knocks these days. Truth is though they always have. Adult-child relationships haven't changed; only the issues have.

Harold W. Johnson writing in the Milwaukee Journal remembers:

"When I was 9 years old I already decided to avoid adults whenever possible. By the time I was 11 I couldn't stand to be in the same room with one. Grownups were life's great spoilers.

"They were the ones that made you stop and put everything away just when you were getting into the swim. All you ever got from them was pickup, clean up, shape up, and shut up.

But as Mr. Johnson grew up he learned that not all adults were not the "spoilers" he thought they were. To his amazement he discovered one day

". . . that the tall, hawk-faced clerk in the hardware store did not really hate kids. He turned out to be one of the best model airplane builders in the world, and he passed on some of his special secrets to me."

Most of us discovered something like that, too, with our children, and theirs. It's just too bad it takes so long.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF EYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 8, 1951

Ben Yanover, popular manager of the local City Hotel, was elected president of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville at the club's annual election of officers. Mr. Yanover who succeeds Murray Davis will take over his duties in September.

Members of the Rotary Club here learned more about the workings of the United Nations through the eyes of city teenagers at their weekly luncheon. Nancy David and Bob Gibson, members of the student party which visited the United Nations and saw some of the inner workings of that body addressed the club.

The major degrees of the Knights of Columbus were conferred here on a large class of candidates. The degrees were held in the beautiful new club rooms of Belleville Council, under the direction of District Deputy Jack G. Requa of Brockville.

30 YEARS AGO

May 8, 1941

At the regular meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society Dr. Caldwell of Toronto spoke concerning voluntary blood donor groups. He explained that the donation of blood for overseas use was already being looked after by the large cities but that many of the smaller districts were setting up volunteer blood donor groups for service in local hospitals. Dr. MacKay was questioned and spoke on the subject, representing the Belleville Hospital and Dr. Anderson also spoke, representing the medical men of the city.

50 YEARS AGO

May 8, 1921

Charles F. Holden of Toledo, an old Belleville boy, who learned the printing trade here in the '70s, is renewing acquaintances in town.

Henry Jason Parliament of Mountain View in Prince Edward County, celebrated the 87th anniversary of his birth yesterday. He is of United Empire Loyalist descent.

Bishop Seager of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario, Kingston, was interviewed by a committee of St. Thomas' Church regarding the appointment of a Vicar to succeed Archdeacon John Lyons. The committee was composed of E. A. Geen, W. O. Adams, B. F. Jennings and Dr. Mason Clarke.

Adjutant Cavender, officer in charge of the Salvation Army Corps here, has been promoted to the rank of Commandant.

The 34th Battery will go into camp here from June 20th to June 28th in a field west of the fair grounds.

Members of the Belleville Rotary Club visited Peterborough this week attended to the ceremonies in connection with the charter presentation there.

Washington Still Seen as 'Aggressor'

'Friendly' Chinese Have the Political Ball at Their Feet

By JOHN RODERICK

HONG KONG (AP) — "Fawn-ing!" the British colonial type snorted his annoyance. "Why do you Americans keep fawning on the Chinese? They're still the same, you know. They haven't changed."

He raised his brandy glass and added: "All right, and a group of correspondents.

Disagreement with this view came from an American businessman who once lived in China but has been in Hong Kong since 1949.

"It's not fawning," he said. "Fawning suggests boot licking. The smiles, in fact, are coming from the Chinese. We are only responding to them, as we should. It is about time that we stopped seeing each other and re-established our relations on a sensible basis."

A West European with more than 40 years' experience in China and on its periphery sums it up a bit differently.

"I would agree that fawning is too strong a word," he said. "But the United States could not have reacted otherwise. The Chinese have begun to grow stronger since the Cultural Revolution. They are proceeding from a position of strength. Their influence is growing in Asia while the American image is tarnished by Viet Nam and My Lai. American society is in mental danger. It must come to terms with the Chinese and President Nixon has recognized this."

That the Chinese have not changed basically in their attitude toward the U.S. government seemed evident throughout the Americans' visit last month. Everywhere Americans reported all countries to unite against the "American aggressor and his running dog" in Vietnam.

The smiles were for Americans, not for the government: The Chinese repeatedly made this distinction themselves.

After the Communists took power in 1949, they chose to put all their eggs in the Soviet basket.

Ideologically, the two parties now are poles apart. The quarrel is over Marxist purity, a dispute which to some people seems as futile as schisms of medieval Christianity.

When Nikita Khrushchev hurled the rigid doctrines of Stalinism in 1956 and decreed peaceful coexistence with other countries, the Chinese portrayed him as a traitor to Marxist principles.

The Cultural Revolution was a widespread campaign to eradicate the Khrushchevian "revisionist" influence from China.

Now victorious, Mao presumably believes China can afford to relax both at home and abroad. Westerners seen during this correspondent's visit to China said the country is less uncertain of itself than it was last year, and far removed from the suspicions of the Cultural Revolution.

The promising springtime of U.S.-Chinese relations does not mean that communism itself or Chinese society has undergone a change.

Once a policy has been decided upon at the upper level, all lower bodies must conform. Thus when the party decreed—possibly some months ago—that China would adopt a more conservative line, the word went down to the smallest rural production teams and the most basic factory cell.

Mod Priest Spurs Campaign To Help Maritime Alcoholics

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — A mod, outspoken Roman Catholic priest with a taste for wide, colorful ties and flared trousers is spurring his own campaign to help what he terms the alarming number of alcoholics in this northern New Brunswick community.

And Rev. Achille Maillet, member of the Montreal-based White Fathers of Africa, is quick to blame the church for helping to create the problem.

The priest, currently an employee of the provincial health department, says the north shore drinking problem is the worst in the province.

Flamboyantly dressed, the 46-year-old cleric looks like a one-man mod squad as he works day and night to help those with alcoholic or drug problems.

"Religion has played a part in creating an emotionally disturbed society," he says. "A bad understanding of religion has done this. In the past the church was narrow-minded . . . it is more open today. This is good but it came too late.

"It will take a century to cure the neuroticism of the people. People endure mental suffering needlessly and they like it that way. The church . . . in the past preached that human nature was bad—the damnation of happiness."

Father Maillet said one of Bathurst's largest industries has declared that 45 employees, representing about five per cent of the work force, miss work daily because of alcoholism.

A doctor in nearby Dalhousie told him that in a similar industry there, 60 employees fail to report to work daily because of drinking.

The priest readily quotes American statistics showing that for every dollar spent on liquor, seven dollars are lost by industry through loss of production.

Father Maillet said the roots of the drinking problem are in the sociology, history, and religion of the area.

His prime objective now is to establish a centre for alcoholics in Bathurst. "We need a centre where men and women can get advice and help. The centre I propose doesn't mince words in his work and this gets him into difficulties. Such was the case when he appeared on a local open-line radio program and declared 90 per cent of the students at a local high school used drugs. His statement was immediately denied by the school authorities and police but he maintains his figures are accurate.

MUSEUMS OLD AND NEW

"Where the willingness is great, the difficulties cannot be great." — Nicolo Machiavelli (1469-1527).

* * *

With the current interest shown concerning Belleville's museum, it is noteworthy museum popularity is spreading not only locally but provincially, nationally and throughout the world.

"Museum visits in the United States has skyrocketed from 50 million in 1940 to 560 million in 1967," reports a recent news conference. "The figures for 1970 show attendance was estimated at more than 600 million at 6,700 institutions."

The national endowment for the arts, created in 1965, with a $1-million federal fund, will help the American museums this year, described by museum heads across the nation as "drowning" in their own popularity.

To cite another instance: In London, England, art critic Peter Quennell speaks of the National Portrait Gallery which a mere three years ago decidedly was not a place one often visited for amusement. Is all changed to-day.

And why?

All because of a young, new director, D. Roy Strong whose "exhibitions are rare mixture of scholarship and judicious showmanship". They are said to be an artistic event: a happening".

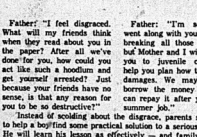
Consider his latest, entitled, "Samuel Pepys Esquire" famed diarist keeper back in 1659 to 1669. The diary is exhibited along with a bust of Pepys' wife Elizabeth. There are carefully reconstructed rooms with elegant book-cases. Prints, songbook, lute and flageolet represent his musical taste. A freshly baked pie is on the dining-room table. In the kitchen room is one of those 17th century elaborate wigs he had reluctantly adopted as he grew older and which in his diary he called together "all my maids to look upon it and they conclude it do become me".

Germany, it seems, has a "multiplicity of odd-ball" museums. Take the one in the tiny village of Schorndorf, which has the world's only Thimble Museum. The rule of the thumb at this admission-free museum is to collect at least one sample of every type of thimble ever made.

In the Black Forest at Triberg is a cuckoo clock museum, where one is warned, since the timepieces are kept in excellent order, that it is best to leave before the clocks strike 12, when a "birdsong chorus that will really drive you cuckoo, begins". There is a Soup Museum in Baden-Wurttemberg, with more than 45,000 recipes from all over the world. Visitors are free to copy any of them down.

Of special interest to women and children is the National Museum in Nuremberg which features exquisite dollhouses, some more than 300 years old, and those who come for a quick look stay on for hours, marvelling over the craftsmanship.

In Ulm, — a Bread Museum! Hundreds of different shaped loaves of bread from various countries are on display (all stale) with baking utensils, some dating from Roman times on view.



Lastly, in Munich is the Karl Valentin Nonsense Museum, named for the laughing lovable philosopher in his heyday 1920 and 1930, who felt, "how dreadful and unimportant man becomes when fate starts throwing tiny pebbles into his shoes". There is a plain brick which Little Miss Muffet sat on; the apple that Adam bit; a toothpick with fur (for winter use; dried sunbeams locked up in a safe; a pan of water is captioned "Liquid snow sculpture, a rare thing of beauty when still in its solid state".

Back now in Canada, the Canadian Citizenship Federation hopes to build a [illegible] ethnic museum where records, files and treasures of all ethnic groups of Canada may be kept. It is hoped that it will be finished in two or three years. Its site? Ottawa.

The Texas Memorial Museum at the University of Texas, however, don't know what to do with a request it received in a youngster's letter: "Dear Museum: Please send all you can on Texas. I need it by Wednesday. Thank you."

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "I feel disgraced. What will my friends think when they read about you in the paper? After all we've done for you, how could you act like such a hoodlum and get yourself arrested? Just because your friends have no sense, is that any reason for you to be so destructive?"

Instead of scolding about the disgrace, parents should try to help a boy find some practical solution to a serious problem. He will learn his lesson as effectively — and family relationships will be improved — if you show concern, rather than disgust.

Father: "I'm sorry you went along with your gang on breaking all those windows, but Mother and I will go with you to juvenile court and help you plan how to pay the damages. We may have to borrow the money and you can repay it after you get a summer job."

Columnist's Own Contribution To Haiku — Japanese Verse-form

By DORIS CLARK

Here is my own contribution to that fascinating Japanese verse-form, Haiku:

Today a tiny seed;
Tomorrow a blade of green
Pointing heavenward.
Or how about this one:
Enveloping fog;
Then a thin crescent of light —
The Moon! And a star. —

Poetess' Doris

Try it yourself. You need a thought; then three lines about it, made up of five, then seven, then five syllables. Seventeen syllables altogether.

* * *

Dear Doris: In this area most of the celebrations for twenty-fifth wedding anniversaries are held in the home of the honored couple but relatives and close friends put them on. Usually the guests bring a gift or money which is presented to the honored couple after a buffet lunch.

We were planning something similar for my sister and brother-in-law's 25th but the bride of the family don't want that. They are renting a hall and hiring a orchestra for a dance. And get this: They plan to use the money given by the guests to pay the expenses, and whatever is left (if any) will be presented to the couple.

So ineffect the couple will be paying for their own celebration. We think this is very wrong. — Doubtful

Dear Doubtful: Well, quite a twist! I can't see using gift money to pay for the party. If the guests knew about it they would surely be annoyed.

If money is limited an orchestra and a hall are just out. Why not sit down with your brother-in-law's family and discuss what you can all afford? You don't want this happy occasion to be spoiled by family squabbling.

The spirit of this party is what matters — not the size.

* * *

Dear Doris: I have nursed both babies so now my bustline has gone down to almost less than A cup.

I know most husbands prefer women with larger bustlines and I'm sure mine would love me more if I could increase the bustline a few inches. From a Christian's point of view would you have any suggestions? — H. N.

Dear H. N.: You want the Christian point of view? Then love is based on something more than physical measurements. Of course you want to be curvaceous and sexually appealing—but let's not confuse the issue.

If you need to put weight on all over, some of it will land where you want it to. I'm sending you a "secret leaflet, Chart For Curves."

* * *

Talk it over with Doris. This Canadian social worker can shed new light on your problem.

Ann Landers

Given Second Chance Sitter May Change.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We have a sitter who loves the kids and they love her. The problem is she has trouble with her hands. (She lifts things.) I was aware that several items were missing but I couldn't believe the girl would steal from us. One day last week I caught her slipping my best handkerchiefs and some costume jewelry into her book bag. I told her that if she didn't return all the items she had stolen from me over the last year I would call the police. She broke down and cried, admitted everything and said she had given away or sold everything. She begged for another chance and said she wants to pay me back by babysitting.

ANN LANDERS

I am perfectly willing to let her do it but my husband says he could never trust her again and he doesn't want her in the house. Please tell me what to do, Ann. I really like the girl and believe she wants to straighten herself around. Your word is going to be final. — BETWEEN HUSBAND AND SITTER.

DEAR BETWEEN: Give the girl an opportunity to regain her self respect. This could be the turning point in her life. If you demonstrate your faith and confidence in her she may come through with flying colors. There's a great deal at stake here and I say it's worth the chance.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The groom wanted to get married in a purple sequin jacket. So what? At least he wants to get married, which is more than can be said for a lot of people these days.

What can a mother say to her teen-age daughter when she expresses admiration for actresses and movie stars and vocalists who get pregnant out of wedlock and announce to all the world they are "thrilled." When asked, "When is the wedding?" one eight-months pregnant singer looked surprised and replied, "What wedding?"

The general idea seems to be that marriage is too confining — that it spoils love. They say individuals should be free to come and go as they please. No strings, no commitments. Marriage is considered a "farce" — nothing more than a meaningless piece of paper. The Big Idea is to settle for the moment. Don't count on tomorrow. How does this grab you, Ann Landers? — MYSTIFIED.

DEAR MYS: People who don't count on tomorrow should be reminded that today was tomorrow yesterday.

It would be interesting to check out these "free spirits" ten years from now and see where they are, what they are doing and if they would advise their out-of-wedlock children to do as they did.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Regarding the woman who was deeply in debt because china plates made credit buying so easy: Granted, too many people fall for "buy now, pay later" slogans and over-spend, but have you ever tried to return merchandise you paid cash for? If the price tag is off and you've lost the sales slip, forget it. Even so they want "references." If you don't drive a car and have no driver's licence they think you're some kind of nut.

My advice is this: Have credit all over, but don't overdo it. — RICHMOND READER.

DEAR RICH: Your advice sounds simple but it won't work for people who have "charge-a-platitis." It's the same as telling a boozer, "Drink, but don't overdo it."

People who can't control their buying should pay cash. As for returning merchandise, some stores ar more co-operative than others.

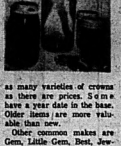
Preserving Jars, Bottles Become Collectors' Mania

Preserving jars and bottles have suddenly become a collectors' mania. A few years ago it was impossible to get rid of them at auction. Now they are sought after.

In 1968, Hamilton and Doug Bird of Orillia published the "North American Fruit Jar Index" an authoritative and definitive work listing every known jar and lid, Gerald Stevens, in two books on Canadian glass, provides a wealth of detail on preserving jars.



With this much published material it is not surprising jars are collected, particularly the rare ones. The easiest to identify is the Beaver jar which may run to as much as $35 for amber or dark brown glass or one in which the beaver faces left.

The large jar shown once had a metal clamp top with a centre set screw to hold the glass lid in place. At an early in style, probably before 1890 and is not marked. Size has nothing to do with value and this jar sells for less than $10.

The jar at the left was made by the Burlington Glass Company and the other two pieces are crown jars. A valuable collectible. The Hamilton Glass Works specialized in containers. The Burlington Glass Works made a large range of glass ware, of which preserve jars were only a small part.

The date 1876 does not seem to have any significance although it implies the jar was registered or patented in that year. There are a number of American firms which claim patents in the '70s and marked their ware as such. The screw top seems to be an invention of the late '80s or early '90s so it seems impossible this jar would have any connection with 1876.

Crown jars are among the commonest collectible items. They vary in value from 25 cents to $18. The most valuable type has a high narrow crown clearly embossed in the glass. There are almost as many varieties of crowns as there are prices. Some have a year date in the base. Older items are more valuable than new.

Other common makes are Gem, Little Gem, Best, Jewel, Mason, ERO, Corona, King and Lightning. Almost all have screw tops. Lids are a separate collectible item, now going for pennies but due to rise in price.

The Hamilton Glass Works went out of business in 1895. The works were revived in 1906 and burned down in 1912. Its products are said to be either amber or aquamarine in color and probably marked with the full name or HGC. They made colored glass electrical insulators as well, another collectible item.

The Burlington Glass Works also in Hamilton, closed down about 1909. They had a wide clor range, but their containers are mainly clear, aquamarine, green or amber.

Although you may have to pay a high price to collect a particular jar, you will only succeed in selling your own pieces at a high price if you find a wealthy collector.

HOME FOR HANDICAPPED

CHANGE! ANYONE?

Consider the remarkable transformation that takes place when a caterpillar (an upholstered worm) enhances itself in its home-made casket and is changed into a beautiful butterfly. Its hair is changed to scales — a million to the square inch; the many legs of the caterpillar become the six beautiful legs of the butterfly; the yellow becomes a beautiful red; the crawling instinct becomes a flying instinct.

Thus will God take the life of a sinner and transform it until it glows with the beauty of the Lord and is fragrant with the graces of Heaven.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Reaction to Recipe Questioned

By MARY MOORE

A newspaper clipping of Fried Chicken Kentuckian was sent to me with heavy ink drawing of skull and cross bones with "Dreadful Recipe" in bold face print, under it. Nothing else. Would this reader please send her name and address and describe in detail her complaint? That kitchen tasters thought it was excellent.

QUESTION: I used to have a recipe for date cookies — no oatmeal — and you put the cookies together with date filling before baking. They were lovely and I had no trouble handling them. But I've lost that recipe and all I remember about it was 2 eggs and sugar. Hope you can guess by that the kind of recipe I mean. I enjoy your columns and recipes very much. — Aleta C.

ANSWER: We had two requests for a repeat of Date Turnovers in one day so here it is again reprinted from March 1964.

DATE TURNOVERS
Dough:
½ cup soft shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 tbsps. thick cream
1 tsp. vanilla
2½ cups sifted flour
¼ tsp. soda
¼ tsp. salt

Mix shortening, sugar and eggs together thoroughly. Stir in cream and vanilla. Sift dry ingredients together and stir in. Chill dough. Roll very thin (1/16"). Cut 3" rounds, or squares. Place on lightly greased baking sheet. Place on each a rounded teaspoonful of Date Filling: 1 cup dates, finely cut up, ½ cup each water and sugar, 2 tbsps. lemon juice. Cook slowly, stirring constantly until thickened (about 5 min.). Cool. Fold over like a turnover, pressing moistened edges together with floured tines of a fork or tip of finger, sealing edges well. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 8-10 min. until delicately browned.

Stock Prices Decline Due to Monetary Crisis

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets wound up on the downside this week, as share prices slid lower, reflecting uncertainty about the international monetary crisis.

At the Toronto Stock Exchange, the index of industrial stocks dropped 1.12 points to 189.47 by Friday.

The Montreal and Canadian exchanges' composite index was down 1.76 to 177.48.

The Toronto market's index of gold stocks shot up more than four per cent on Wednesday as the gold price rose on European markets.

But gold producers' stocks eased on Thursday and Friday as the gold price slipped downward in London and Paris.

By the end of the week, the Toronto market's index of gold stocks was up 1.50 points, or less than one per cent, to 190.83.

There was speculation during the week that the governments of several European countries might refuse to accept United States dollars and demand payment in gold.

This, it was felt, might force the price of gold higher.

It is felt that the German mark is greatly undervalued in relation to the U.S. dollar.

On Friday there was speculation in Europe that West Germany would allow the mark to float, and that set free the mark would rise to a higher value in relation to the U.S. dollar.

The West German cabinet will meet Sunday to reach a final decision.

The uncertainty about the money crisis was felt on Wall Street. The Dow Jones average of key blue-chip issues slipped 4.78 points to 936.97. Trading on the New York Stock Exchange slowed to 86.48 million shares from 102.76 million last week.

Volume at Toronto dropped to 11.46 million shares from 12.80 million last week.

On index, base metals were down 71 to 97.09 and western oils 4.31 to 209.47.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, combined volume was 7.81 million shares, down from 8.30 million last week.

Losses outnumbered gains 320 to 164 with 112 issues unchanged.

Reay Winning to Date In Line-shuffling Duel

CHICAGO (CP) — Chicago's ability to neutralize Montreal's big shooters so far in the Stanley Cup final hasn't made coach Billy Reay of the Black Hawks think about a four-game sweep.

"Don't you kid yourself," Reay said Friday after watching most of his team run through a light workout at the stadium. "Those Montrealers aren't out of this yet."

The Hawks were to leave this afternoon by charter flight for Montreal where they meet the Canadiens Sunday at 2 p.m. EDT and Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Chicago took the first two games at home—2-1 in overtime Tuesday and 5-3 Thursday—in the best-of-seven National Hockey League final.

But the Hawks' ability to take an early jump in the series gave Reay no illusions of an early finish because now the advantage swings to the Canadiens with three of the next four games in Montreal.

"Oh, yes, our ability to match up against the Montreal lines has helped us immensely in these first two games," Reay replied when questioned about this aspect of the home games. "But remember, they've got that advantage now," he added, explaining that the home coach usually makes the final on-ice shuffle.

With no one from Montreal apparently assigned specifically to watch Chicago's Bobby Hull, Reay has been able to match his lines with no restrictions.

"I like to have (Stan) Mikita's line out against (Jean) Beliveau's, (Chico) Maki or (Lou) Angotti against (Jacques) Lemaire and (Danny) O'Shea against (Pete) Mahovlich," said Reay.

"I always tried to use Nesterenko (Eric Nesterenko) or Maki against Frank Mahovlich when he was with Toronto (Maple Leafs) and in Detroit (Red Wings). Now that he's with Montreal, we'll stick to that plan—when we can."

Montreal coach Al MacNeil tried a massive shuffling of his lines in the first period of Thursday's game in an effort to shake his big shooters from their shadows.

It worked temporarily, but Canadiens' let up after taking a 2-1 lead and "we let them take the play away from us midway through the second period."

"You need 60 minutes together in this game," said the rookie Montreal coach whose team returned home Friday, adding: "You've got to work extra hard against a team like this. You can't make mistakes."

Both teams are hurting, but the only doubtful player in Sunday's third game is Pat Stapleton who, along with Bill White, has provided the bulwark of Chicago's defence in post-season play.

Stapleton was taken to hospital after he and Montreal's Rejean Houle collided during the second period of Thursday's game.

As the two players fell in a heap in front of the Chicago goal, Houle's skate penetrated the Chicago defenceman's cheek. It required about 50 stitches and plastic surgery to close the wound.

Reay said the injury, while not serious, was in an irritating place—just below the right eye to the mouth.

"Pat hasn't worn a helmet before and this in itself could be detrimental," said Reay. Add to that the protective equipment that would have to be attached to the helmet and the fact that someone might push the protective equipment against the wound and you know why I won't say he'll definitely play.

Lafleur Leads Way

QUEBEC (CP) — Guy Lafleur and Quebec Remparts shrugged off an 8-3 drubbing by St. Catharines Black Hawks Monday, and scored a 3-1 Richardson Cup win over the Ontario Hockey Association representatives before 13,826 wildly enthusiastic Quebec Coliseum fans Friday night.

The Remparts, Quebec Junior A Hockey League titlists, lead the best-of-seven Eastern Canadian junior hockey final 2-1 with the fourth game of the series scheduled here tonight.

Lafleur opened the scoring at 2:35 of the first period, firing a low drive past Hawks' goalie George Hulme when left unmolested in front of the St. Catharines' net.

He added another, his 20th of playoff action, about six minutes later just as Hawks' defenceman Brian McIlratney was returning from a cross-checking penalty.

Despite the 2-0 deficit, the Hawks controlled the play by a wide margin in the first two periods but were stymied time and again by the sensational goaltending of Michel Deguise, brought up to the Remparts from Sorel Black Hawks for the series.

He held St. Catharines off the scoreboard for the first 49 minutes of play when the Hawks outshot Quebec by 16-8 and 20-8 margins.

Bob McMillan finally saved the Quebec goaltender's mystery when he scored at 3:36 for the Hawks.

In all, St. Catharines outshot Quebec 46-32 in the fight-filled game, marred by incidents involving St. Catharines players and referee Marcel Vaillancourt.

National Final Unlikely

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Friday he is "not optimistic" a national junior hockey final for the Memorial Cup will be played this year, despite a meeting next Wednesday in Toronto to discuss the issue.

Mr. Dawson is to chair the meeting at which representatives of the eastern and western champion teams are expected.

Quebec Junior League Won't Take Back Seat

MONTREAL (CP) — Bob Le Bel, president of the Quebec Junior A Hockey League, feels his circuit is as good as the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Mr. Le Bel said in an interview that a ruling passed two years ago is the key to his league's success.

The ruling forbids any team in the Quebec League from dealing players to the OHA. The penalty is immediate suspension.

"What we were trying to do with that rule is keep Quebec boys here in the province and give them a good brand of hockey so they wouldn't have to go to the OHA," Mr. Le Bel said.

The Quebec League champions Quebec Remparts hosted OHA champion St. Catharines Black Hawks in the third game of their best-of seven Eastern Canada Junior Hockey Final Friday night.

"We give them as much pocket money as the players get in the OHA and we pay their boarding," says Mr. Le Bel.

"And our league doesn't have to travel as much. Don't kid yourself, the OHA has nothing over us."

They might hold an edge in coaching. They have some big names that give the teams a pro touch. But we have a fair bunch of coaches and they've got the ability to make a player outstanding."

The Quebec League seems to have gained in popularity in the two seasons since its merger with the Metropolitan Junior Hockey League, and to have drawn the fans' interest away from their only OHA rivals in Quebec, the Montreal Junior Canadiens.

Several seasons ago, the Junior Canadiens regularly drew more than 300,000 fans each year. But this year the attendance at Baby Habs' games slipped to 155,000 fans for 31 home dates.

Quebec Remparts, on the other hand, drew 307,000 fans, and the 10-team Quebec League attracted more than a million fans.

The big drawing card in the Quebec League this year has been Remparts' starry left-winger Guy Lafleur. Lafleur scored 130 goals to win his second straight league scoring crown. He scored 103 goals in 1969-70.

Three Quickies Boost Cowboys Past Islanders

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Three second-period goals within 45 seconds Friday powered Red Deer, Alta., Rustlers to a 7-4 win over Charlottetown Islanders and gave them a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Centennial Cup hockey final series.

After trailing 3-1 early in the second period the Rustlers bounced back when Ken McLash scored, followed by Dave Andreichin and Doug Stumpf.

In the third, the Prairie squad continued to put pressure on the Islanders, Wynn Dempster scoring at the 36-second mark. Charlottetown roared back with a goal by Tom Steeves but Red Deer wrapped it up with Dennis Resch beating Hume at 13:55 and Lorne Bartel hitting an empty Charlottetown net at 19:29.

Mick Girard tied the score at 15:33.

Williams made it 2-1 for Charlottetown as he blasted one from the point that was deflected behind Red Deer goalie Dale Henwood.

In the second, the Islanders hit the scoreboard early as Angus Beck put one under Henwood's legs on a screen shot.

Red Deer's second goal came as the result of a faceoff deep in Islander's territory. As the puck came back to the point McLash let one go from the blue line. Van Diest got a piece of it in his glove but the puck dribbled behind him.

Andreichin tied it up 32 seconds later, taking the puck up from the corner, coming out to the front and beating Van Diest with a backhander. Thirteen seconds later the Rustlers went ahead for the first time when Stumpf scored.

In the third, Dempster made it 5-3 as he put in a rebound from a shot by Tom Lindskog.

The Islanders came back while McLash was serving an interference penalty at 4:13. The faceoff was deep in the Red Deer zone when Tom Steeves found in a high shot.

The Red Deer defence thwarted a determined bid by the Islanders late in the period, and with two minutes and 15 seconds remaining Hines was pulled from the net.

Abel Assumes Blues' Helm

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues announced Friday the selection of Sid Abel, former Detroit Red Wing coach and general manager, to coach the National Hockey League club for the 1971-72 season.

SID ABEL

The selection of Abel, 53, who resigned during the middle of the last NHL season at Detroit, came seven days after the resignation of Scotty Bowman as coach-general manager of the Blues.

Sidney Salomon Jr., Blues' board chairman, also announced the selection of Lynn Patrick, 58, as general manager. Patrick, the Blues, first coach, has been the team's vice-president.

"I can't tell you just how excited I am about joining St. Louis," said Abel. "I've always felt that St. Louis was the best franchise in hockey."

Abel left the Red Wings following 30 years in roles as player, coach and general manager in a dispute with Red Wings' coach Ned Harkness.

The Blues also announced the appointment of former team captain Al Arbour, 38, as assistant general manager.

Arbour, a defenceman, retired as a player to coach the Blues through the first part of the 1970-71 season but returned to the ice when Bowman stepped back in as coach in February.

Four-season leftwinger Bill McCreary was named by the Blues to coach its Denver Spurs franchise in the Western Hockey League, replacing Rudy Pilous who was fired Thursday.

The Blues also announced the rehiring of Tommy Woodcock as trainer and Frank Mario as director of player personnel. Both had been rumored to be on the way out at the time of Bowman's departure a week earlier.

Salomon said the hiring of Patrick and Abel was designed to re-establish the Blues' dominance in the NHL's West Division.

Munro Plans on Annual Full-scale Canadian Sports Meet

HAMILTON (CP) — Plans for a major multiple-sports event each year in Canada were announced Friday by Health Minister John Munro.

The national competitions, beginning with the second Canada Summer Games in Burnaby-New Westminster, B.C., in 1973, were outlined by the minister at a news conference in his home riding.

The minister also announced that sports and recreation will be divided into separate directorates within his department and new regional sports offices, similar to one in operation in Winnipeg, will be set up in Vancouver and Montreal.

Munro, in announcing the yearly competitions, said his department had discussed with the sports governing bodies the possibility of organizing an event in the years between the Canada Games, "perhaps to be called the Canada Olympic Trials."

He said it was suggested that the trials be started in 1972 but the various sporting bodies found this was not feasible.

"We are all confident that this new type of national competition can be organized and operational by 1974," the minister said in a 36-page submission.

He then gave a schedule of sporting events up to 1981:

1973—Canada Summer Games at Burnaby-New Westminster.

1974—Canada Olympic Trials in Ontario.

1975—Canada Winter Games in Alberta.

1976—Olympic Games in Montreal.

1977—Canada Summer Games in the Atlantic region.

1978—Canada Olympic Trials in Manitoba.

1979—Canada Winter Games in Quebec.

1980—Canada Olympic Trials in British Columbia.

1981—Canada Summer Games in Ontario.

"Therefore we shall have a major Canadian multiple-sport event taking place each year, alternating between Canada Games and Canada Olympic Trials," the minister said.

Munro described the Canada Games as "developmental in concept" and "aimed primarily at a certain class of athlete."

"But we feel that our national athletes should have an opportunity of further domestic stimulus." The Olympic Trials would be "oriented toward excellence," with national championships held "under one umbrella at one time."

Referring to the division of sports and recreation in his department, the minister said that as a result of various recommendations from sports bodies in Canada "we can best reconcile the concerns that exist within the sport movement at this country by maintaining the directorate of sport within the department of national health and welfare."

He said the directorate "will continue to be concerned with problems of sport and will strengthen the sport governing bodies and the multiple-sports organizations like the Canadian Amateur Sport Federation and the Canadian Olympic Association."

He said it will be his intention to develop two separate directorates in his department—one known as the Sport Canada Directorate and the other the Canada Recreation Development Directorate.

Both directorates will be financed out of the present $6.2 million budget but that the previously-announced $1 m illion scholarship program would not come out of this.

Bombers Lose Catcher

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ken Nielsen, 29-year-old pass-catching ace of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, has officially announced his retirement. He told a news conference Thursday that a warning by doctors that he could suffer an injury if he resumed playing had a bearing on his decision.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference announced the signing Friday of two new import quarterbacks.

Danny Talbot, six-foot and 185 pounds from the University of North Carolina, and Bob Stewart, six-foot-two and 205 pounds from the University of Northern Arizona, bring the number of newcomers signed by Winnipeg this season to 20.

Talbot played last season in the Continental League and had a five-day tryout with Winnipeg. Stewart, who led Northern Arizona to an undefeated regular season in 1969, was drafted by Denver Broncos last year.

Coody Whittles Par

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Charles Coody rode a hot putting touch and a two-shot lead into the third round today of the $125,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Coody whittled four strokes from par Friday by shooting a 66 on the treacherous 7,031-yard Preston Trail course to sweep into the lead by two shots with a five-under-par 135.

On the back nine he rushed past first-round leader Jerry McGee and veteran Bob Stone, who wound up tied with three others at 137.

The quintet also included Ed Sneed, Johnson and Chi Chi Rodriguez. Lee Trevino, aiding a 70 to his opening 68, was a shot back at 138.

Sneed and Stone shot 69s, Johnson had a 67 and Rodriguez a 68 in claiming second. Jack contention for the $25,000 first prize. Nicklaus was tied with seven others at even par 140 and Palmer was at 141, each shooting 71s.

George Knudson of Toronto was the only Canadian to make the cut of 146 for the final two rounds today and Sunday. He shot a 72 for a total of 145.

Ben Arn of Toronto shot a 72 for 149 and Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg each wound up with 151. Vollmer had rounds of 73-78 and Homenuik shot 77-74.

Sports on All Fronts

TORONTO (CP) — With the Queen's Plate six weeks away, a record 81 horses still are eligible to run in the 1½-mile consest for three-year-old thoroughbreds June 19.

"We have received 81 payments," racing secretary Rod McArthur said Friday in announcing final-May nominations payments of $100 towards the race.

"This is a record. Last year we had the greatest number of May payments—77. It looks like we'll have a record purse purse and winner's share this year."

Owners eager to have their horses run in the race for horses foaled in Canada had to pay a $25 nomination fe Dec. 15, 1969, a $50 fee Feb. 15, 1971 and another eligibility fee of $100 May 1, 1971, plus an additional entry fee of $1,000 June 17, two days before the race at Woodbine track.

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Neal Mendelsohn, president of the Academy of Equine Practitioners, announced Friday that the Ontario Racing Commission had reversed a ruling which would have barred veterinarians who own or train standardbred or thoroughbred horses from practising their profession within the grounds of a racetrack.

The revoked directive issued on April 7 dealt with the section of the ORC involving illegal or corrupt practices. It stated that a "veterinarian who owns or trains horses cannot be in possession of a hypodermic syringe, needle, or any other device that could be used for the injection or infusion into a horse of any substances designed to change the form-while he is on the grounds."

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (Reuter) — A young and eager national diving team from Canada took its first look Friday at Karlsruhe's Tullabad pool where it will challenge a West German squad this weekend.

Beverly Boys, 19, of Pickering, Ont., said: "We have been waiting the Germans and they are very good. It's going to be tough but we are pretty confident."

Miss Boys, Canadian champion from all three boards, said the Karlsruhe tower is only nine metres high compared with the standard 10 metres the team is used to, but "this shouldn't make any serious differences."

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Freddie Mwhila and Ken Bracewell scored a goal apiece Friday night as Atlanta Chiefs scored their second victory and third shutout of the year in a 2-0 triumph over Toronto Metros in North American Soccer League competition.

Expos Finally Get Cubs' Number

Morton won his first game ever against the Cubs and the Expos scored their first win over Chicago right-hander Bill Hands.

"Had we never beaten Hands? asked Morton after the game. "It's a nice streak to stop."

Hands had a 6-6 lifetime record against the Expos going into Friday's game.

"He's also nice to know I can beat the Cubs. I like pitching against them, but I don't like losing against them."

Morton had lost five lifetime decisions against Chicago—one in 1969, three last season when he won the National League rookie-of-the-year award and one earlier this season.

The Cubs grabbed a 1-0 lead in the top of the fourth inning when Joe Pepitone slugged his third home run of the season, smacking a belt-high Morton fastball off the right field scoreboard.

It appeared for a time that the run was going to stand up as Hands was successfully taming the Montrealers.

But first baseman Ron Fairly snapped the Expos out of the doldrums in the bottom of the seventh with his first home run of the season.

Left fielder Ron Swoboda followed with a double to the right field corner and later scored on a single up the middle by Coco Laboy.

The Expos added another run in the bottom of the eighth on a two-base single by Fairly.

Chicago had threatened in the top of the inning with runners on second and third with one out.

But Morton, now 3-4 in 1971, used an effective sinker to get Ron Santo and John Callison to pop up to the infield to end the threat.

"We are just not getting the big hits," said Cubs' manager Leo Durocher, whose team had just dropped its 18th game in 27 starts.

They wind up the three-game series Sunday afternoon with Bill Stoneman (3-1) scheduled to pitch for Montreal against Milt Pappas (3-3) of the Cubs.

Seaver Two Steps Ahead of Gibson

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tom Seaver is two jumps ahead of Bob Gibson, by everyone's count except his own.

"I don't pitch against Bob Gibson," Seaver said Friday night after hurling New York Mets to a 3-1 comeback victory over St. Louis Cardinals and Gibson. "I pitch against the Cardinals."

It was the second duel in 12 days between the two Cy Young Award winners. Seaver, who took the National League pitching prize two years ago, has won them both.

Seaver fired a six-hitter and struck out nine Cardinals.

The Mets broke a 1-1 tie in the eighth on doubles by Ed Kranepool and Jerry Grote plus an error by second baseman Ted Sizemore, who let Seaver's grounder go through him.

Gibson, who has lost three of six decisions, led 1-0 until the seventh, when Bud Harrelson tripled and raced home on a wild pitch.

Seaver gave up a first inning run and then breezed along until the ninth, when he reached back to fan Leron Lee and Luis Melendez for the final two outs, stranding runners on first and third.

Eregosi Wouldn't Leave Until Homer Wish Came True

California's Jim Fregosi left Friday night's game after belting a fifth-inning home run off Cleveland's Sam McDowell and his replacement, Syd O'Brien, but a two-run shot in the 11th inning to give the Angels a 4-2 triumph over the Indians.

California's trainer wanted Fregosi, who has been bothered by a sore right foot, to leave the game after the shortstop struck out in the second inning.

"No," he said. "I want to stay in long enough to hit a homer off McDowell."

Elsewhere in the American League, Mickey Lolich scored on a four-base error in the seventh inning as Detroit Tigers defeated Kansas City Royals 3-1 behind his 13-strikeout pitching.

Washington Senators rallied for four runs with two out in the ninth inning and edged Minnesota Twins 6-5, Boston Red Sox nipped Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 and New York Yankees shaded Chicago White Sox 4-3. Oakland and Baltimore were rained out.

The Chicago City's Mike Hedlund, the Tigers got their three runs in the seventh. Eddie Brinkman doubled and Lolich laid down a bunt. Hedlund, trying for a play at third, heaved the ball into left field and it sailed past outfielder Carl Taylor, who was coming in to back up the play.

Both runners scored and McAuliffe followed with his third home run of the season.

The most successful modern golfers all realize that the upper body coils more than the lower body on the backswing. If this upper-body coil is not achieved, you will not be able to build up sufficient tension for a powerful swing at the ball. If the lower body, especially the hips, turns too much going back, you'll have a difficult time in controlling your swing.

One way to make your-self coil is to practice so that your back faces the target at the top of the backswing. Keep your left arm reasonably straight and your left heel relatively close to the ground. You'll feel a certain tautness all along you left side if you swing in this manner.

Baseball's Beanball Killed Only Once in Major League History

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Frank Lane, director of operations for Milwaukee Brewers, was distraught and angry.

The 1971 baseball season had barely begun and one of his players lay in hospital under observation after being hit on the left temple by a pitched ball.

"It's pretty bad when a guy has to stake his life when he goes up to hit," Lane said.

He was giving voice to a fear which baseball has lived with ever since the game was invented—that a batter can get killed up there at the plate.

It only happened once, just over 50 years ago, on a day when the Yankees took on the Cleveland Indians at the Polo Grounds in New York.

The year 1920 was one of the most eventful in baseball history.

The Indians won their first pennant, Cleveland second-baseman Bill Wambsganss executed the only unassisted triple play in World Series action, and the Black Sox scandal broke.

And shortstop Ray Chapman of the Cleveland Indians was killed by a pitch, thrown high and inside by Carl Mays of the Yankees.

If Chapman had obeyed his first impulse, he wouldn't have been in the Polo Grounds that day, betting No. 1 in the Cleveland order.

The previous year, his ninth with the club, was to have been his last in baseball. Newly married, he didn't relish the thought of leaving his bride on extended road trips. He had been approached with a good business proposition as well.

But the Cleveland front office urged him to play another more year; work out his problems and see what happened.

Chapman was a switch-hitter. He dug in close to the plate and crouched forward, his head inside the strike zone. From this stance he had built a reputation as one of the best bunters of the time.

Mays had developed a pitch he called his "submarine ball," thrown with a wicked underhand motion that was almost sidearm.

And Mays was a hard-rock who had been known to dust off even such trigger tempers as Ty Cobb.

"Ray Chapman always liked to try to push the ball down the first-base line," Mays—who died this spring at the age of 78—recalled years later. "He was so fast, he got many hits this way. I was determined to pitch him high and inside.

"This strategy, he recalled, had worked many times before on other batters and made many of them pop up.

"I put a strike and a ball on Ray. I saw him shift his feet and I knew he was preparing to push the ball. I shot the next one high and inside.

"Ray tried to get the jump on the ball. He leaned far into the plate. I knew he was definitely out into the strike zone. And the next think I heard was a resounding crack. It was an awful sound but I didn't know he had been hit.

"I thought the ball had struck the bat. It was loud and clear and then he started to fall. The ball bounced a few feet out toward the box and I started for it.

"Muddy Ruel, my catcher, pounced on it and threw Chapman out at first. Then he turned around and saw Chapman lying on the ground across the plate."

Ruel and Mays started toward the fallen batter, but manager Tris Speaker, other Indians and a couple of others got to him first and carried him into the clubhouse.

The game went on and Harry Lape ran for Chapman and quickly scored what proved to be the winning run. Cleveland won it 4-3.

Inside the clubhouse, Chapman seemed to come around and was taken to hospital. He died there at 5 a.m. the next day.

He was 29 years old.

Years later, after a distinguished pitching career, Mays—who was exonerated in the death of Chapman—talked about the effect the incident had on him.

"I would be lying if I said I never think about it. I try not to, but every once in a while when I read of another kid getting beaned it all comes surging back."

...How about Lane's ballplayer? Catcher Phil Roof will be okay. The ball caught him on the ear flap of his batting helmet. Protective devices which came along too late for Ray Chapman.

Veteran Commercial Softball League standout Bob Ethier and former Industrial League ace Larry Marshall are expected to shoulder the pitching load for the new Howard and Robert Printing entry. The Printers will feature a number of veteran softball performers in a bid to wrest the championship away from the four other league entries. The regular season is slated to start May 24th

Cinema Verite Has Its Drawbacks

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

TORONTO (CP) — They're shooting a movie, called Face-Off, in Toronto and life may never be the same.

"My name is Ruth Batey," said the voice on the telephone.

"You've heard about the movie we're doing—it's all about a hockey player. And we're using the names of hockey players, we thought, in the press-conference scene, it would be nice to use real sports writers."

"Who will be in it, Miss Batey?"

"Well, Dick said he would try to be there—Dick Beddoes."

"What will he be wearing?"

"Why, does it matter?"

"Indeed it does. He's our leader in things sartorial. He has a funny white hat with a band of pheasant feathers. . . ."

"My God"

". . . And an opera cape of midnight blue with a crimson lining. . ."

"This isn't a costume epic."

"To Dick, Miss Batey, life is a costume epic. With a cast of thousands."

"Speaking of thousands, we'll be needing 50,000 extras when we shoot the hockey scenes."

"Fifty thousand? The fire marshal sulks when you try to press more than 16,000 into Maple Leaf Gardens."

"Oh. Maybe it's 15,000. I'll have to check."

"Will Bob Pennington be there?"

"Why? What does he wear?"

"A very large pipe. It's his trade mark. It has been rated X by Pollution Probe."

"I don't know—but since we've covered The Globe and Mail Beddoes and the Telegram Pennington, who would you suggest from The Star?"

"Jim Crerar, undoubtedly."

"Why him? What's his trade mark?"

"Absolute sincerity. He's so sincere he wears that horn-rimmed contact lenses."

"I'll see whether he's available. Can you be on the set by 9 p.m. Monday?"

"Does that give us enough time for the co-ordinates?"

"You need to rehearse a press conference?"

"Ruhey, Batey, I've got to feel this part. I mean, what's my motivation?"

"How about the booze—it's free."

"Nine o'clock, I think you said. Miss Batey?"

Sport Briefs

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Washington Senators traded pitcher Darold Knowles and first baseman Mike Epstein to Oakland Athletics Friday night for three players, including first baseman Don Mincher.

The trade was announced in Minneapolis after the Senators defeated the Twins 6-5 in a game saved by Knowles.

Senators owner Bob Short said the trade was completed only after the game with the Twins.

Epstein, who is batting .247 this year, has been the subject of trade rumors for two or three years. He has struck out 31 times in 85 times at bat this season.

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association and the rival American Basketball Association agreed Friday to seek congressional approval for a merger. Commissioner Walter Kennedy of the NBA made the announcement following almost two days of meetings by the owners of each league with their merger committees in separate midtown hotels.

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Two veteran Canadian boxers have bn named to top positions on the Canadian amateur boxing team.

Harold Mann of Prince George will coach the team, which competes at the Pan-Am Games in Cali, Colombia, this summer.

Jerry Shears of Montreal has been named team manager.

Mann, 32, is a former amateur boxer who won the gold medal as a light-middleweight in the 1962 British Empire Games.

Shears, 45, the founder and president of the Canadian Amateur Boxing Association, was active in amateur boxing during the Second World War.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Sandra Haynie, fresh from her Dallas Civitan victory last Sunday, took a narrow lead in the $20,000 Alamo ladies open golf tournament Friday with a four-under 68.

On her heels was Peggy Wilson, a Mississippian who has won only one tournament in nine years on the LPGA tour.

Miss Wilson fired a 70.

Tied at 72 were Sue Roberts, Gloria Ehret, Pam Barnet, Chako Higuchi and Kathy Ahern.

Penny Zavichas was the only player in a field of 62 pros and four amateurs to equal par 72 on the 6,451-yard Olmos Basin Golf course.

Sandra Post Elliott, formerly of Oakville, Ont., scored 75 on first-round scores of 38 and 37.

OSHAWA (CP) — Jo Jo Carrier of Quebec City YWCA dominated Friday's events in the Canadian synchronized swimming senior championships being held here this weekend.

In the figure events she won both the open and closed figures, with a total of 70.300 points. She was followed by Quebec City team-mates Nado Ramsey, second with 67.220 points, and Sylvie Fortier, third with 62.750 points.

Newcomers Look Familiar

While the Howard and Robert Printing entry may be one of the new kids on the Commercial Softball League Block, there'll be a lot of familiar faces when the team takes to the field for its initial season.

The battery of Bob "Shuf" Ethier and Larry Potter will be on hand from last year's fourth - place City Hotelmen. Ethier, one of the top local hurlers for a number of years is reported to be in good early season form which could spell trouble for a number of opposing batsmen.

The muscular lefthander was among the leaders in innings pitched, strikeouts and earned run average last season while toiling for the now defunct Hotelmen.

First year coach Doug Murray feels that, "We've got pretty good balance in both the infield and the outfield and we should do all right. Our pitching might be a little thin, but then most of the other clubs are having the same problem."

Murray picks Rollins Construction as a team to beat, but feels that any of the league entries are capable of performance on any given night.

Vying for infield positions are such well known softball figures as Ken Genereaux, a shortstop with City last year Bill Barberstock, one of the area's top softball and baseball long ball hitters and Bob Wannamaker who performed with the Corby's entry in the league last season.

Among the outfield candidates are former Belleville and district softball league performer Paul Zakos, who will be attempting a comeback after remaining out of action for the past four years. Put Kellar another City Hotel alumnus and possible Rick Locke, who saw picket duty with Stinson Construction in 1970.

Ethier is expected to handle the bulk of the mound duties with possible late inning relief coming from Larry Marshall, one of the top Industrial League pitchers with Mead Johnson last season.

The team is still uncertain of their opposition when the league schedule gets under way May 24th. The first game champion Richard Ellis Advertisers against the Point Anne Commentmen.

The ugly one still looks the best.

Look at it this way.
Nobody has what Volkswagen has:
A 25 year headstart.
All this time we've been refining it. Improving it. Then refining our refinements and improving our improvements.
Nobody has the horde of inspectors. The 16,000 individual inspections. Or the grinding tests.
Nobody has our kind of paint job: all 35 pounds of it.
Nobody builds a car the way we do: airtight.
Nobody builds in what we do. An extra heater.

A solid sheet of steel underneath. A rear seat that folds down.
Nobody has the service. The electronic diagnosis system. The 2 year 24,000 mile warranty.
When the new small cars come out, everyone thought they were going to make the bug look bad.
But they forgot that it takes time to turn out a car that won't turn out to be a disappointment.
So instead, the new small cars are actually accomplishing something quite remarkable.
They're making the bug look beautiful.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Do you recall the letter reprinted here recently written by Mrs. W., in which she said her husband had become too ashamed to go out with her in public because she is so short? He grew three inches after marriage and is now 6 feet, while she is only 5 feet tall. As a result, she has become highly nervous and depressed. Here is one reader-reaction:

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I know one couple where the husband is 6 feet 2, and his wife is only 4 feet 8. They have two sons. One is 6 feet 4 and the other about 5 feet 3. They are very happy.

* * *

My own daughter and her husband were each 5 feet 7 when they married. Since then my daughter has gained about three inches. Yet, although she is taller than he, they go everywhere. They have three children and they all live with each other.

* * *

If Mrs. W.'s marriage breaks up only because of this height difference, I can only say she's very selfish and she is better off without him. — Mrs. G.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My most wonderful husband is 5 feet tall. When we married he weighed 168 pounds. Now he weighs 282 pounds. I am 4 feet 10 and weigh 95 pounds. He reaches the high cupboards for me and most often I use the low cupboards. We have two daughters and have had 27 wonderful, hard-working years together. When I told him about Mrs. W.'s husband being ashamed of her, he said "How stupid can a fellow get!"

My husband has his master's degree and is working for his doctorate. Many times he has come to me or our daughters and asked for advice. He doesn't think he is that smart. We consider him to be 100 feet tall because he is a kind, humble husband and father. — Mrs. P.

For Mrs. O.: There is hope that youngsters who are potential glue sniffers and those who already have the habit will not find it so easy to obtain glue they can sniff. They may not realize it is a harmful habit that may affect liver, brain and general well-being. Large manufacturers of glue products are now adding synthetic oil of mustard. This produces excessive tears and burning, which will discourage glue-sniffing. Many parents are unaware their children have this habit.

Here is another letter sent me for Mrs. O.:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My heart goes out to Mrs. O. My 13-year-old son was a glue sniffer, too. He was doing it practically every day and was beginning to have hallucinations. He was also getting very irritable and was even beginning to steal while under the influence of glue.

He was also very violent (he would sneak out of bed) at all hours of the night, and was picked up by police a few times. I was so frantic I didn't know what to do. I really expected him to be picked up off the street dead.

I took him to a doctor who is doing much research on glue sniffing. Although my son already has anemia and a liver enlargement, he is now much better. He hasn't touched glue since. I hope mothers with this problem will do as I did. — Mrs. C.

* * *

For Mr. E.: If you get weak, tremble, and have hunger spells a few hours after eating, it's possible you may have hypoglycemia. If your doctor refuses to send you for blood sugar readings, perhaps another doctor will consent. Why not ask him once more?

Height of Spouse Not Important

Intervention In Economy Under Attack

SASKATOON (CP) — Canadians are becoming "fed up" with the extent of direct government intervention into the economic system, Robert Stanfield told a meeting here Friday night.

"It does not take a government with a hand on every lever to manage the economy effectively. On the contrary, it is a government that knows its own limitations and that has some respect for the freedom and the initiative of people outside government that is likely to be the most effective in moving the economy along."

Mr. Stanfield said that unfortunately for the people of Canada adoption of such attitude requires "a healthy dose of humility," which is foreign to the Liberal government.

The Trudeau government's real hallmark, he said, is that it believes the most manly thing to do is to confront the people, "to insult and denounce other Canadians."

"We that isn't good enough. The real leader in politics is the man who stands up to issues without trying to shout people down. And the most effective government is the one that works with people and strives to reconcile effects."

Drug Panic Deplored

TORONTO (CP) — There is too much panic about drugs, a Toronto educationist told the Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations convention Friday.

"It's time we spelled out the drug scene—the kinds of drugs and we are to consider drug education," said R. C. Simmons, special-programs consultant for North York board of education.

"It's time to say that most people aren't going to be hurt by drugs—even potentially."

Mr. Simmons said cliches used by the youth drug cult and by panic-stricken parents are of no help in a drug-education program.

Drugs are a part of the culture and to set up a drug-education program requires sound knowledge, great understanding and removal of prejudice.

Holdup Weapons Stolen

MONTREAL (CP) Weapons used by bandits in an abortive bank holdup Monday which left two persons dead were stolen last October from a Valcartier Industries Ltd., munitions plant, police said Friday.

A sub-machine gun and a magazine of ammunition were found beside the body of Raymond Lynch, 25, one of two bandits who opened fire on Brinks guards as they entered the Bell Canada building en route to a Bank of Montreal branch.

Three semi-automatic pistols were seized Thursday from an abandoned car believed to be the get-away vehicle used in the attempted robbery.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For May 9

Your birthday today: Long awaited changes develop, with better results than anticipated. This is a generally fortunate year with additions to permanent resources indicated. Todays natives should re-engender additional talents in their maturity and usually rise far above their original economic level.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Make full use of this Sunday for attending to long-standing issues, especially where older people, relatives are involved.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): If you take things as they are, with neither optimistic build-up nor unfounded pessimism, essentials can be worked out. It is enough to achieve small turns — in time the future of direction will make all the difference.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Home and neighborhood are worth standing by. Distraction, competition are probable—take it in stride.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Open the day with a clear request for whatever you think you want, with reasons always ready in case anybody wants to know them.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Giving others the right to be different takes both courage and compassion, and always deserves the effort.

VIRGO (Aug. 22—Sept. 22): There is much to share, both materially and spiritually. Community planning is subject to review and revision. Put in your opinion when you can be heard.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Unrest rises. Inner psychic changes break forth into tangible forms. Some people will require a complete escape from modes of daily living; others can do nothing but cling to old routines.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Neighborhood activities fill a productive Sunday. Do your share. Winding up the day with social or romantic pursuits is indicated as healthy and normal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22 — Dec. 21): Whatever provocation you offer is probably taken up and made into more serious involvements than you intend. Prepare for a fight or a frolic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): In the rush of the last few days you may have missed fresh information — use the chance today offers to bring yourself up to date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): What you do and say marks, the future, so a forth right attitude is constructive; love intent is quite in order. Prospects in general are favorable.

PISCES, (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Important as affairs of others may be, keep your own finances completely separate and untouched in this Sunday's tendency toward tempting promises and assessments.

For May 10

Your birthday today: This is a year of definition — direct ways of expressing yourself and meeting limitations. Obstacles are numerous but serve to provoke effective personal drive. Reactions to your environment are more important than the details of the situation. Today's natives show high talents for dancing or recreation involving dexterity and rhythm. Occasionally they lead a social or political movement.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Pause before you speak and avoid finding fault. The week begins with a variety of abrupt jolting moves. Develop a happy, philosophic approach.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): No matter what the news, you receive it in sharp, dramatic impressions. Refuse to react. More factors must be considered than appear on the surface.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Today's challenge is to find a way to go along with change rather than use up energy trying to block it. Adequately defined personal goals create circumstances which bring welcome support.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Bring older people into your plans, seek help from long established resources, group funds, family reserves, if you see a clear need or effective way to use them. Persistence serves you well.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Put drastic financial actions off to a later date. New information or intuition arrives late and put a different light on your whole situation.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 — Sept. 22): Resist the temptation to plunge into new activities before you finish what you've started. Mental details have a tendency to be not so final, and some even come undone overnight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): For once, you are tempted to move without getting general agreement as you see a race about to do — and it won't work overnight to digest the idea and try again tomorrow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): What looks like a productive move at the moment becomes a restriction later, so be careful. Persuading people is not the only way is not a complete solution, either.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Letting well enough alone is a rare and delicate art. Contain your mental impatience; you'll see the whole pattern later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Selection is your key to achievement. Helpful information is to be sorted out and put to immediate use; discount frills and superficial factors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Expect to find your theories challenged and to learn something from the comments. Whatever happens, keep your sense of humor on the surface.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): If you have all the preparations and materials in hand, something you've planned and perhaps abandoned suddenly comes within reach. Take full advantage of the opportunity.

Princess Anne Is Ill

VANCOUVER (CP) — With Princess Anne under the weather with a stomach upset expected to keep her yacht-bound for the weekend, the Queen and Prince Philip headed today into British Columbia's heartland.

One of their stops is to be williams Lake in the wild-and woolly Cariboo country where there will be a command-performance rodeo.

Princess Anne is to separate from her parents, Friday for separate ceremonies, but then the stomach problem arose. All her engagements had to be cancelled.

At a briefing for royal tour correspondents Friday evening the Queen, Philip and Anne flew in from London Monday they will be with them for 10 days —word was given that the 20-year-old princess was "feeling rather better."

The source was William Heseltine, the Queen's press secretary.

But Mr. Heseltine added that it was doubtful Anne would be able to accompany the Queen and Philip today; most likely she would continue to rest aboard the royal yacht Britannia, the Royal Family's floating home which is berthed nearby.

Lost Boys Found

LA RONGE, Sask. (CP) — Three young boys, lost in dense bush for two days, were found Friday night as they slept near Bigstone Lake, about two miles from home.

Air of Discontent Seeps Through Parliament

OTTAWA (CP) — Many reasons including a long, dull winter probably are behind an unmistakable air of discontent seeping through Parliament these days. Most MPs are looking forward to the scheduled summer recess.

A dozen members will provide a dozen different reasons but almost will agree that the atmosphere isn't as comfortable as it was a year ago. Veterans say this always happens as Parliament plods through the lengthy legislative process.

Some point to specific causes as well. There has clearly been a growing restlessness on the Liberal backbenches, particularly among those members who feel their services are not being fully utilized. With such a hefty majority, Prime Minister Trudeau is unable to place challenging opportunities on every member's desk.

One Liberal MP said the restlessness was accentuated with the resignation of Communications Minister Eric Kierans.

"Whenever someone like that quits over a policy disagreement, it is natural for everyone else to sit and contemplate for a while."

And before the resignation there had been a hot-and-heavy argument in the Liberal caucus over the proposed pay increases for MPs. It was about the toughest session we've had," said one newsman.

The discontent, and the annoyance, that arises over the pay increases has nothing to do with party lines. Invariably an MP will be more annoyed with the stand taken by an in-party colleague than he will with someone on opposing benches.

Apart from the salary issue, there are many other issues cited when it comes to describing discontent. Many Liberals are angry at the Conservatives for holding up various farm legislation, and some Conservatives say they are annoyed because Robert Stanfield, their leader, has not shown more force in opposing the bills.

The Conservatives have also had to contend with a recent resignation—the departure of Roch LaSalle who now sits as an independent, reduced the party's Quebec representation to three.

On top of everything else, most MPs say their mail flow this past winter has been the heaviest in history. Most of the letters sought help in seeking employment. "And there is so darned little we can do," said one.

"What we all need is a break from Parliament. We've seen too much of each other."

Lang Wants to Save Family Farms

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition charges that the government is seeking to sink the family farm drew a blunt rejoinder Friday from Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board.

Charging the opposition with cheap politics, Mr. Lang said that accusations in debates this week over farm legislation are calculated to "increase the despair and hopelessness in any group of farmers who know what their difficulties are well enough."

Government policy, he said, is to assist those farmers who choose to stay on the land to achieve the highest possible returns while at the same time to offer a decent alternative to those who may choose to leave.

"I want to state, as a fundamental matter of our philosophy, that we do not in any way have the view that anyone should be made to move off a farm if he chooses to live on it."

Ontario Will Back Manitoba In Fight to Curb Farm Imports

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Allan Lawrence told the legislature Friday the Ontario government will support the Manitoba government in a Supreme Court test case over the right of provincial governments to control agricultural imports.

Mr. Lawrence said lawyer John Hylton will represent Ontario when the case is heard by the Supreme Court.

Manitoba legislation permitting that province to control agricultural imports was challenged on the basis that it is beyond the legislature's power. Ontario has similar legislation.

In other business Friday:

—Rene Brunelle, minister of lands and forests said more than 10,000 young people had applied for jobs in the government's summer employment program and only 5,000 positions were available.

—Mac Makarchuk (NDP—Brantford) tried unsuccessfully to get Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough to relax his five-per-cent wage increase ceiling for civil servants.

—Mr. Lawrence said there was a serious backlog of drug cases in Metropolitan Toronto courts and added later that one of the causes was a lack of federal prosecutors.

—In the face of opposition pressure Mr. Brunelle said he would be prepared to release a report on the future of Algonquin Park subject to the approval of his cabinet colleagues.

—George Kerr, minister of energy and resources, said the government had trouble prosecuting polluters because potential Crown witnesses are company employees and fear losing their jobs.

—Opposition leader Robert Nixon questioned Mr. Lawrence about the "unusual procedure" of a raid on a Toronto dentist's office Wednesday. But Mr. Lawrence denied that it was a raid and said it was the execution of a search warrant issued by a justice of the peace, not his department.

—Mr. Lawrence also told the house that the government was still trying to decide whether to sue for cost of extra police used at a rock festival last summer at Mulmur township in Dufferin County.

Quebec Bill Delayed

QUEBEC (CP) — Creditiste objections delayed passage Friday of government legislation to control marketing of agricultural products.

Debate in second reading of bill 18 is expected to continue Tuesday.

Creditiste members, representing mainly rural ridings, said the government had little regard for the liberty of small farmers in wanting them to submit to an intensive permit authority over their produce.

On Thursday, the national assembly passed a companion bill authorizing the Quebec agricultural marketing board to seize and confiscate eggs imported illegally into the province and placed on the market.

Agriculture Minister Normand Toupin said the two laws were introduced in retaliation for Ontario legislation against broiler chicken imports into Ontario.

British Experts Say Euromart Weaker

Crisis Divides Common Mart

LONDON (CP) — The great wave of European currency changes — and the lack of unified action on the revisions — raises questions in Britain whether the Common Maarket has been permanently weakened.

A number of commentators take the view that the weekend confusion and chaos strengthened Britain's monetary position, thereby aiding Prime Minister Heath as he prepares to meet with French President Georges Pompidou on the Common Market issue next week.

One British authority estimates that it will take a week or 10 days before the results of the European currency changes can be determined. But he does not anticipate that the European decisions will encourage the speculators' flood of American dollars to turn to London.

The more likely switch will be to Japanese yen but since the Japanese have strong exchange controls, the speculators may not have as much power to force an upward movement on the Japanese exchange rate as they had on the West German deutschmark.

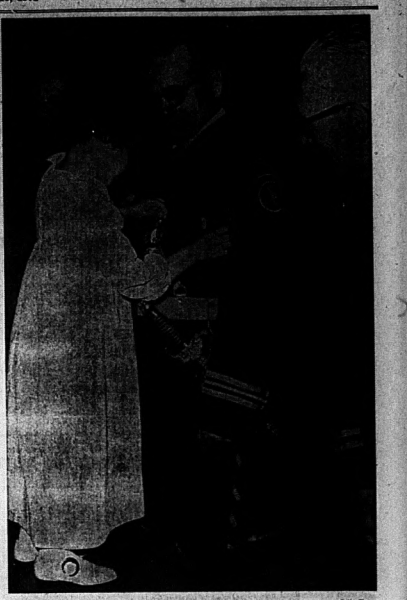
Even if the pressure does build up in London, the Bank of England has so many tools at its command to reduce the pressure that gambling on a higher sterling exchange rate is unlikely to pay off. One tool is to lower the central bank interest rate, now at six per cent.

The more fascinating aspect of the European rate changes—the most widespread since the Second World War—is that the six-country Common Market did not act as a single force.

Reports suggested that in fact there was a strong division between proposals by West Germany and France—the two key members—and that Germany finally had to act on its own.

The view in British quarters is that Pompidou now may be more anxious to obtain the support and friendship of Heath in terms of influencing the Common Market's future and to offset West Germany's economic strength.

West Germany has decided to allow the mark to float. So has The Netherlands while Switzerland decided to revalue its franc by seven per cent. West Germany would like to see the mark rise by no more than 2.5 per cent—a mill minimum which the speculators may see as relatively big. The fact that Switzerland decided on a seven-per-cent rise is seen by some commentators as a sign that the pressures may force the deutschmark to make a similar rise eventually.



Mark Free To Float

BONN (AP) — West Germany took new action today to drive out the flood of U.S. dollars it contends is fuelling inflation. The Bundesbank, West Germany's central bank, restricted interest payments on deposits of foreign currency.

The Bonn government Sunday night in effect revalued the mark upward and devalued the U.S. dollar by setting the mark free to be traded at whatever it would command in the market. Switzerland, Austria and The Netherlands revalued their money or set it free to "float." Britain, France and Italy stood pat.

Spain also made a slight adjustment in the rate on the peseta.

Trading resumed on most of Western Europe's currency markets after being shut down since Wednesday, but dealing was on a small scale as most dealers were still sorting out the implications of the various government actions.

Sunday Sightseers Picnic Above Pit

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que. (CP)—Bright skies and warm weather brought curious onlooker to this nearly deserted village Sunday, while—In neighboring communities memorial services were held for the 31 victims of Tuesday night's massive landslide.

About 200 sightseerers managed to bypass police roadblocks leading to the village Sunday. Many gathered along a ridge overlooking the scene and gazed through binoculars at the yawning chasm that swallowed up 36 homes, a bus and an undetermined number of cars.

Others wandered about the disaster area munching snacks and sipping soft drinks and beer. As kids ran around, the older visitors sauntered in and out of the abandoned homes.

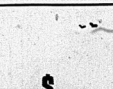
Airplane and helicopter services set up special flights and rates for the occasion. One air service in nearby St. Leonard was charging $6.50 a head for a 25-minute flight over the site; a helicopter service in Joequiere was asking $15 to take sightseers over the pit.

Wanted Man's Body Found After 7 Months

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — The body of Stanley Wilfred Robertson, 40, was found Saturday near this north-central Saskatchewan city, seven months almost to the day after two RCMP officers were slain at his farm home.

Police said the Metis trapper died of a .22-calibre bullet wound in the heart, caused by a rifle like one of three weapons found with his body.

The hunt for Robertson, an experienced woodsman and expert shot, began last Oct. 9 and involved more than 100 police using aircraft and tracking dogs and armored personnel carriers borrowed from the Canadian armed forces.



Robertson disappeared into the bush after the slayings of RCMP Sgt. R. J. Schrader, 41, and Constable D. B. Anson, 30. They had been investigating a domestic dispute.

Crisis Divides Common Mart

LONDON (CP) — The great wave of European currency changes — and the lack of unified action on the revisions — raises questions in Britain whether the Common Maarket has been permanently weakened.

Prof. Nicholas Kaldor, economic adviser to the previous labor administration, says float ing rates would be a good thing for the world.

But it means "the break-up of the Common Market as it exists. It will never be the same. They were going for monetary reform. Instead, all they have now is monetary disintegration."

However, the German float is supposed to be only temporary. The French suggested it should be weeks instead of months—while the Germans hinted it may be months instead of weeks.

The lack of unity on the exchanges can have some immediate impact on the functions of Common Market trade. The farm-support program among the six—France, West Germany, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Luxembourg—are based on fixed currency exchange rates.

The Daily Telegraph suggests that the whole farm program may break down if a unified exchange policy is not reinstated soon.
